AWFUL DAY AT GOLDWYN'S.

Ella, the Extra Girl, Gets into a Jam with Celebrity—and Out Again.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

"Where have I been, dearie? Well, believe you me, I mighta been playing mermaid with McGinty now, and never knew that regular trouper from the Orpheum—but lemme tell you."

Just at that moment, Ella, the extra girl, was painting some soiled white slippers with red watercolors back in the big dressing-room. Later those slippers would be bronze, but she wasn't telling the new girl that. She was pretending she just couldn't dance in new slippers, and that anyway they had to be red to match her new red dress in the next picture.

"If a dame ever got all jazzed up with the Turkish pazaz, dearie, that dame was your little friend Ella, that awful day at Goldwyn's. Why, the minute I lamped that Jane I didn't need no crystal gazer to tell me there was going to be something motivating! She's the kind that makes you feel there's a lot happenning even when there ain't—you know! Somehow I seemed dimly to remember her, only I couldn't remember where. Things woulda been different if I had.

"She came breezing out to the studio, fresh as mountain air and all dressed up like a prize parlor lamp shade. Not really gaudy, you understand—but awful elegant and expensive—not like us bush-leaguer drammer-hounds. I would ha' sleuth-footed and found out the plot after I orbed her duds, only just then Dick got into it! You remember I told you about Dick. Well, although not one of these professional lovers, he's been getting more Romeo every day. 'Till all the girls say it's beginning to look like a regular sketch. Richard Le Garde is the name he's going by on the screen if ever he gets out o' the wardrobe-yessir class. 'That's my kennel name,' he says to me that night out to Vernon, 'but you call me Dick. 'Cause the name they wished on me when they sprinkled me was Richard Jones.' And he hadn't never been to Vernon before, except in his professional capacity, which he tells me in deep confidence and a glass of ginger ale was that of an ice man. But he'd always had a kind of an urge to be inside lookin' out o' the place just for once with some winsome Winnie like me. I confessed I was relieved. I ain't strong for Vernon when I have a regular guy on my staff, and I'm Bolshevik on those regular extras. The ginger ale shows he'd kept away from the corners, and while a ice man has lots of chances to flirt, especially in warm weather with lemonade handed out in every home, still there's something sturdy about the job. At that, he's all to the Francis X. for looks even if having an iceman's past.

"Well, with that glad hope of Dicky in my heart, I waltzes into the studio waiting-room and lamps that queen—and she's talking to him! He was being so polite I wasn't jealous at first. You know you ain't jealous so long as a fella is polite. But next minute I had Othello looking like a kindergarten innocent. Dick didn't see me at all! I heard that Tessie tell him she was going to play an extra in Mabel Normand's picture. And I thought, 'Huh! Well, Lloyd George and the Duke o' China ain't het up about it if you are! It's been done before!'

"Dick took hold o' the new Jane's arm just as clubby and walked her through the sacred portal and beyond, just as I was going to knock up against him and attract his attention. Quick as a flash, I told the man that's hitched to the telephone and who's a friend o' mine that slips it to me when $10 extras is to be needed, that I gotta get in 'cause I had a date to play in Mabel Normand's picture myself. Aw right. I'm in. And over on the set if there ain't Mabel and her director, Christy Cabanne, stopping their toil of making Mabel cry over a dead bird—Mabel says it's easy to chest-heave over a dead doggie, but not over a bird—to listen to that fluffy Flo.

"'Why the intermittent art for this mere extra?' I says to myself. I'd found out if I'd a talked to the other girls. But no, bonehead that I was. I had a fine peeve on, and went round like somebody had bit my dog. And when Dick met me, and told me I looked sweet, I just turned away and said haughtily, 'Never mind the tips!' Then I heard somebody say: 'Oh, she's going to double for Mabel!'

"Now, nobody don't ever double for Mabel. She's the original fear-proof kid, and just as soon pace Shadrach, Meschack and the other guy into the fiery furnace as to eat her dinner. Besides, she told me once that if ever she got so doddering she had to have somebody fall off a 100-foot cliff for her, I was unanimously elected to that job. And here she was throwing off on me! Right there that dazzling Della became as popular with me as the Kaiser at a Fourth of July parade! She tried to be nice to all us girls, but I wouldn't go to lunch at the studio hunger-cure with her and the other girls—kept right on glooming, when I mighta found out she was a facecard. And I got worse and worse. You know how them ingrowing grouches is. All the while Dick paged around after her. He brought her over to Mabel's dressing-room to make up, and he escorted her back to the stage. Oh, he made me sick. I think those attentions look so silly to a full-grown woman that's got her health. My only comfort was he never seemed to pinch her arm nor pay her any of those delicate attentions like that that us girls think so much of.

"Finally we extras all piled into busses and went off to Balboa for some water stuff. And I nearly chewed my lip off when I seen Dick put that woman into a car and drive off with her. There they were when we arrived,—she had a bathing suit on, with a cloak around her, having had a private room at the bath house, and we all set off in a tug for deeper water. When we arrived the director told her to get ready. And she took off her cloak—

"Classy? Well, even if I did use my teeth so hard for gnashing purposes that I didn't expect never to have no more use of 'em to eat with, I must say that if Venus come along just then they'd have scrapped her with the culls! And dive! Say, she could've got up a class of mermaids in diving! I turned my head away from the painful sight. And when I looked up, Dick was diving off the boat to save her!

"Well, even if he was doubling for the hero, that was the last straw on my hump, as the camel said! I was standing on the edge of the boat with the other girls, after we'd done an atmosphere bit, and before I knew it—off I dived! I dunno what made me do it,—nobody knows what makes 'em crazy, I guess. But Dick came through! He dropped that Venus's understudy like she was only a marble statue, and swam after me. Cabanne stood yelling like a Comanche,—and believe you me, Cabanne knows lots of words! Everybody else was awful excited,—they throught I'd fallen off by accident. Only Mabel. She saw through me, and anyhow she knew I could swim. Anyhow, you know Mabel could find a joke in the

MUTT AND JEFF.

MUSICAL COMEDY, PLAYS AND VAUDEVILLE THIS WEEK.

Majestic.

An opportunity for universal rejoicing which invariably attends the announcement of a new Mutt and Jeff play will in all probability be enhanced by the fact that these two renowned personages of cartoon fame are to appear at the Majestic tonight in their latest musical comedy production. On this occasion the locale of their latest exploits and frolics is the Golden West, which should open a valve for endless opportunities for some of the best fun the public has been able to witness in many a day. Critics all over the country have proclaimed the production one of the best that Manager Gus Hill has arranged since he took the pair of popular "Bud" Fisher comics and presented them upon the stage. The company is composed of a select cast. This includes a champion beauty chorus of the prettiest young women gathered in a single offering. The music comprises a dozen song hits.

Orpheum.

Following right on the heels of what all Los Angeles has acclaimed as "the best bill in ages," the Orpheum comes right back for the week beginning Monday, March 10 with another array of talent, without a serious moment, which looks to the wise ones as if it would come close to overshadowing the list now on tap at that theater—which may seem impossible, but "it can be done." Two topliners head the array of merriment. Bert Baker, author, player and star, comes to the fore with a farce of his own production, "Prevarication," which details the philandering of a husband with a virago wife. Opposite him are the two best delineators of Italian life yet seen, Burns and Frabito, who in "Shoes," have a classic. Walter Fenner and company present "Show Me." Clayton Kennedy and Mattie Rooney are of old variety stock, and their ancestors made vaudeville. They are two regulars, and in "The Widowed Pair" they prove their ability and versatility. Charles and Madeline Dunbar have an oddity they call "Animalfunology." The Three Mizuma Japs will present an oriental fantasy of their own sort. Rae Samuels, will remain with some new songs and gowns, and so will the John Robinson elephants—minus both, but clever just the same.

Pantages.

The feature of new week's programme at Pantages will be Odiva and her school of performing Pacific sea lions, an act that has few superiors in vaudeville. They perform their feats in an enormous tank. Raul Pereira and his string quintette is an added attraction. As an artistic treat, Pereira and his quintette fully meet all requirements. Hugo Lutgens, the "Swede Billy Sunday," has an act that is unique and unusually clever. Law-

PHYSICAL EDUCATION IS BOOSTED BY WAR.

QUICKENED APPRECIATION IN ALL NATIONS IS NOTED IN FEDERAL BULLETIN.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—A quickened appreciation in all nations of the value of physical education has resulted from the war, according to Dr. P. P. Claxton, commissioner of the Bureau of Education, and has been evidenced in this country by the enactment of laws in eight States requiring physical training in the public schools.

A bulletin issued by the bureau, summarizing legislation on the subject, notes that in France a strong central committee has been formed to promote physical education, and in England comprehensive provisions have been incorporated in the new education law.

Illinois was the first of the American States to require physical training by statute, passing the law in June, 1915. Since that time New York, New Jersey, Nevada, Rhode Island, California, Maryland and Delaware have enacted similar laws, and six other States, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Ohio and Colorado, have given legislative attention to the subject, but have not acted.

In most States which have considered physical education the initial impulse to action was interest in military preparedness, and took the form of bills for military training of high school boys. Investigation resulted in convincing the legislators, the Bulletin says, that military training for youths was less valuable even as a measure of preparedness than a solid system of physical training. With the exception of Nevada, where the law applies to high schools only, the laws apply to all school children, and the time requirement ranges from one hour each school week to two hours and a half.

Thoughtful Care Should be Given to the Furnishings of the Bed Room

It is not any one piece of furniture which makes a bedroom restful or attractive. It is the tout ensemble, the general harmonious effect, and this can only be accomplished by the skillful and thoughtful carrying out of a carefully conceived plan of treatment.

It does not matter how modest or how magnificent your home, the same principle is involved, and the desired results can be secured only to the degree the principle is applied.

The "California" will be glad to help you to create in your bedroom the environment you idealize. The advisory, helpful co-operation necessary to this end is the service which distinguishes the "California" from the ordinary furniture store. This service adds nothing to the cost. On the contrary, it makes possible most effective results with minimum outlay.

You will find at the "California" most extensive selections in the newest and most desirable types of bedroom furniture priced to meet every requirement. Comparison of values is cordially urged.

Some very unusual productions in bedroom furnishings are shown this week in our windows.

IN THE REALM OF ART.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

Landscapes by William Wendt.

The Ten Painters Club of Los Angeles now being properly launched and become an established institution, with a perpetual but ever-changing exhibition at the Kanst gallery, the next step of the club is a series of one-man shows, every man in the club having at least one chance in the course of the year. William Wendt gives the first show, an arrangement that is quite correct, for he is a landscape painter of national reputation, an Academician and president of the California Art Club.

Nineteen pictures make Wendt's exhibition. They are hung in the smaller of the Kanst exhibition rooms, a place that is cosy and comfortable and well lighted. This little gallery will be used for all the one-man shows of the Ten Painters Club. If its lighting deals as sympathetically and tenderly with all the pictures as it does with William Wendt's, nobody can have a single possible excuse for a "kick"—the painters and the public will be satisfied and happy.

Readers of this department know already what I think of Wendt as a painter of California landscape. They do not need to be reminded that I place him—as they do—on the little list of "best painters." He did not arrive among this exalted group without much hard work. No painter arrives anywhere by accident. William Wendt, hailing from Chicago, "discovered" Southern California something like twenty years ago, brought his discovery to the Art Institute to show it, and immediately made his mark. His point of view was fresh and original, he had already developed a broad and ample technique, and the generous recognition that Chicago gave him on this occasion has been repeated a number of times since then.

The early pictures of California were exceedingly good, but his later pictures have been still better. A close and tireless student of nature, an ardent experimentalist in the difficulties of his craft, he has steadily gained a refinement commensurate with his power, adding the subtleties of tone, the rich seductions of "quality," to the full fluency of his color and the ample masses of his drawing. Therefore, the present carefully chosen exhibition at Kanst's is one of the best he has ever offered us.

As I intimated, an extended review of his pictures is hardly necessary. We all know their superlative merits. Yet I cannot forbear some brief mention of the canvases that pleased me particularly, though there was none that displeased. There can be no two opinions about the large canvas called "Sunny Slopes," those vast hills so wonderfully well modeled, so richly steeped in the gold of California's sunlight, so delicate and yet so big and impressive in effect.

"Where a Spring Lies Hidden" is so different from "Sunny Slopes," and yet so perfect in its way, that this small study of moss-grown rocks in a wood is one of the most delightful things in the show. How cool, moist and shaded the scene is, how beautiful the drawing! "Morning Sunlight" gives us green sloping hills that are dotted with oaks—California's unbelievable winter. "Fields," which vouchsafes us no sky, has summertime's greenish yellow touched with the red of dead weeds; the oaks, full of morning's sunlight, throw cool shadows along the hillsides.

Other pictures that you will like are "Little Tejunga Pass," purpling mountains seen in late afternoon light, an expanse of tawny soil sloping toward the embankment of a stream, the coppery green of bushes showing in a long line—the whole beautifully simple and powerful. "Autumnal Foliage," a stretch of valley, with mountains to the left, the foliage of the valley showing broken reds, yellows and greens. "An Old Rancho," whose glimpses of sky, caught between the branches of towering green sycamores, are like bits of turquoise.

The William Wendt exhibition will remain at the Kanst gallery to the end of this week. An exhibition by Benjamin Chambers Brown follows.

The Print Makers.

The fifth annual exhibition of the Print Makers of California is being held at Exposition Park, March 3 to March 31. A selected group of the Chicago Society of Etchers is also exhibiting in the same gallery, these etchings having been chosen for the Print Makers by Bertha E. Jacques of Chicago. Together, the two groups of prints and etchings make the most notable show of its kind ever held in Los Angeles—and also the most diversified, for our own Print Makers are great experimentalists, working in dry paint, soft ground etching, color etching, wood blocks, etc.

In the Chicago show we have some exquisite things, some that are unique, many that are powerful, not one that is uninteresting. Among the exquisite ones are Frank W. Benson's "Study of Geese," a tiny masterpiece; Helen Hyde's "Red Umbrella," Charles B. Queeler's "Old House in Quimperle," and Maud Squire's "Market Woman." Among the richly simple and beautiful, Ernest D. Roth's "Ca d'Oro;" among the powerful, Roy Partridge's "The Marvelous Mountain" and J. C. Vondrous's "Doorway, Venice." It is, in truth, a notable little collection of American etchings.

The Print Makers of Los Angeles have made great strides. The club has the vigor and daring of youth. Therefore it is succeeding. Benjamin Chambers Brown is its president and sponsor. He began it all—and he is carrying it to a glorious finish, or rather future. Positively, there will be no finish to the Print Makers, even their prints will never be "finished" ones.

The reviewer cannot mention 124 pictures—the task would be something like a life job—so he will touch on a few of those that claimed notice for some unusual quality of line or tone or mass or color. Throughout the exhibition the standard is higher than ever before, and the reader will do well to run out to Exhibition Park to pick out his own.

This interested reader and art lover will like—I hope and believe—Harry Bailey's etching, "Windy Afternoon," a poetic conception; J. J. Barry's soft ground etching, "The Poplars;" Dana Bartlett's strong monotypes; Benjamin Brown's exquisite vignette in color lithography, "Bruges," his "Winter Silence," another lithograph, and his brilliant soft ground etching, "The Red Boat;" Howell Brown's delicate etching, "Old Willows," and the Chinatown studies on firecracker paper; John W. Cotton's powerful color etching, "The Acoma Trail," and his aquatint, "Eucalyptus Trees;" Henri DeKruif's dry points; Harold Doolittle's lithographs, "Smoke and Steam" and "Ramona's Home;" Mrs. G. R. Duncan's "Eucalypti, Evening;" Frances Gearhart's wonderful designs in linoleum prints, especially "High Tide" and "Dusk;" May Gearhart's fresh and charming color in various soft ground etchings, among them "The Laundry" and "Rim of the World."

The same reader and art lover will doubtless linger over Bessie Hazen's fine wood block design, "Arizona Mill;" Frank B. Lemos's block print, "The Ocean Beach;" and he will be attracted by the beauty and simplicity of William S. Rice's little group of wood blocks, all of them notable, "Shadows, Frozen Brook," "Incoming Tide, Monterey," "At Nightfall," "Twilight, East Oakland," and so on.

Marines by Edgar Payne.

For the past few years we have seen occasional marines from the brush of Edgar Payne exhibited in the annual shows and in the downtown galleries. They interested us greatly, for they had power of conception, breadth of treatment, and beauty of color. They showed that Edgar Payne is an artist as well as a painter.

Looking at a small collected group of his pictures, no more than twelve in all, now showing at Exposition Park, where it will remain to March 16, we realize that for Edgar Payne the sea is always singing a tune filled with epic cadences. We know that he is a really big artist, one of the strongest interpreters of the sea that America has produced. And he is still young. Let us record the fact that Southern California and the Pacific have had everything to do with his development for some years—and that these years have culminated in the canvases now on exhibition.

Weight, mass and motion—all these qualities of the sea are in Edgar Payne's pictures. And mystery. And superlative beauty of color. You will find these things, and others besides, in the pictures he is now showing. You will also find the charm of the two or three landscapes scattered among the marines.

Note the beauty of the sunlight in "Rocks and Foam." Study the refinement displayed in the juxtaposition of broken colors in "Choppy Waves," and the tone of the gray that runs through the entire scheme. What splendid power and bigness of effect are displayed in the red mountain wall of "The Rendezvous," what subtle truth in the cool shadowed retreat and the rippling sea. Another important canvas—where none is really unimportant—is called "Angry Waters," the tide swirling and whitening among huge rocks. Perhaps the most beautiful picture is "Deep Sea," which shows us nothing but sky and blue-green waves—a canvas of amazing simplicity.

Among the landscapes are the poetic "Mountains' Mystery," an afterglow touched with grayish lavenders, and "Hilltop Shadows," the finely modeled hill showing greens and purples.

Don't neglect this exhibition by Edgar Payne.

We Go One or Two Better.

Readers of this department will enjoy this letter from Frank S. Daggett, director of the Museum of History, Science and Art, Exposition Park. No editorial comment seems to be needed.

"Willard Huntington Wright's article on 'Jazz and Art in San Francisco,' published in the February 9th issue of The Times, gives some interesting facts in regard to art at San Francisco and points with pride at an attendance of over 3000 during two days of the recent picture exhibition of California artists and speaks of this as a lesson, not only for Los Angeles, but for every other American city.

"If attendance is an indication of culture, I would like to submit the inclosed figures covering the attendance at the Museum of History, Science and Art, which, of course, includes the different art exhibitions during that period. The gallery is open but three hours Sunday afternoon, but you will note that the attendance during those three hours for the first nine months of the year, until closed by influenza, averaged 3420, or, as a matter of comparison, 6840 covering the same period of two days which Mr. Wright speaks of. Indeed, if our attendance dropped down to 3000 for two days it could cause very serious concern. On special occasion, I will mention that the three largest days' attendance has been as follows:

"Twelve thousand, three hundred and thirty-eight; 11,515; 11,083.

"If an attendance of 3000 for two days is a source of great pleasure to San Francisco, I feel certain that we should take some satisfaction in the above figures.

"While these facts are well known in Los Angeles, following the usual dictates of modesty which governs our city in matters likely to arouse the envy of San Francisco, we have heretofore studiously avoided flaunting in the face of our northern friends such striking evidence of culture as these figures show."

Exhibition by Charles P. Gruppe.

An exhibition of seven oils and fourteen water colors by Charles P. Gruppe, one of the best known of New York's painters, will be held in Hotel Maryland, Pasadena, for one week, beginning tomorrow. Figures and landscapes are included. The same pictures will probably be shown in Los Angeles in a few weeks in some prominent gallery. Gruppe is represented in most of the famous private and public collections of America.

THE SUBTLE CHINESE.

There are the Chinese, who remain unknown to us because they live within a rhythm which we do not understand. We speak of the "inscrutable face" of the Chinese; yet the faintest flicker of an eyelid is as expressive among Chinamen as a complete facial contortion among men of an occidental race. Their music we usually, on first hearing, deny to be music at all. We are not hearing what they hear. They make use of enharmonic intervals too subtle for our occidental ears.

Their speech is made of delicate inflections, shaded intonations; their poetry and art reflect them, too. And their philosophy is realmed in such alien spiritual overtones that we call them heathen, and send missionaries to give them a solid base to build upon.—[Fleta Campbell Springer in Harper's.

For the first time in its long history the Dundee Royal Infirmary, in Scotland, has women alone as house physicians and surgeons.

Color in China

Solid all-over colors; wide bands of solid colors, and gaily enameled birds and flowers are the new and popular note in china.

Parmelee-Dohrmann leadership in fine china is indicated by the extensive display of these wonderful new creations.

These are striking solid reds in the famous "Minton" china.

Bright canary yellow in American "Lenox."

Beautiful blues in English "Wedgwood."

Powdered pink and combinations of black and green in the celebrated "Crown Staffordshire."

For parties and all special events, and for the effective setting of the table these new color effects are most impressive and attractive.

Feel free to come in and see and enjoy them.

TO GIVE BALLOT TO WASHINGTON

of Columbia Waging Suffrage Campaign.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.
[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) March 5.—[illegible] hundred-thousand voteless [illegible] have opened a nation-wide campaign to secure representation in Congress and a voice in the making of their own laws. Residents of the District of Columbia have decided to renew their fight for suffrage, and, as the quickest way of gaining the desired end are waging a campaign to enlist the aid and sympathy of their fellow countrymen—carrying the battle to the halls of Congress by way of the people.

"If Bill Hicks of Hickville," the people of Washington argue, "writes his representative in Congress and asks how it happens that in a free country like America 400,000 persons are denied the privileges of citizenship, the aforesaid Congressman, thinking of Bill's vote, is apt to consider the Austin-Chamberlain amendment more carefully than if approached by a voteless Washingtonian."

Believing that the Bill Hickses of the nation are as a rule justice-loving men and have only neglected taking up the fight of their fellow countrymen in the National Capital through ignorance of their plight, the business men of Washington a few months ago printed a postscript on their letterheads in a few lines of red ink, plainly stating the case as it stands and asking their correspondents' aid and sympathy.

EVERYTHING BUT VOTE.

The postscript reads:

"Four hundred thousand residents of the District of Columbia pay Federal taxes, obey Federal laws, go to war to defend the Federal government, but these 400,000 have no presidential vote, no national representation. 'Taxation without representation is tyranny.' Will you help us? If so, write us, and we will tell you how."

Since the postscript first appeared on a Washington business man's letterhead, over 1,000,000 of them have been printed, and have gone out to carry their message to the [illegible] business men throughout the nation receiving the letters. The idea was originated by Joseph [illegible], a Washington business man and a firm believer in the theory that "it pays to advertise." "If you want to change the course of a river, start at the source," Mr. [illegible] argues," if you want to get constitutional amendments, go to the people, the source of [illegible]. We must advertise our cause. We must sell the conviction of the justice of our claims to the [illegible],000 people in the land. Half the people back in the States do not know our condition. Let us advertise the truth and leave the rest to their sense of justice."

OFFERS OF HELP.

The scheme has worked. In answer to the plea, the business men of the city are receiving from every State and section of the union promises of help and requests for information as to how they can best serve the people of Washington in their fight.

"How can we folks in New Haven help you folks in Washington get a chance to vote," was the postscript to a letter received in Washington from a big business house in New Haven, Ct. The answer was a small folder compiled by a Washington newspaper, explaining the amendment introduced in the House by Representative Richard W. Austin of Tennessee on April 28, 1917, and in the Senate by Senator George Chamberlain of Oregon on May [illegible], 1917.

"The amendment," the folder explains, "gives Congress the power to correct the injustice to the District of Columbia without disturbing in the slightest national control of the capital or the present form of municipal government. Congress retains every power that it now possesses. All that is proposed is that the District of Columbia shall become a small fractional part of that [illegible], and politically an integral part of the nation which that [illegible] represents."

The amendment contains the following provisions:

"That Congress shall have power to admit to the status of citizens of [illegible] the residents of the district constituting the seat of the government of the United States."

FOR CONGRESSMEN.

"The residents of the District shall be entitled to elect one or two [illegible] as determined by Congress, Representatives in the House, according to their number as determined by the decennial enumeration, and Presidential electors equal to their aggregate number of Representatives in the House and Senate.

"That Congress shall provide by law the qualifications of voters and the time and manner of choosing the Representatives in Congress.

"That Congress shall have power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers."

It is pointed out that the reasons given by members of the Constitutional Convention for denying the seat of government of the rights of citizenship are no longer applicable, and that the city has grown to proportions undreamed of by our forefathers.

"The city," the folder declares, "has over three times the average number of inhabitants of the colonies prior to the Revolutionary War. If the District of Columbia had been organized at the time of the adoption of the Constitution as it is now it would have been the most populous political body of them all, and would have demanded and received full representation in Congress."

Civic bodies and citizens' committees and associations of the national capital have unanimously indorsed Mr. Kaufman's scheme of enlisting those outside the city in the fight of suffrage for the District of Columbia.

LETTERHEADS.

At present the majority of the business houses of Washington carry "Votes for the District" at the close of all of their business correspondence. Advocates of the scheme believe that before long every letter

This Store is said by many to be, the Most Beautiful Women's Apparel Store in America

But the Main Attractions are in the Lovely Styles at Very Moderate Prices

—We do not wish anyone to think that because the store is fine and cost so many thousands of dollars to build that the styles we sell are necessarily expensive. We buy at the lowest possible prices and sell at only a reasonable profit.

—This store is first and last a useful, comfortable store, where people may enter, try on garments, ask questions and never stay too long.

More Splendid New Box Coat Suits

$35, $37.50 and $39.75

—Nobody need raise any question as to whether box coat suits are going to be "good" this season. They have already taken their place alongside tailored suits in popularity, and our New York City representative reports that more are being shown by the makers each day.

—The materials are Poiret twill, tricotine, serge, gabardine, hairline stripes and novelty worsted checks in different sizes.

—Nearly all of them have panel vestees of either Tokio silk, pongee, Shantung or white gabardine. They certainly give a picturesque touch to a suit.

The Bright Side of Sunshine Land---People and Their Doings---A Hundred or More Happy Affairs

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

By Mr. and Mrs. Anderson.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Anderson, of 4300 Victoria Park drive, were hosts at a buffet supper dance, at the Jonathan Club, Thursday evening, at which they assembled 120 guests to greet their son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. Lee Schlessinger (Laura Anderson,) who stopped here en route from New York to their home in San Francisco. The affair was the most pretentious dancing party of the month, and afforded the former Laura Anderson opportunity to introduce her distinguished-looking young husband to her Los Angeles friends.

Their wedding was a war romance of a year and a half ago, Capt. Schlessinger leaving for France immediately after the ceremony, which took place in San Francisco. Capt. Schlessinger distinguished himself several times on foreign battlefields, and is one of the youngest captains of the army. He and Mrs. Schlessinger, who visited in New York while waiting to meet him there, left yesterday for San Francisco, which is to be their home.

Mrs. Schlessinger, who has always been considered one of the most beautiful girls in Los Angeles, looked exquisite in a French blue gown of chiffon velvet. Miss Eleanor Anderson wore a dancing frock of flesh-colored silk net, combined with the silk that formed the train of Mrs. Anderson's gown when, as a girl, she was presented at Queen Victoria's court. Miss Virginia Anderson wore sapphire blue satin, combined with chiffon of the same color, embroidered in gold.

By Mrs. Harbeson.

Mrs. Frederick Funston, widow of the late Gen. Funston, was honor guest at a luncheon, at which Mrs. Frank O. F. Harbeson, of 3917 West Adams street, entertained on Thursday. Mrs. Lucille Janeway Monnette, who has just returned from an extended eastern trip, shared honors with Mrs. Funston, as did Mrs. Mathew Houston of Ashland, Ky., a house guest of Mrs. Harbeson.

The table was beautifully decorated with yellow blooms, and places were indicated for Mrs. Granville MacGowan, Mrs. A. J. Salisbury, Mrs. C. Q. Stanton, Mrs. Blaisdel, Mrs. Melvin Hudson, Miss Ada Hudson, Mrs. Daisy Landsdowne Ofenton, Mrs. Louis Allen, Mrs. Funston, Mrs. Monnette and Mrs. Houston.

Mrs. Funston, whose oldest son is here at the Harvard Military Academy, is a guest of Mrs. Louis Allen of Fifth avenue. She is returning to her home in San Francisco tomorrow. Mrs. Ofenton is Mrs. Harbeson's mother and is here from Kentucky.

Mrs. Rex Beach Honored.

Mrs. Rex Beach of New York was an interesting honoree at a luncheon, given Friday, by Mrs. A. J. Salisbury at the Mary Louise Tea Room. The table was set in a private tea room, and the table decorated with a basket of jonquils and violets, corsage bouquets of the same flowers being at each plate. Seated around the board were Mrs. Beach, Mrs. Stoddard Jess, Mrs. Oscar M. Souden, Mrs. Charles Anthony, Mrs. Mary Strohn, Mrs. E. S. Riley, Mrs. S. K. Lindly, Mrs. Eleanore McAnly, Mrs. Thomas Ridgeway, Mrs. Howard Salisbury, Mrs. W. S. Hook, Mrs. Willits J. Hole, Mrs. J. H. Miles, Mrs. Roy Wilcox, Mrs. T. W. Phillips, Mrs. W. S. Hook, Jr., and Mrs. Owen Churchill. Following luncheon, Mrs. Salisbury assembled her guests at the Orpheum. Mrs. Beach, who is here for the winter, with her husband, the famous author, is a guest at the Beverly Hills Hotel. The Beaches have a handsome home on the Hudson in New York. Since coming here she has been ill, and had to decline all courtesies, until that extended by Mrs. Salisbury.

Music-Reception.

Mrs. F. W. Enderly was hostess at a music-reception on Thursday evening, given in the ballroom of the Bryson in compliment to Mme. Helena Bingham Burton, the song writer, and Mrs. Carolina Hall, who is to leave for New York next month to coach for grand opera.

The decorations were in peach blossoms and purple fleur de lis. Mrs. Hall illustrated some of Mrs. Burton's songs and sang a group of other songs, accompanied by her teacher, Mme. A. H. Sprotte. Mrs. Enderly read from Omar Khayam's Rubyiat, playing accompaniments on her harp.

Assisting her in receiving were Mr. and Mrs. George Rector, Miss Wilhelmina Rector, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Steinfeldt, Mrs. Gertrude Hageman, Mrs. Adolph Hoppe, Mrs. Alex Benjamin, Mrs. Le Roy Jones, Mrs. Blanche Pomeroy, Miss Margarita Schneider, Miss Melany Randall, Miss Mildred Haynes, Miss May Schlueter and Mrs. Carrie Bernard.

For Countess de Brazzia.

Countess de Brazzia of Spain, who visited here while on route to New York on her tour of the world, was the interesting motif for the luncheon at which Mrs. Henry Schatzel of 1827 North Winona boulevard, Hollywood, entertained last Monday. Plates were arranged for forty guests about a board handsomely decorated with rare flowers, orchids predominating. Countess de Brazzia has just arrived in America after a lengthy tour of the Orient with her son.

Training Station at the harbor, by Father Raley. This marked the first and may be the only wedding to take place in the chapel. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. T. C. Bunch of the Huntley apartments. She wore a frock of sand-colored cloth. The couple left for Catalina Island to spend their honeymoon and will be at home at the Huntley until he has his discharge from the navy, after which they will reside in San Francisco.

Supper Dance.

Miss Phyllis Warde, grand-daughter of Frederick Warde, now playing the leading role in the "Mission Play," gave a charming supper dance Friday evening at the Hotel Alvarado. On Broadway — Jacoby Bros. — Between 3rd and 4th

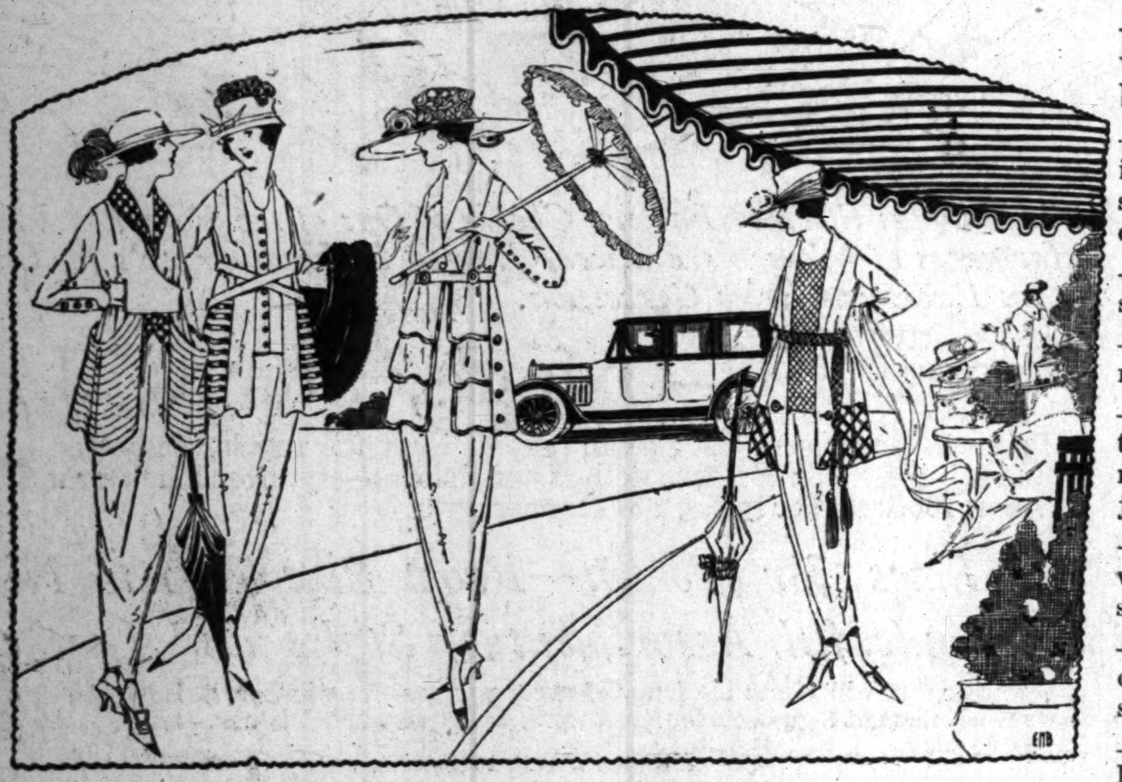
Better than sale news is the word that

The new SUITS are DIFFERENT!



—A few seasons past the writer heard a woman say—"Oh! I suppose I'll have to buy a suit"— —The lack of enthusiasm was noticeable even in the shrug of her pretty shoulders, and it was so conspicuous because she had expressed such delight over the frocks and blouses and coats—

—But, as we said, that was in the past, when suits were just suits!

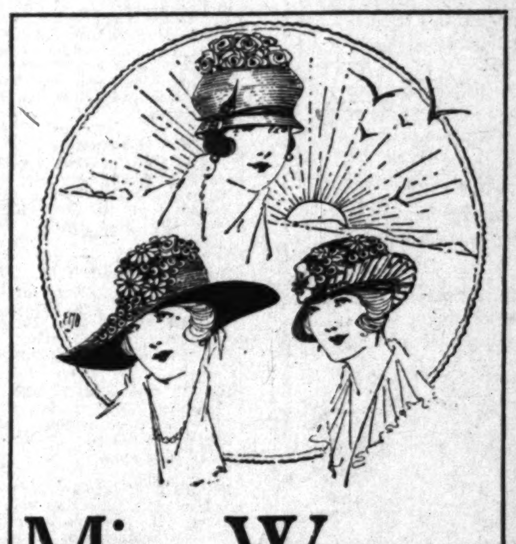
—Now—suits are not suits—if by "suits" one means just a jacket and a skirt——And words are not easily found to tell what these new suits are! The writer hesitates to mention jackets for fear the reader will picture jackets as they have been—

—And "skirts," described as long and narrow, would convey no idea of what to expect in these suit skirts!

—Who could picture one of the novelty vestees even with a whole page of description? And so there'll be no description!

—Until you come and see the suits themselves—let the sketches at the left be their proxies!—
Third Floor—Jacoby's.



Miss W----

—keeps us in a continual state of wonderment and admiration!

—With all the boxes and boxes of hats which she sends us every day—we have yet to find one that is commonplace or ordinary—

—Many of them would be an inspiration to a poet or a painter!

—Late last week came some wonderful models ladened down with exquisite flowers and foliage that seem to have caught the glow of the setting sun—in fact, someone has happily called them SUNSET HATS!

—Note the pictures!

FILM STAR COMES BACK.

JACKIE SAUNDERS PREPARES TO RETURN TO SCREEN.

"Where is Jackie Saunders?"

During the past year this question has been asked of every photoplay editor in the world, but not one has been able to answer it correctly. The retirement of the little star was an unsolved mystery in fandom until the other day, when it was announced that Miss Saunders would return, and that her coming back would be signalized by the release, through the William Sherry Service, of "Jackie, the Hoyden," a comedy drama, by the late Lee Arthur.

But, why the disappearance of Jackie?

Oh, just a ten-pound girl—that's all. Jacqueline, Jr., is a year old now, and a living, breathing image of her lovely mamma, who in private life, of course, is Mrs. E. D. Horkheimer, and who is a blooming beauty, these days.

Plans are under way for the formation of Miss Saunders's own company, but in the meantime she takes care of her rose garden, entertains her friends at tea, and takes care of her baby, whose nurse has been dismissed.

"How does it seem to be mother of a big girl like that?" asked a visitor of Jackie Saunders, as she watched the little lady put her baby to bed.

"Well, if you mean to ask if it seems strange, I must tell you that it doesn't. I feel as though I had always been a mother, and at heart I have been, ever since I first saw a doll.

"Shall I go in for serious roles when I return to the screen? Not a bit of it! I shall continue to comedy as long as the public will let me."

MARIE WALCAMP GIVES STRAY DOGS A HOME.

In common with many people, Marie Walcamp, golden-haired star of the Universal serial, "The Red Glove," is fond of animals, especially dogs and cats.

But Miss Walcamp has gone further with this fondness than do most, who are not half so busy as she. Last week she founded a home for homeless dogs, a home from which none is turned away, regardless of birth, breeding or previous condition of servitude. And her partner in the enterprise is none other than the redoubtable Curley Stecker, lion tamer of the Universal zoo.

The home is out at Universal zoo, near the mountains, and there is an attractive park, with running stream, pool, shrubs and foliage, and plenty of sunshine. It is fenced in and covers a full acre, and is called the Marie Walcamp Home for Stray Dogs. At present there are fifteen inmates of the home, and an old dog fancier takes care of them.

WILL ROGERS HAS THREE GREAT PLAYS.

Samuel Goldwyn does not intend to be caught napping when Will Rogers, the famed wit and gum-chewing genius of the Ziegfeld "Follies," reports for work at Culver City, the first week in June. Evidence of Goldwyn's forehandedness is found in the purchase of two stories in which Will Rogers will be starred, viz., "Aleck Lloyd," by Eleanor Gates, author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl" and other plays, and "Overland Red," a novel by H. H. Knibbs. In addition a very famous play has been purchased for still another Will Rogers production, though no announcement is as yet made of its author or title. The play is one of the most famous vehicles for a male star in the recent history of the theater.

At the end of the "Follies" season, Mr. Rogers, together with Mrs. Rogers and four Rogers children, will pack up their belongings and close their Long Island home preliminary to their departure for California. It is not generally known that Will Rogers is not becoming a mere summer season screen star. He is under a long contract with Goldwyn and his entry into pictures means his retirement from the therence "Noodles," Fagan and Elsie, have an act that is totally dissimilar from all others. They present "impromptu idiosyncracies of 1919" with a running fire of natural comedy. The three Tybell Sisters present a thrilling aerial act. William Duncan, with Edith Johnson, Joe Ryan and company, appear in the third episode of the new Vitagraph serial, "A Man of Might."

COMING EVENTS ON THE STAGE.

Clune's Auditorium.

The chances are that Will King has never been up in an airplane, but for the amusement of his thousands he is going to present his latest musical comedy success, "The High Flyers," at Clune's Auditorium. Will King's great task today is in trying to furnish to the thousands of sorrowful and depressed people laughs and happy thoughts that will make them forget their troubles and it must be said that during the past five weeks he has succeeded wonderfully well. Laughs and plenty of them is what the public derives from King and Lew Dunbar. The big vaudeville show for next week is exceptionally good and contains many acts that have shown in other cities at much higher prices. Among the acts are Princess Olga and her trained leopards. Le Dora and Beckman in "A Little Bit of Everything," have a great trapeze act. The Clemenso Brothers, a rollicking pair of French eccentriques and novelty musical artists, have just arrived in this country from Europe and will be seen at the Auditorium for the first time. Timothy and Mariam, in "Bright Bits of Mirth and Melody" and "The Three Killarney Girls," with Hal and Frances, end the bill.

Hippodrome.

Bert Lytell, the big favorite with Hippodrome patrons, will be the attraction at that popular playhouse starting today for three short days in "Faith," a story that possesses every element of human appeal and has been handled in a higly original manner by the director. The picture itself is thrilling and gripping and gives Lytell a chance to show his true merits as an actor. Sidney Taylor and company are announced as the headliners of the vaudeville bill in their bright and pleasing comedy sketch, "A Thousand Dollars." Taylor and Howard, in "A Sidewalk Conversation" will undoubtedly be the laughing hit of the show, while Charles McNaughton will crowd them close with his songs and stories. The Renella Duo offers a little of this and a little of that, and McMahon and Wheeler have a novelty presentation, "Willie Balance." The Dundine Troupe of acrobats and the Pathe News round out the show.

Burbank.

Rattling good vaudeville numbers and a film featuring Virginia Pearson will be on the tapis of the Burbank during the ensuing week, Managers Hopkins and Elmer aver they have a programme of events that will surpass all recent offerings in their especial line. "The Love Auction," is the vehicle that will be screened to show the beauty and versatility of Miss Pearson. Musical Wheeler and the Milano Duo, noted instrumentalists have genuinely artistic numbers. The comedy conveyors will be Mariam Mahr, who sings and talks, and Equillo and Maybelle, who are the originators of "silence and fun." Travelogue, news events and a Harold Lloyd comedy will finish off the programme.

Morosco.

Sold out at practically every performance is still the rule at the Morosco, where "Yes or No" has become a habit. This remarkable production will begin its eighth consecutive week with today's matinee. Beginning its eighth week, "Yes or No" will have passed its seventieth performance. It is estimated that more than 110,000 persons have already witnessed this production. Immediately following "Yes or No" will be a production of the Hatton success, "The Walkoffs." It is now in rehearsal. In "Yes or No" David Butler is back in the cast after an absence of a week. The cast is headed by Florence Malone, Charles Meredith and Marion Vantine, while the entire strength of the Morosco forces and numerous extras are in it.

Trinity Auditorium.

All the students of nature, not only children, but grown-ups, will welcome the return of Ernest Thompson Seton to the platform in Los Angeles, when he speaks next Friday evening, March 14, on the subject of animal heroes and the personality of wild animals. There is a great deal of humor in these stories, and Mr. Seton always introduces his hearers to the funny side. He also shows the great tragedy of animal life. In addition, Mr. Seton has a word to say on the natural history of the [illegible]mmandments, showing that [illegible] not arbitrary laws given [illegible] the fundamental laws of [illegible]ion. Special prices are being [illegible]d for school children and [illegible] Boy Scouts and all studen[illegible] in private and public schools.

Mason.

Seldom is it given to an individual to creat so much talk among the theater-goers of any community as has Alexander, "The Man Who Knows," during the first week of his engagement at the Mason. The man of mystery has perhaps become the most discussed single entertainer who has ever visited Los Angeles, for he has answered hundreds and hundreds of questions, covering nearly every subject, and written in nearly every known language. Capacity houses have been the rule at the Broadway playhouse, and the keen interest manifested would seem to presage a repetition of this business for the second and last week of his engagement, which will start tonight.

Mission Play.

The proverbial saying, that a great man or work is never appreciated in the home town, is not proving true with the "Mission Play," California's pageant-drama written by the Southland's beloved historian and poet, John Steven McGroarty. The "Mission Play," which goes into its fifth week Monday, is daily more firmly verifying the assertion, often made, that it is the classic of the century. During the past week the Mission Playhouse at San Gabriel has filled to capacity at each performance, not only with hundreds of visitors from afar, but also with hundreds of members of large local organizations who attended the evening performances.

POOR OLD CHICAGO!

Kansas City has known and suffered from rotten politics. It has undergone humiliation and exasperation from the bosses and the men they have put in office. On occasions it has been ready to tear its hair over public rights given away, public service neglected, public decency flaunted.

But it has to admit that its politics is surmounted by a halo in comparison with Chicago, which, after four years of Mayor Thompson, has just given him a triumphant renomination.—[Kansas City Star.

SCREEN.

"MICKEY" AT LAST!

AND MANY OTHER ATTRACTIVE NEW PHOTOPLAYS.

Kinema.

That the arrival of "Mickey" at the Kinema today will be the biggest screen event in town can hardly be disputed. This famous Mack Sennett fun production has been on its way to local motion-picture fans for some time, and its Los Angeles premiere is to be one of the most memorable of film exhibitions. The delightful commedienne, Mabel Normand, who plays the role of the little girl Mickey, is seen in her finest comedy characterization. Being essentially a blending of every human emotion, yet a comedy of rare and gentle humor and pathos, this widely-known picture is filled with many wonderful thrills and an element of many surprising developments. There can be no doubt that "Mickey" is one of the most lovable characters the screen has ever seen. The seven big reels are filled with sparkling fun and frolic, with not a dull moment in sight.

California.

Tomorrow the California will offer George Beban's own production, "Hearts of Men," for its initial showing in the entire world. Here is one of those homely human interest Italian stories for which Mr. Beban is world famous. It is certain to appeal strongly to all lovers of clean-cut, incisive pictures, for it has all the thrills of a high-class melodrama, and yet a new appeal of gripping heart interest—the sort that keeps you laughing and at the same time can grip you and make you hold your seat with breathless expectancy. "Hearts of Men" was produced by Mr. Beban himself with his own money, for this "artist with a soul" believes he knows the people's wants and is trying to satisfy them without being hampered by the demands of some one else because that "someone" is furnishing the finances. On Monday evening Mr. Beban is to appear in person, and as he is a famous vaudeville headliner his personal appearance alone should be an evening's entertainment.

Superba.

Mae Murray, the bewitching little star of the stage and silent drama, comes to the Superba today for a week in "The Scarlet Shadow" as Elena Evans, a little country girl guarded by a maiden aunt, who, because of a supposed "scarlet shadow" in the life of the girl's dead mother, considered Elena ill-fitted to face the temptations of the world. In addition to the Mae Murray photoplay, the Superba will present Universal Weekly and a comedy. Benjamin Laietsky, the well-known orchestra conductor, and his orchestra will furnish the musical interpretation of the photoplays.

Grauman's.

"Paid in Full," one of the strongest of all stage productions, which had the most phenomenal run on Broadway, New York, making stage history in 1907, has been adapted to the screen and will be thrown on the silver sheet at Grauman's tomorrow, playing for one week. The play, which proved so enormously successful is from the versatile pen of Eugene Walter, and the script is by Charles E. Whitaker. An all-star cast has been afforded the screen production, including Pauline Frederick, Robert Cain, Wyndham Standing and Frank Losee. Miss Frederick has the role of the patient wife of a shiftless clerk, whose nonprogressiveness keeps her in constant poverty. When he commits a theft the husband does not hesitate to send his wife to the man he has despoiled. Grauman's will offer, in conjunction with this especial screen offering eight additional parts of the distinctive Grauman type.

HOLLYWOOD PLAYERS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

The Hollywood Community Theater has a way about it—or is it the director, Neely Dickson, who has the way? For not otherwise can you account for the attractions which this little theater persists in presenting to its dazzled audiences. Last month the Community Theater managed to grab off the two new J. M. Barrie plays—got 'em from Sir James himself direct, and packed the theater for two weeks with an attendance of 2400.

This month, week of March 17-22, just to show that that was no particular pace to set for itself, the Community Theater beguiles none other than Henry B. Walthall, the beloved "little colonel" of "The Clansman," t oplay the title role of that wonderful drama of old Japan, "Matsuo," a poetic play which for 175 years has reigned supreme as the pre-eminent literary masterpiece of Nippon.

And that isn't all. William C. De-Mille's new farce comedy, "Deceivers," is to given its premiere with an all-star cast from the Lasky studio, Mayme, Kelso, Raymond Hatton and Clarence H. Geldart. There are to be two other one act plays also, titles and casts of be announced later. All in all, what might truthfully be called one whole evening's entertainment. Incidentally, the price has ben raised to $1, but who cares for that—it should have been done long ago.

"Matsuo" is best known in this country by the title "Bushido," because, for some reason or other, that was the title chosen by the Washington Square Players when they presented it for 100 successive nights—the longest run ever given a one act play in New York City. But the Hollywood Community Theater goes back to the Japanese title, and in everything else is going to conform in the smallest detail with Japanese traditional stage business, conventions, and literary and historical accuracy. To this end, Mr. Aoyama, secretary of the Japanese Photoplayers Association, and himself an actor who has often played in "Mastuo" in Japan, is assisting to make every detail correct. In Japan Matsuo is never played in other than the costumes, wigs and make-up that have become traditional for these characters. The only set of "Matsuo" costumes known to be in America are in Sacramento and have been procured for the Community Theater for this production.

The scene is laid in a schoolroom; and Japanese schoolboys, in no way related to Wallace Irwin's Hashimura Togo, bear an important part in the action of the play, said action being one of the most sublime self-sacrifices which can be found in literature or drama. There are seventeen in the cast, which, let it be repeated, is headed by Henry Walthall. If the rest of the cast plays anywhere near up to Mr. Walthall, the production ought to be worth a day's pay, not to mention a mere dollar, to witness.

The box office opens to season ticket holders on the 12th, to the general public on the 14th. Tickets may be reserved by mail or telephone, but are not returnable, this privilege having been greatly abused in the past; the box office will, however, endeavor to resell at owners' risk. Six performances, week of March 17-22, at 8:30.

NEW PICTURES ON THE SCREEN.

screen title given the play, which is a story of heart-throbs and mother love. The charm and pathos of the stage play are faithfully preserved in the screen version, while realistically and scenically the production surpasses the stage play. The night scenes in Japan, particularly the thrilling chase of the convict woman after her escape from prison, are weirdly beautiful. Many of the scenes were actually taken in Japan. There are a number of Japanese children who are delightfully unselfconscious and naive, and a group of genuine Geisha girls who dance in the tea-house scene.

Symphony.

Rex Beach's latest screen sensation titled "To Fat to Fight," will be given its first showing in Los Angeles at the Symphony during the coming week, starting this Sunday. It is the story of a "perfect 76," who made people love him even though he was fat, and is said to contain more comedy than "Laughing Bill Hyde," and more heart interest than the long-to-be-remembered "The Spoilers." A number of those human-interest touches that only Rex Beach knows how to instill into a photodrama are said to abound in "To Fat to Fight," while a series of long laughs are also in store for those who see the film. Added attractions on the new Symphony bill will be a comedy scream and the latest Pathe News Weekly.

Ray's Garden.

When Thomas Dixon wrote "The Birth of a Nation," he did not rest on his laurels. It was a tremendous success and swept the country by storm. That is just what inspired Mr. Thomas to write another world beater, and he did. He named it "The One Woman." The book sold over two million copies. "The One Woman" has been made into a photoplay and directed by Reginald Barker, starring Miss Clara Williams in the leading role. Ray's Garden has secured this famous play, and it opens there Sunday for a limited engagement. In the sterling cast you will find, besides Clara Williams, Lawson Butt, the English actor, Adda Gleason, who is now playing a part at the Morosco in "Yes or No," Thurston Hall, Hershal Mayall and Little Ben Alexander.

Tally's.

Coming to Tally's tomorrow is a picture with a story daring in theme, and yet uplifting, "The Sin of the World," which, by the way, brings forth a bewitching new star. Edward Coxen plays the male lead and does the most striking work of his career. A fight scene is always appreciated by the audience, and in this picture there is one the reality of which actually placed its principals in the hospital. The picture is full of tense action, dramatic situations and comedy relief, and will give the public a chance to judge a new photoplay luminary.

Alhambra.

Starting at the Alhambra today and coming with a reputation of being by far the most powerful offering that has ever fallen to Dustin Farnum's lot, and affording a special attraction by its magnitude, thrilling story, talented acting and unique photography, "A Man in the Open" is assured of large and welcoming audience. This powerful romance of the big Northwest is closely based on the thrilling novel of the same title by Roger Pocock and, as its name indicates, is staged largely in the great outdoors. Mr. Farnum will be seen in the role of Sailor Jesse, wrecked on an ocean voyage and adopted into the comradeship of rugged landsmen. Then follow his startling adventures in the great forests and mountains where he lives as a man in the open.

Victory.

"The Lion and the Mouse," the latest Vitagraph production, from drama by Charles Klein, is the offering for the current week. As a stage play it set the whole country talking; picturized, it actually gains in dramatic intensity. The star, Alice Joyce, does the best work of her career, and the supporting cast and settings are in keeping with the elaborate subject. This picture has just completed a record-breaking engagement at the Rialto Theater in New York City. There are several short subjects, and the Victory Symphony Orchestra is another innovation which is sure to meet with popular approval.

Palace.

"Little Miss Hoover," with Marguerite Clark in the stellar role and Eugene O'Brien as leading man, will be the feature attraction at the Palace this week. This charming play is probably the best vehicle Miss Clark has had for a long time, and it has been enthusiastically received wherever shown. The story is of a young society girl who becomes a farmerette to help Uncle Sam win the war and incidentally recoup the family fortunes. A charming love story is woven into the play, and the interest is sustained to the end. Sharing the honors with the feature is Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle in his recent Paramount success, "Camping Out." The latest Christie comedy, "Salvation Sue," and other interesting short subjects are also on the bill.

Garrick.

Geraldine Farrar, as Carmen of the Plains, in "The Hell Cat," a tale of the west written by Willard Mack, the well-known playwright, will be the featured star at the Garrick this coming week. The screen has given us "Carmen of the Klondike" and just ordinary "Carmen," and now Miss Farrar interprets a role of a reckless, easy-go-lucky Carmen of the Plains in this more than ordinary production, which has won the praises of both press and public in every city where it has been shown. "The Hell Cat" is described as being a fast-moving western melodrama with a number of new situations of the sort that has made Willard Mack famous as a writer of short stories.

De Luxe.

D. W. Griffith's great story of victory, "The Greatest Thing in Life," is the big feature film being shown at the De Luxe today and tomorrow. Ranking among the very foremost of American motion-picture producers, Mr. Griffith has produced numerous screen classics, which stand as examples of the best the cinema art has thus far presented to the world. In "The Greatest Thing in Life" all the qualities of production, which have made this director famous are richly in evidence. The author of "The Greatest Thing in Life" is Capt. Victor Marier, writer and soldier of reputation.

Quinn's Rialto.

Because of its pronounced success, "What Every Mother Knows," will be shown for its second and last week at Quinn's Rialto, starting today. That little Gloria Joy is accepted as an established favorite goes without saying. A remarkable child, who seems to intuitively realize the complicated part she is playing, she is gifted with the power of wonderful facial expression and has a magnetism that few possess. She will appear in person all the week each day at the 4, 7:30 and 9 o'clock performances in a clever character specialty arranged for her by her director, Sherrwood MacDonald.

AT CUMNOCK HALL.

Charles Wakefield Cadman, assisted by Mme. Budrow, will appear in a piano and song recital at Cumnock Hall, 200 South Vermont avenue, Wednesday, March 12, at 10:15 a.m. The programme will include Spanish and Mexican songs, as well as selections from the opera "Shanewis." Mr. Cadman will play, for the first time in public, parts from his new opera, "The Garden of Mystery." This is the third programme of the Cumnock School's artists' course of the season.

GUILBERT TO COME IN APRIL

Yvette Guilbert, that delightful interpreter of the Franch people, will be heard in two new song programmes at Trinity Auditorium, April 10 and 12. Attention is directed to the change in dates, which were originally announced for March 27 and 29.

May Peterson, Trinity Auditorium, Tuesday evening, March 11.

MUSICAL.

THE ENTENTE GROWS.

SYMPHONY RECORDS SHOW INCREASE IN INTEREST.

By Jeanne Redman.

No greater proof of the fact that music is an essential of modern life could be shown than Los Angeles has seen in the past two months. The last musical season closed in May, 1918. Then came the usual vacation, so far as concerts are concerned, lasting until October. And when the new season was about to take on life, "a killing frost" struck the country in the shape of the influenza epidemic. The hiatus in musical affairs lasted until the holidays, and there are three weeks at that time of year that are off the calendar, so far as concerts are concerned. Then it took about three weeks more to get the concert machine grinding again. So Los Angeles practically went musicless to bed for seven months or more.

But when the city awoke and donned her musical garments again, she arrayed herself like Solomon in all his glory. Beginning with the concert of the Paris Orchestra, and continuing down to that of our own orchestra, last Friday, the record of attendance has been a continual crescendo. When one comes to the record of our symphony orchestra, we have reason to be proud of the audiences that have greeted it this season. When the concerts were given at Trinity, several years ago, too many of the concerts saw attendance of from 800 to 1100 persons. This year the attendance has ranged from 2200 to 2500 persons.

All this goes to prove three things; that the educated portion of the public has felt the pangs of musical starvation and now is intent upon getting a full meal; that the worth of the Symphony Orchestra grows, and that it meets public approval.

MAY PETERSON, YOUNG AMERICAN SOPRANO.

Miss May Peterson, the young prima donna who will be heard here at Trinity Auditorium on next Tuesday evening, was known to American audiences mainly by echo from abroad until last year, when she has been duplicating her great European successes. Since the triumph which accompanied her debut in the operatic realm in Paris she has been widely discussed on both sides of the Atlantic.

Miss Peterson is another artist who has blown into fame on the wings of a western breeze. She was born and spent her childhood days in the town of Oshkosh, on the shore of Lake Winnebago, Wisconsin. She has been a musician from the days of her earliest recollection. Her father, a Methodist minister, spent his summers traveling from one small town to another, holding services in a tent, and little May, since she was 7 years old, accompanied him, playing the organ and singing solos in connection with these services. When still a mere girl she had charge of the church pipe organ, sang solos directed the choir, organized choruses and did much private teaching.

Later, for a broader field, the young musician went to Chicago, where she assumed a church choir position, while pursuing studies under William Nelson Burritt. Besides this she taught and also sang at concerts and entertainments in Chicago and throughout the Middle West. After a few years, success in Chicago enabled her to venture upon the ambition of her life—study in Europe. Accordingly she went to Florence, Italy, where she was trained in Italian music. From there she went to Berlin for a command of German and still further vocal development.

It was Paris, however, the last place planned by the young artist in which to complete her European education, that proved the great turning point in her career. Here she came under the guidance of Jean de Reszke, who immediately realized the possibilities of her voice.

Shortly afterward she made her debut in the title role of "Manon" during the Massenet festival week at Vichy, scoring an instantaneous success and exciting much comment from the French critics. This led to many appearances in the provinces of France, notably at Lille, Bordeaux, Lyons, Marseilles, etc., in such roles as Lakme, Manon, Traviata and La Vie de Boheme. Then came her crowning triumph in Paris at the Opera Comique, the most famous of all lyric stages in Europe. Here the young American artist scored an even greater triumph than in the other cities, receiving an ovation from an audience which filled to overflowing this famous French operahouse.

Her concert, Tuesday evening, will be the only one in this city. The programme numbers follow: "Nina" (attributed to Pergolesi;) "Warning" (Mozart;) "Rose Softly Blooming" (Spohr;) "Allelujah," "Air from Exsultate" (Mozart;) "Contemplation" (Widor;) "Le Papillon" (Fourdrain;) "Crepuscule" (Massenet;) "La Gavotte," "Air de Manon" (Massenet;) "Songs My Mother Taught Me" (Dvorak;) "El Majo Discreto" (Granados;) "Deep in Love was I" (Rachmaninoff;) "Three Cavaliers" (Dargiomijsky;) "Just Before the Lights are Lit" (Branscombe;) "Snowflakes" (Mallinson;) "I'm Wearin' Awa', Jean" (Old Scotch;) "De Ol' Ark's a Moverin" (Negro Spiritual, by Guion;) "The Open Road" (Gertrude Ross.)

TAMAKI MURA REAPS A BIG NEW SUCCESS.

Tamaki Miura, the Japanese prima donna, who was heard here first three years ago with the Boston National Grand Opera Company, has had a triumph in New York, the Mecca of all operatic stars, and the shoal on which many of them die. She is singing there with the Chicago Opera Company and has received an ovation with her every appearance in "Madame Butterfly," a role she has made peculiarly her own. No artist, whether it be Geraldine Farrar, Emmy Destin or Maggie Teyte, has received the extraordinary praise from the critics that this petite star has, or has more endeared themselves to the public. Her five performances were entirely sold out.

She leaves for the Pacific Coast immediately at the close of the Chicago season, bringing her own company to the Mason Operahouse for one week's engagement, opening March 31. In addition to two performances of "Mme. Butterfly," five performances of "The Geisha," in English, will be sung. Single admissions to the Miura performances when she was here last time were from $5 down. This time Manager Behymer announces that the top price will be $2. Mail orders are now being received at the Mason Operahouse.

JOSEF BONNET TO PLAY ON AUDITORIUM ORGAN.

Joseph Bonnet, the internationally-famous French organist, will be heard in recital at Temple Auditorium next Sunday afternoon, March 16. This distinguished, representative organist has been a pioneer in the present generation in popularizing the organ. He is not only an artist and a virtuoso, but a scholar and excellent musician of highest attainments. Since the memorable tour of Guilmant, nothing has been heard to compare with the work Bonnet is doing. His technical command of the instrument is keenly sensed, but is always subservient to a clearness and perfection of tone quality that reminds the listener of Galli-Curci or Casals.

Bonnet was born in Bordeaux. His father was organist of the Church of Ste. Eulalie, and was his first teacher. At 14, Bonnet was appointed organist of St. Nicholas, and later of St. Michaels, both in his native town.

He entered the Paris Conservatoire under the tuition of Alexander Guilmant, winning the much-coveted first prize for organ playing and improvization. After winning the Guilmant prize, Bonnet entered as candidate in open competition for the position of organist in the famous St. Eustache Church; all the competitors were first-prize men of the Paris Conservatoire but the post was given Bonnet.

He has toured all over Europe, is a prime favorite in Paris, where, on the death of Guilmant, he was offered the coveted post of organist of the Societe des Concerts of the Paris Conservatoire.

For the past two years he has been in America, appearing as soloist with the great symphony orchestras whenever the combination was possible, and touring as recitalist in the principal cities.

Rosen to Give Matinee.

The tremendous success of Max Rosen, the gifted young violinist, at Trinity Auditorium last week, has resulted in an avalanche of requests for a second appearance. This Manager Behymer announces for Saturday afternoon, March 15, when an entirely different programme will be given.

Of the younger generation of fiddlers, Rosen towers above them all, sharing only with Heifitz the distinction of being the most gifted of the Auer pupils. Only 19, and now in his second season in America, his artistry has attracted national attention, bidding fair to give him a vogue with the concert-going public equal to that of Elman and Kreisler.

Rene Hemery will Give Concert.

Rene Hemery, first-prize man at the Conservatoire de Paris, and violin soloist with the Paris Symphony Orchestra, for the benefit of French wounded, will play on Wednesday evening, March 12, at the Ebell Club House. Mme. Hemery accompanies her husband on the piano. The programme will include a Grieg Sonata, Bach Chaconne, Sarasate Romance and Spanish Dance, Saint-Saens Rondo Capriccioso.

Wa-Wan Club Concert.

Wednesday, March 12, is reciprocity day for the Wa-Wan Club, and a special invitation is extended to all presidents of district clubs. Mrs. William Mabee will make an address, and Miss Grace James will sing. The programme will begin at 2:30 p.m. promptly.

Matinee Musical Club.

The last meeting of the Matinee Musical Club was held on last Thursday, at which Mrs. Harry Voorhees sang, Miss Elsa Seidel, pian Edith Clark at second pian and Mrs. Valentine Fisher March 20 a programme will b en, with well-known local appearing. The club's annual and dance took place last evening.

AN AWFUL DAY AT GOLDWYN'S.

Understaker's Gazette. She just laughed and laughed!

"But just then something awful happened. The steam-tug had been anchored, and a wind that had been rising without our noticing it turned suddenly into a little squall; the boat dragged anchor and commenced to drift. Of course they started the engines in a few minutes and got her righted, but in the meantime, there were all three of us in the water. And when they tried to lower a life-boat, it got swamped. So there was nothing for us to do but to swim for it. And we were a quarter of a mile from shore.

"The cold water had brung me to my senses, and I told Dick to go back after the other woman. It was then that dame made me so ashamed I coulda died. She swam over to me, told Dick to look out for me because she could swim like a fish. Well, I started to go through with it,—the limp lily stuff,—but I ate my heart out with shame and didn't care at last whether I drowned or not. By and by I began to see the dame getting a bit white around the gills.

" 'Dick,' I whispered, 'go over and help her for gawsa'! It's all my fault! I—I can swim, I had to confess to both of them, feeling as yellow as a small-pox sign. And next minute she gave Dick such a grateful look out of her big black orbs I'm blessed if I didn't nearly regret my better nature!

"After a while we reached shore, and she took me right away to her dressing room to dry out, while Mabel brought me some extra duds she had brought down for emergency. My, but I felt mean! 'You're the girl ought to be doing the stunts,' she said patting me on the arm, 'and I'm going to tell Mr. Cabanne so. Say, child, didn't I used to know you somewhere?'

"That's when I found out who that classy dame was! She was none other than Rae Samuels, one of the brightest of Orpheum stars. Did I feel small? Say, you coulda covered me with a penny stamp. But I cheered up a little especially as Mabel and Cabanne forgave me, which they wouldn't a done maybe, anyhow not the director, 'cause no director could, only the camera had got the first of it, and I pulled my stuff outside the camera lines. Anyhow of course they all thought it was an accident,—everybody except Dick. And Mabel. As I said before, I'm sure she was on, because otherwise she wouldn't ha' laughed. Dick was awful cold, but that didn't worry me much right then, I was so thankful my career wasn't ruined after all.

"Up in the dressing room, after Miss Samuels told me she remembered me, I all of a sudden remembered where I'd known her. 'Oh, yes,' I cried, 'It was a little Chicago picture house where you sang and where I played the piano.' 'Didn't remember you with your make-up, child,' she said, 'but do you remember how I used to sing "Giddap, Napoleon," before the 9 o'clock show in the morning, for the newsboys and messenger kids? Well, you know how scared I was to leave my little old $35 a week, when offers began to come, and even when Mr. Bray came after me to sing on the kerosene circuit down south!' It seems it was only two years from that day when she told me goodbye at the picture show that she went into the Follies. And I found she was happily married,—whereat I forgave her everythhing, and asked her what she thought of Dick?

" 'Clean as a whistle!' she answered. 'They elected him to show me about the studio, you know.' Maybe my heart didn't give a big bound of relief.

"Then we had to hustle back to town for her afternoon show. She made me go to the theater with her, and then took me to dinner with her at the Alexandria. She was wonderful. She even promised to help me if I ever wanted to go on the stage. But just the same I was getting blue, maybe you know why.

"What of Dick, poor old Dick, that I'd made a monkey of? He knew I had too, whatever the others thought.

"I hurried off home and was just getting off my corset so as to have a good comfortable cry,—you know us girls can never cry comfortable with our corsets on,—when the telephone rang.

"It was Dick's old happy bright voice.

" 'I'm coming right up to see you' the voice said.

" 'All right! I laughed back at him, too happy for anything. All right, come right up and see if I care!' "

Canaries Taught to Sing.

Down on South El Paso street cages of canaries are as popular as babies and bull pups. Their soft rolling trill can often be heard above the rumble of heavy traffic broken now and then by the cries of newsboys selling the latest edition of Spanish newspapers.

How many of these birds have been taught to sing in a peculiar manner is an interesting story.

RUTH SAID "OUCH!" GYPSY SAID "UGH!"

Ruth Roland is plumb nervous about road agents. There has been a lot of automobile banditing around Los Angeles, and when Miss Roland is out at night she is constantly in danger of breaking the speed and traffic laws. The other night she and Gypsy Abbot, returning home late from the opera, began to talk of highwaymen, and got themselves so frightened that they stopped the car and hid their jewels in their hats. Then Ruth "stepped on it." and they set sail for home. Suddenly a car shot out of a side street and blocked their way.

"Robbers!" gasped Gypsy.

"Bandits!" gurgled Ruth.

Two men in policemen's clothes jumped out of the car and approached.

"Disguised as officers," groaned Gypsy.

"Cowards!" hissed Ruth.

"The next time," exclaimed one of the men, "that I catch you speeding like that it'll cost you each $25!"

"Oh, joy!" chortled Gypsy.

"Thank the Lord!" twittered Ruth.

ALICE LAKE GOES IN FOR THE DRAMA.

Custard pies and brickbats henceforth will mean nothing in the artistic life of Alice Lake, the pretty young woman who, for so long has been serving as Fatty Arbuckle's leading woman. Miss Lake has been engaged to play leads in Metro pictures, her first venture being with Bert Lytell in his current "Boston Blackie" picture, tentatively named "Powers that Prey."

As Mary in "Powers that Prey," Miss Lake has many tensely dramatic moments, so it is said, and she has agreeably impressed Maxwell Karger, Metro director-general, by the sincerity and power of her acting. Just to see her, one would never surmise that Miss Lake aspires to such serious things. Off the set she is a smiling little body, with a pink and white complexion and three fascinating dimples—one in each cheek, and the third—sh!—on her right shoulder.

ACTORS ADMIT IT'S GOING TO BE GOOD.

The Al Christie first two-reel special, "Sally of the Chorus," featuring Fay Tincher, is going to be a "sure hit," according to the following members of the cast:

Fay Tincher—"Al Christie always wore his leather coat when directing my scenes."

Harry Depp—"My cowlick and Fay's striped stockings certainly put the picture over."

Molly Malone—"The piano-player at rehearsals was so good-looking!"

Harry Edwards—"I play four parts. Watch for me."

Envious chorus-girls—"I wish my face had Molly Malone's knees."

Roscoe Karns—"Stage managers give such tone to a production. I play the stage manager."

Al Christie—"It's hokum."

Everybody, sotto voce—"The shimmy chorus wasn't so bad!"

SOLDIER WRITES TO MARGARITA FISHER.

Margarita Fisher of the American Film Company is in receipt of a very interesting letter from her former assistant director, James Douglass, now a first lieutenant in the American army in Germany. The letter is written from Cochem-on-der-Moselle and reads in part:

"So sorry I was unable to make it all the way to Berlin, but this is as far as I was able to proceed. This was due, not to any hesitation on our part, but rather to the fact that the Germans began to squeal and signed an armistice. Too bad, for I had counted on having a room (probably the Crown Prince's room) in the Kaiser's castle in Berlin. However, I now have a very comfortable room in a nice house in Cochem-on-der-Moselle.

"Have had several interesting trips. Went up to the Forty-second Division and had lunch with a major and his staff—the major commanding the Third Battalion of the One Hundred and Sixty-seventh Infantry, (formerly the Fourth Alabama.) This regiment especially distinguished itself in every battle in which it participated, and nearly every officer wears several wound stripes and DSC's and croix de guerre's. Most of the major's staff were from Birmingham, Ala., and knew loads of people I did, so had a very pleasant time.

"The Second Division, which is up above the bridgehead at Coblenz, was composed of the Ninth and Twenty-third Regular Regiments of Infantry and two regiments of marines, and it was in this division that the marines won their fame. The Ninth and Twenty-third, I don't think, got their share of the credit. I have been all over the Soissons battlefield and have seen the large number of American soldiers buried around there, and from the looks of the cemeteries it was the Ninth and Twenty-third which bore the brunt of the fighting at that point. And the fighting there was terrific. I found one little village situated down in a valley between two hills. All the trees around the town were blackened and gnarled and torn by shells, and the ground was literally pock-marked with shell holes. There is not a piece of wall left standing anywhere in the town, and the whole thing looks like someone had painted a new up-to-date picture of Dante's Inferno.

"I am enclosing in this letter an iron cross of the second class. How I do wish I could write you a wild tale and write it truthfully about my capturing twenty or thirty Germans single-handed and wresting this iron cross from the largest man of the lot; but I can't, and am afraid I'll have to tell you the plain, unvarnished, bitter truth. It was bought! When the American Army of Occupation came up into Germany, we all were looking for souvenirs, and Fritz was looking for food, so they parted with their iron crosses in exchange for food or cigarettes!"

TOM MIX CAN SHOW THE BROKEN RIBS.

Tom Mix, the William Fox star, never fakes a scene and consequently oftentimes must pay the penalty for his conscientious demand for realism. The latest penalty was two broken ribs. The accident occurred at Flagstaff, Ariz., where Mix and his William Fox company under the directorship of Edward J. LeSaint, went to make scenes for "The Wilderness Trail."

The script called for a knife fight in the snow, between Mix and Sid Jordan, the heavy. This fight is one of the big moments of the picture and to get every possible thrill out of it over a thousand feet of film were turned on it. When the combatants were ready, knives in hand, Mix said to Jordan:

"Don't worry about cutting me, Sid, I don't mind a few scratches. Make this fight look real."

The two went at it hammer and tongs. They threw each other all over the snow, sometimes out of the range of the camera. At one point, each man holding the other's knife wrist, they rolled down an embankment in high speed. Half way down a tough twig jammed itself in Mix's ribs and before the twig broke with the weight of the two men, two of his ribs were cracked. Yet the fight went on, and another hour's work was done before the start for the Commercial Hotel in Flagstaff was made. It was not until that moment that Mix told director LeSaint what had happened. A doctor there fixed Mix up temporarily, and when Mix reached Los Angeles and had had further treatment by a physician he was able to go on with the "interiors" of the picture

NOW MADGE KENNEDY LIKES 'EM ROUGH.

Madge Kennedy admits she used to be awfully scared of cowboys. But since her recent picture, in which a number of these wild and woolly westerners appeared, she has decided they are "nice."

To prove it to them, she gave the boys a party at her home, the other night, and served to them a huge cake which she had made with her own fair hands. "I know," she told them, "that you all adore cakes crammed with maraschino cherries, just as I do; so please turn yourselves loose!"

Besides the star and Wallace MacDonald, her leading man, those sharing the feast were Alfred Hollingsworth, Anna Hernandez, Walter Hiers, George Kunkel, Bill Patton, William McPherson, Tuck Reynolds, Walter Cameron, Director Clarence G. Badger, Carlyle Moore, Marcel Le Picard, and others.

And to further prove how nice she thinks the cowboys are, she's going to let Bill Patton teach her to twirl a lariat.

HE WANTED HIS LI'L OLD ARM, SO HE DID.

In Hale Hamilton's new picture, "After His Own Heart," now under production at the Metro studios in Hollywood, the hero agrees to an operation whereby his youthful heart shall be removed and substituted for the worn-out cardiac muscle of an aged millionaire. Naturally the surgical exchange never does take pace, but the situation strikes Hamilton as amusing.

"Playing with hearts like that," said the star, "brings to mind the story from France about Sam Johnson, the big negro private whose right arm was shot off during a furious battle. When the fire got too heavy, Sam's commander ordered the colored troops to return to their own trenches. Sam paid no heed, but ran wildly around, apparently hunting for something in the debris of No Man's Land.

" 'Sam, retreat to your trench!' commanded the officer.

" 'Ah can't, sah,' replied Sam, continuing to search, 'Ah's lookin' fo' mah arm.'

" 'Why your arm's been shot away!' exclaimed the officer, 'It's no good to you now.

" 'Deed it is, sah,' returned Sam, 'its got mah wrist-watch on it, that arm has!' "

Dorothy Dalton to Flit.

Dorothy Dalton, Thomas H. Ince star, plans to leave for New York City following the filming of her present play at Culver City. While in the East Miss Dalton will make several big photoplays under the supervision of Mr. Ince, the stories for these calling for New York atmosphere. The pictures will be lavishly staged and produced.

It has not been definitely decided who will direct the eastern company.

Is a Regular Here.

When you get to a point where you're immortalized in a novel you've got something to proud of. Now it's J. Warren Kerrigan, one of the stars of the Jesse D. Hampton productions, is to have that distinction. A few days ago he had a letter from Marie Bjilke Peterson, living in Tasmania, telling him of the fact.

The author said she had his picture before her as she wrote, and felt his presence was an inspiration to her work, and that his screen work had so impressed her that he was to be the hero of her newest work.

Kerrigan was asked to send his photograph to adorn the title page of the book which already has been accepted by a firm of London publishers.

He Owns a Goat Ranch.

Jack Mower, that broad shouldered youth who has just completed a feature with May Allison at the Metro studios, has gone north to look over his goat ranch. Jack paid thebill in advance for improvements and is now going to find out whether the work has been properly done.

The Rise of Darrell Foss.

Darrell Foss is playing his second role in the support of Nazimova at the new Metro studios in Hollywood. Foss is cast as Stephen Forrester, the ne'er-do-well brother in "The Brat." Recently Foss did the juvenile lead with Nazimova in the colossal Chinese pageant picture, 'The Red Lantern."

Confession Note.

The only photoplay star in the world that has the courage to own up that she drives a Ford is Bessie Barriscale.

"Ford? I should say I do own a Ford—three of them—and I drive 'em too. I have three big cars, but I love my Fords. When I go to my ranch, I get out and work with the rest of the boys, and you may see me nearly any day driving a Ford about the place or running into town for supplies. I couldn't ranch without my Fords!"

May Allison on Pilgrimage.

Gratifying a desire she has had ever since she has been in California, May Allison, winsome Metro star, will make a motor tour of the old Spanish missions along El Camino Real, from San Diego to Santa Barbara.

Miss Allison is to have two week's vacation and will tour the missions in her smart landaulet, accompanied by one of her sisters. And even at the expense of appearing a trifle "shoppy," the star will carry along her pocket kodak.

Safety First Item.

Louise Lovely is not afraid of the men who are agitating the killing of dogs, but she is taking no chances. Louise has a fluffy long-haired animal she calls Tippy, and before she left for Palm Springs to make scenes with William Farnum in the William Fox production, "Wolves of the Night," she took Tippy to a ranch fifty miles from Los Angeles and eight miles off the main road, so that no one would bother Tippy while she was away. Louise is rather wrathy about this dog-killing agitation, and she is prepared to meet those agitators in verbal combat.

Al's Got To Be Good Now.

Albert Ray, new Fox star, has got to be a good boy now and go home early. His mother, Mrs. Laura L. Ray, has just arrived from New York and will keep house for her clever son.

Promotion Note.

And now Scotty Dunlap can file away his old loose-leaf note book and his property man's. He isn't an assistant director any more, but is a full-fledged director, with a megaphone and leather puttees. He is to take Al Ray and Elinor Fair under his wing, in Ray's next picture.

WOMEN AT DECALOGGERHEADS.

The Feminine Point of View in San Francisco—Musical Sprees and Daring Innovators and Such Things.

BY LANNIE HAYNES MARTIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 7.—Yes, it is perfectly true, San Francisco women do go on sprees! Long protracted rounds of dissipation in which they drown their dreads and disappointments and their sorrow over a sordid world. Night after night they can indulge their taste with no apparent flagging of their thirst. They know each subtle brand by name and are connoisseurs of quality. Of course at times there is apparent undesirable reaction. A sixty-year-old mother was upbraiding her forty-year-old daughter for the excesses in which the latter had been indulging.

"This kind of thing won't do," said the mother "even if it isn't going to last but a short time. You are getting insufficient sleep, you eat practically nothing, your nerves are on edge,—look how your hands tremble!"

"But mother," the daughter protested, "they are not really trembling; the right one is trying to play the intermezzo from Mascagni's new opera and the left is doing that lovely fugue from Bach."

Music is the San Francisco woman's intoxicant! And perhaps in no other city of the United States is there such a large percentage of women with such thorough musical knowledge. And, when the grand opera season is but a short one, it is not to be wondered at that they forego sleep and all forms of social diversion in order to attend. But there is a stronger test than this. San Francisco people will even go to Oakland to a concert. Numbers of society women are flocking across the bay now to hear Sydney Hoben of Pasadena interpret the new operas.

The San Francisco woman's point of view is not one easily sympathized with or understood by the middle-class, mediocre, middle-aged, Middle West, mid-Victorian mind. Its subtle discriminations would be unintelligible, its syllogistic deductions uncanoncial to the bourgeoise, sansculotte mental proletariat. For while the physical eye which can detect delicate nuances of light and shade is universally conceded to be a more highly developed organ than the one which only discerns black and white, when these terms are transposed from esthetic into ethical language there can be no hope for such a universal conclusion. This might best be illustrated by a recently repeated scandal. A woman (whose place of nativity shall be nameless) in commenting on the sad affair, her voice shaking with horror and hortatory condemnation, said: "And see what came to her! They found her there in his room dead! And a San Francisco woman speaking of the same affair with equal disgust vibrating in her voice remarked:" And they say she had on a gray flannelette night-gown!"

Art has not yet become quite a staple and substantial diet. Art exhibits are usually taken with patroness sauce and washed down with immoderate quanities of tea. But the attitude toward art is progressive. On the San Francisco woman's wall there is no room for family protraits. (There are still a few extant in Oakland.) Here one may find queer Cubist nudes and the placid face of a sucide, newly dead, but no grave engraven images of stony-faced ancestors chill the atmosphere. There has been a wholesome tendency this year toward the purchase of landscapes, and Southern California scenes done by Borg, Brown, Wendt and the Wachtels have been given preference.

The San Francisco woman's idea of entertaining may not be a unique one, but she has a unique field for indulging it. The male population of San Francisco is cosmopolitan and one cosmopolite kens another, and so instead of the one-man gatherings prevalent in a vicinity which I might name, the San Francisco hostess usually invites one other woman and about ten men! The fact that the men come again and again is much more eloquent comment in the affairs than their departing words, "We have had such a charming evening!" At one delightful Russian Hill home on Sunday evenings might be found a Chinese diplomat (an Oxford man whose English puts occidentals to shame;) a well known American poet, a brilliant English critic and reviewer, two or three short-story writers, a New Zealand musican, a French painter and several embryo editors.

The San Francisco woman has long been accustomed to admiration. If men gaze at her it does not shock her. If a man smiles at her on the street she does not call a policeman, she knows he but pays homage to that same god she adores—the god of Beauty, and feels her offerings on the shrine are not in vain.

At a recent Women's Club convention not held in San Francisco there were five-minute talks on "How I Have Helped My Husband." A number of women told of the marvelous things they had done. One had prayed for her husband until he had become a sober, substantial citizen. Another one had scrimped and saved and made her own hats, thereby assisting her husband to acquire a competence. One bought her husband's clothes. Another was sure that she had been the means of great inspiration to her husband because she read to him every night out of her favorite authors. These women were all serious, solemn, suburban citizens, who looked like they would do just that sort of thing, for they believed that the uplift of the universe lay on their sacrificial shoulders. And then a pretty, pert, slim, smartly-dressed young thing got up and said: "I would not live with a man that allowed me to buy his clothes. Praying and breathing are two functions which I think he can only perform successfully for himself. I help my husband most by letting him work for me." [A gasp from the audience.] "You need not look incredulous. It is a well-known psychological fact that the human being loves the object for whom he works. Furthermore, the toiling for the toys and baubles that we women want unlooses energies in him that far outvalue the mere acquiring of these trifles. We get the material things, and he the psychic and mental benefits. I demand $50 buckles for my shoes, and get them. I have four tailor suits a year, as many evening dresses as I need, and I would scorn a hat that cost less than $25. Do you call this selfishness and say the man is making sacrifices for a woman's vanity? Well, have not we women for centuries claimed that we acquired our superior spiritual attainments through sacrifice? What right have we to monopolize this means of grace? May man not yet reach the supreme heights that we have gained if we but allow him some sacrifical privileges? And, do you not know that the home and all civilization, culture and the arts came from a selfish woman? When the first nomad woman said to her mate: 'I will no longer follow you in your vagrant wanderings; no longer will I help you bear the burdens and endure the fatigue and cold of the long journeys; I demand a permanent abiding place, a fire, a tent and warm skins to cover me'—that woman laid the foundation for all of the comforts that you and I now enjoy. There were women, I suppose, in those days, also, who called this rank selfishness. And they continued in their toilsome, aimless wanderings, from their descendants you might now acquire additional economy by learning how to plait grass kirtles—"

But this was too much! In the turmoil that ensued, the pretty, pert, young thing escaped through a back window.

Those who pray to be delivered from the crimes against aesthetics will never be understood by the sticklers for the letter of the law. Replacing "Thou shalt have" for "Thou shalt not" will always make the two factions at decaloggerheads.

Peg o'Los Angeles goes buying

Quite charming and as daintily appointed as miladi's own boudoir is that clever Town and Country Shop recently opened at 627 S. Hill. We were all wild about the punch Mary served at her party—it had such a different taste. Of course, we insisted that she tell us how to make it, and she said: "You take one-half Arrowhead orange cordial and one-half Kwas, chill with cracked ice, slice in an orange or two for looks, serve from a punch bowl—and there you have it, unless you'd rather have the grap and cherry cordials mixed; either combination is perfectly delicious." Of course, the Arrowhead ginger ale is a mighty fine drink by itself. These are all made with Arrowhead Springs water as a basis, and now they are putting them up in "family-size" bottles. We went out to the bottling plant and were amazed that a sterilizing system could be made so perfect. Arrowhead Springs water is brought directly from the springs in glass-lined cars—think of it! And you know it's just dandy to have in the house when callers come, and for daily use!

Cowbell purses are the latest vogue.

You'll find the purest, sweetest home-made candies at Aileen's Sweet Shop, fourth floor, Brack-Shops. They serve such perfectly delicious lunches here, too, also afternoon tea.

Fond of that old hat? Well, don't give it up, but take it to the original Make Over Hat Shop, 688 S. Alvarado, and they'll work a miracle with it. Stunning new hats are made here, too.

Many smart spring hats are of satin and straw combinations.

Many women have told me of that wonderful Key to Beauty (witch hazel) Cream which they use when motoring. It protects the face from harsh winds and does not encourage the growth of hair. For sale by H. Jevne Co., or by Anna M. Bergeron, the manufacturer, who is a skin specialist, including electrolysis, 820-821 Haas Bldg.

Clever! Well, I should say! The hats created by George McCormack are most unusual. You know he designs your hat to suit your own individuality, and then, of course, it really enhances your own charms! Why not see him about your "Easter bonnet?" 507 Title Guarantee Bldg.

Don't be discouraged if your hair is coming out. Josephine Jones has a marvelous tonic which will correct this trouble. She's at 620 Story Bldg., Phone 61503. Have you heard about her gray-hair restorer, which really restores and is not a dye?

Old-fashioned needlework or cut work trims much of the new lingerie.

Those really smart tub frocks for house and garden called "Williams-Wear" are not factory-made—you can tell that at a glance! Ask for them at Specialty Shop, 734 S. Hill.

Tourists, why not order your Easter suit now and be sure of it? L. Lipson, 204 Brockman Bldg., is displaying smart spring models and materials from which he creates modish suits, capes and dresses, exquisite in design and workmanship.

"Good-by Dandruff" is the very appropriate name of that wonderful milk shampoo which you can get at Corenson's Hair Parlor, 616½ S. Broadway! It's really surprising how quickly it clears the scalp of this menace, which must be gotten rid of at once if we keep our hair!

I never fail to keep into the shop of John Klein, the Furrier, at Eighth and Broadway, whenever I pass by, because it's always so lively and interesting! And now when smart furs are being received daily from New York and are sold at one-third off, it gives me quite a thrill to see the crowds of people buying them. He always carries the latest and most beautiful models in coats, capes and box coats, and a splendid line of the ever-popular fox furs, which will be especially favored for Easter.

Really, the smartest things I've seen lately are those perfectly swagger vests! You wear them with tailored suits, sport suits and street dresses. At Robinson's they showed me some in silks of various kinds, mostly in bright hues and some stunning ones in white wash materials—one was finely tucked like a man's shirt front and finished with a smart collar.

Peter Pan collars worn with Windsor ties are all the rage.

Practical? Well, I guess! The California Liberty Fair has conferred a Diploma of Award "for valuable services" upon the Pacific Coast School of Lip Reading. 608 Citizens' National Bank.

The new diploma of Modern Burroughs Calculator School is certainly the most unique one I have ever seen! Girls, you should investigate, as one of these will easily secure you a hundred-dollar-a-month position! Ask Mr. Grommet about it at suite 414 Metropolitan Bldg.

"If you would ever wear one of the famous original Goodwin Corsets, my dear," said a smartly-gowned woman to a friend, "you'd never wear any other!" They have such splendid lines and really give wonderful comfort! They are sold by Eva W. Benner, 736 W. Seventh. Phone 66862.

The new celluloid jewelry is beautiful.

Your old furs can easily be revived! You'll be surprised to find the clever things that can be done with these by a real artist. A. H. Chestnut, fourth floor, Brack-Shops, is a young man with many clever ideas and he is always glad to work out your own suggestions. He is making up some lovely things in mole and mink for Easter and his prices for spring are especially reasonable. Phone 62433.

The Hotel Stowell Beauty Shop has a full line of Marinello beauty requisites. Here experts give splendid scalp treatments which do wonders for bad scalp conditions and stop falling hair. Most marvelous results are obtained from their facials! Mezzanine floor Hotel Stowell, 416 S. Spring.

I gladly recommend the Scientific Hair Parlor at 515 Fay Bldg., Third and Hill street, if you wish to change or restore the color of your hair. Information gladly given.

Too fat? Too thin? Not exactly well? You can be brought to normal weight and measurements and be vastly improved in health by the Reiss System—without drugs or starvation. It's intensely interesting, too. Phone 67815 or call at 802 Title Guarantee Bldg., 220 W. Fifth.

Loop pockets are very smart on tailored skirts.

Is Lady Ruth your favorite corset? You'll find a special on it at the Baby Specialty Shop, 734 S. Hill. They offer a beautiful front-lace model in flesh color, low bust and long hip for only $2.50! Then there are other clever styles from $3 to $6. The Lady Ruth is a very well-made corset and exceedingly comfortable, and I must tell you about the dear little slip-over sweaters for babes up to 2 years! They are in Saxony, blue, pink and white with sleeves and without—at $2.50! You'll love 'em!

NEW ADVERTISING FIRM ORGANIZED.

CRANK-PARIS COMPANY WILL ENGAGE IN GENERAL BUSINESS HERE.

A new advertising agency has been organized under the firm name of Crank-Paris Company, with offices at 1106 Van Nuys Building. A general advertising service, covering all branches, will be conducted.

The members of the firm, C. F. Crank and William P. Paris, have reputations for capable advertising, merchandising counsel and service. Mr. Crank was for the past six years actively engaged in the agency business. He joined the Newitt Advertising Agency in 1913 and when that concern was succeeded by the General Advertising and Sales Corporation he continued in their employ and was later made service director, writing all copy for the various advertisers that appeared in the newspapers and magazines, as well as superintending the production of printed matter, art work and engraving.

Mr. Paris began his advertising career twelve years ago, and has been connected with the daily papers here during that time. The knowledge he has gained in these twelve years of intimate contact with the business man is expected to prove of great value to his present connection.

The several concerns, such as the Stewart Fruit Company, Leach Motor Car Company, Columbia Outfitting Company, Bradford Woolen Mills, B. H. Dyas Company, Chouiner's, Leach-Biltwell Company, Entz & Rucker, Halbriter the Tailor, Cooper Dye Works, Billings & Mavering of Fresno, and Importers' Manufacturing Company, which have been developed under a former business connection, will be served by the new firm.

STOLE BUDDHAS AS PRIESTS PRAYED.

The main buildings include the temple of the judges of hell—also to be found at each monastery. An oblong room, with a roof much beamed and highly colored, a golden Buddha, with a disciple on either hand, and down the sides of the wall the judges, ten of them, with their servants, smiling despite the horrible scenes of the ten hells painted on the wall behind each judge. But the Buddha in the center is quite a different thing altogether. It is Chichang Postal, Buddha of hell, but most compassionate. In some of the statues there are tears on its cheeks.

The main temple is dedicated to the fifty-three Buddhas who brought the religion to Korea. In the middle of the room was a mass of roots from a single tree reaching from the floor almost to the ceiling. They were painted red, green, blue, yellow and pink in radiating designs. Among them were fifty-three tiny patchwork quilts and on most of these stood gilt figures of varying sizes, with dragons writhing below in blue painted waves. The story of the foundation of the monastery. But alas! seventeen of the Buddhas were gone, little statues which the priests believe to have come down from the first century A.D. Last year two Korean men had come as pilgrims. During prayers, while the priests had their eyes closed, they hid behind the roots, taking their sandals from the door. The priests, finding them and the sandals gone, believed that they had left, and locked the doors with the thieves inside. They opened the doors from the inside, bore away all that they could carry and were never caught. The old abbot was bowed down by grief. They thought he would die, for he did not eat nor sleep for ten days. Now there is a wire about the roots and the Buddhas continue in safety their triumph over the dragons.—[E. T. C., in Asia Magazine.

It Made the Difference.

"I weigh two pounds more than you do all right," said a North Side boy, after he and his chum had stepped off the scales.

"Oh, no you don't."

"Yes I do. Now you watch the scales."

And the scales proved him right.

"Aw—you had yer hand in yer pockets," howled his chum in highly reproachful tones.—[Columbus Dispatch.

NEW CONCERT SERIES.

Mme. Lili Petschnikoff, who is perhaps the greatest living woman violiniste, and has been the recipient of honors from a number of the crowned heads of Europe, has been selected by D. M. Linnard to open the new series of concerts that are to be presented at the Hotel Huntington. She will play Wednesday evening. The concerts mark a new departure. They are public, and not alone for the invited guests of the hostelry, and Mr. Linnard is personally presenting the artist. Mme. Petschnikoff, who scored so heavily last month when she played at Trinity, will repeat two numbers, the Cesar Frank Sonata and the Kreutzer Sonata. In addition she will play two Brahms dances, Nos. 2 and 5, Saint-Saens's "The Swan," "Etude" by De Beriot, and Raff's "Cavatina," which is extremely popular in theme.

Assisting Mme. Petschnikoff is Caroline Rider Possart, concert pianiste, who has for some time been her accompaniste. She will play Mozart's "Theme Variee," Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song," Grieg's "Elegy" and the "Etude on False Notes," of Rubenstein. The concert is to be given in the ballroom of the Huntington. Mme. Petschnikoff played last Saturday to a packed house at the Pasadena Shakespeare Club. She is one of the most finished musicians of the day, and her advent in the new venture is regarded with considerable interest.

WHY BORAH REFUSES LUNCH

Idaho Senator, in Magazine Article, Challenges League of Nations Programme.

Amplifying his curt refusal to attend the dinner to be given at the White House to the Foreign Affairs Committee of Congress, Senator Borah of Idaho, writing in Current Opinion for March, emphasizes the dangers he sees in the proposed League of Nations constitution which President Wilson expects to have ratified, and sharply defines the issue he takes with the League to Enforce Peace idea and its sponsors. "By transferring," he says, "the power of the United States government to make war or peace to some superstate or tribunal not responsible to our people and to them alone, you take its most vital powers out of our hands and put them beyond our reach and control. When you give some tribunal which we cannot elect power to take our sons and put them in Russia or Asia, you finally arrive at the ultimate goal to which the disciples of Lenine and Trotzky would lead us, thereby destroying our sovereign independence and taking away the self-governing capacity of the people. It is immaterial whether this is done in one way or another; it is the ultimate result that I look at and reject now and forever." His recent statement made in the Senate to the effect that Bolshevism was not to be confined by national lines and that it constituted a threat to this country is vigorously defended by Senator Borah, who, however, sees "danger in exaggerating the symptoms" and "in heightening their dangerous aspect, not only through measures of repression, but also by unduly endeavoring to effect a cure by treating symptoms rather than administering to the seat of the disease."

"Any attempt," he writes, "to effect changes, even though needed and demanded, by violent or summary method, is foolish because it is unnecessary. In this country it would be a mistaken, a false method. Thus, the best way to combat it is by exposing its falsity. What we need in this country is the fostering and strengthening of the national spirit, a rebaptism of national pride, a reconsecration to the purposes for which our government was formed. Preach the doctrines of the fathers for a while and see how the American people like them. Let us take care of our own institutions, and strengthen them in the minds and hearts of the American people. Work out more just and humane laws, effectuate a more equitable distribution of our prosperity, and fill with greater national interest our whole social life. Tell our people anew how they are distinguished from all the peoples of the nations of the earth, and impress upon them the facts as to the liberty, prosperity, independence, initiative, we enjoy in measure superabundant as compared with all other peoples and nations. When we do that we will plant in the minds and hearts of the American people, again and anew, a spirit which Bolshevism cannot uproot."

Senator Borah calls attention to the fact that Bolshevism, or what makes for Bolshevism, can come from the mansion as well as the street. "It is no new thing," he declares, "its name only is new. It has had and still has other names, some of which conceal in smug respectability the end which would be produced did the insidious propaganda put forth prevail. One of those names is internationalism, to which I am opposed as I am to the more apparent Bolshevism, whether it is clothed in broadcloth or rags, whether it comes in the form of a soviet government or that of a superstate based on force. It all means the same thing so far as this government is concerned. Those men and women who meet and praise the soviets may be hammering away with pickax and dynamite at one pillar of the republic, while other men and women in more powerful places may be hammering away at other pillars of the republic. One would destroy it by demobilizing its moral forces, the other by sterilizing the national spirit.

"We have always had more or less social unrest, and it might be unfortunate if it were to cease entirely, for such unrest gives aid in safeguarding our liberties. Every indication of social unrest is not necessarily a symptom of Bolshevism. There is danger, however, in turning into Bolshevism many who are not Bolshevists by misinterpreting and labeling and endeavoring to treat them as such."

Senator Borah anticipates his promised address to the Senate by defining his opposition to the proposed League to Enforce Peace, as contrasted to the proposed League of Nations, the powers of which, he writes, cannot be anticipated.

PROPHECY IN A TOY.

German Puzzle, Bought Years Ago, is Significant Now.

That the Germans planned world conquest years before the war broke out is asserted to be proved by Mrs. Elmer Ericson of Evanston, Ill., who came across a puzzle belonging to her son, Norman, which had been put away in the garret for about eight years.

This puzzle, of the old "Pigs in the Clover" variety, consists of two designs within a small glass inclosure.

Upon one of these designs Prussian troops are seen invading Belgium and devastating France. Homes are in flames and the Belgian and French soldiers are shown in full flight before the victorious Germans. Paris is represented by a small pit, into which three small balls, one of which is black, one white and the other red, must be rolled to win the puzzle.

The other design represents the German eastern frontier. Here the Russian are being defeated by the Uhlans. The object of the puzzle on this side is to get the three balls into a pit at Petrograd, which, however, is denoted by its old pre-war name of St. Petersburg. The puzzle is called "getting the German colors into foreign capitals." Among the military devices shown is a long-range cannon, beneath which is plainly inscribed "42 cent." predicting the 42 centimeter gun, unheard of then, and the bombardment of Paris.

"I bought the toy about eight years ago, before we moved to Evanston," declared Mrs. Ericson. "Norman was about 2 years old and he cut his teeth upon it." She was unable to remember exactly where it had been purchased, but is certain that it was bought in Chicago.

That his puzzle was part of the Prussian military propaganda to interest German children in world conquest before they left the nursery is the belief of the Ericson family. They feel that the designs plainly indicate that Teuton plans for the world war had been formulated before this puzzle was manufactured and that it was used to make these plans known.—[Chicago News.

THOMAS DIXON ALSO OWNS AN ISLAND.

While William Wrigley is shouting from the housetops that he is the sole owner of an island here, Thomas Dixon, the author of "The One Woman," wishes it known that he has owned an island for the past ten years. Mr. Dixon owns Mackey's Island, which lies in the Atlantic Ocean just off Chesapeake Bay. The island covers over 3000 acres, and a very short time ago was in the same wild state of cultivation as it was when the American continent was discovered by Columbus. Mr. Dixon, who, by the way, is also the author of "The Birth of a Nation," has erected a thirty-seven-room castle on one of its peaks, which he uses as a summer home. The island abounds with game and fish and is used by Mr. Dixon as a hunting reserve, so you see Mr. Wrigley is not the only one to be exclusively an island landlord.

SOCIETY.

this week and are at the Green.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Howell of Hamilton, O., Mr. and Mrs. F. War[illegible] of Chicago and Mrs. Alfred Caldwell and Miss Caldwell of Wheeling, W. Va., are at the Maryland for the remainder of the season, having arrived the past week.

Mrs. J. H. Henry entertained charmingly at her home in Oak Knoll Wednesday afternoon, in compliment to the young women who have given so much time and effort for the Training School Aid during the past season. The bluebird motif was beautifully carried out for the affair. Assisting Mrs. Henry in receiving the thirty guests of the afternoon were Miss Polly Robert, Miss Margaret Quinn and Miss Betty Bettingen.

Mrs. James S. Macdonnell entertained a group of friends at the Valley Hunt Club, Wednesday afternoon in compliment to Miss Emma Claypool, who is visiting here from the East, and Mrs. R. Hamilton Mackerras, formerly of Sierra Madre, but now of Pasadena.

Social activities at the hotels during the past week, other than the charity ball on Monday night, centered in the March ball and supper-dance at the Huntington, Thursday night and the black and white futurist ball at the Maryland last night.

Many Pasadena society folk joined guests of the hotels at the ball and supper-dance at the Huntington and also at last night's ball at the Maryland, which was one of the most elaborate functions of the season. The hotel was elaborately decorated in a black and white futurist color scheme for this ball, which was preceded by scores of dinner parties and capped by a supper-dance in the grill.

A brilliant function of the coming week will be the southern night at the Green, Tuesday evening. This southern ball is an annual affair at the Green and has come to be one of the most popular events of the season both with guests at the local hotels and Pasadena folk. Negro orchestras and entertainers and a southern plantation motif are to be features of the affair which will culminate with a supper-dance following the ball in the Romanesque room.

The date for the annual junior charity ball, the premier children's party of the year in Pasadena, was announced this week. The ball will be held at the Hotel Maryland on the afternoon of Saturday, March 29. The junior charity ball is arranged by a committee of debutantes and young matrons every year for the enjoyment of the children and incidentally, like the larger charity ball, for the benefit of the Children's Training Society, to which the proceeds go. Miss Catherine Wright, one of Pasadena's popular belles who recently returned from Red Cross service in France and whose engagement to a dashing young member of the American Expeditionary Force was announced at that time, is chairman of the general committee on arrangements this year. She will be assisted by Mrs. LeRoy Linnard, Mrs. C. C. Clark, Mrs. Paul Barnes, Mrs. Irving Benton, Mrs. George Vedder, Mrs. Howard Wright, Mrs. Eliot Bandini, Mrs. Elliott Gibbs, Miss Geraldine Barry and Miss Minna Hertel.

Mrs. T. E. Hicks of Madeline drive has as her house guests Mrs. Ida M. Fullerton of Los Angeles and Mrs. Fullerton's son, Lieut. E. D. Fullerton of the American air service, who recently returned from France.

Miss William A. Spill entertained at a luncheon at her home on North Los Robles avenue, Tuesday, in honor of Miss Elizabeth B. Unger and Mrs. Mary S. Franklin of Warren, O., who are her house guests, and Mrs. David Reed Wilson of Pontiac, Mich., who is spending the winter here. Poppies were effectively used in the decorations. Mrs. Unger and Mrs. Franklin returned this week from a stay at Coronado. They will remain in Pasadena until the end of March.

Women members enjoyed another Saturday afternoon of bridge at the Annandale Golf Club yesterday, the series having a growing popularity.

Altadena Country Club was the scene of a number of dinner parties the latter part of the week, during the golf tournament that has been in progress over the Annandale course. At Midwick Country Club, members and their guests last evening enjoyed another of the dinner-dances that have proved so popular this season.

A jaunt for members of the winter colony given Thursday was much enjoyed by many guests of the Maryland, Green and Huntington hotels. It was a special expedition to Catalina Island, arranged by D. M. Linnard, managing director of the hotels. The party spent a most enjoyable day at the island, lunching at the St. Catherine.

Editorial

There is a belief that, in Spring, we approach very near to the great mysteries of life. Tender blades push through the ground. Trees burst forth into blooms. Birds, through no volition of their own, are given gayer plumage.

There is a sense of imminence; a realization of unseen powers behind every living thing. Women, always closer to the invisible than men, sense it clearly, and manifest it in the clothes they wear.

It is not caprice, but the unfailing feminine instinct for the beauties of the infinite that creates the new Spring styles.

New Coats, Suits and Frocks

Merely to inspect the new frocks and suits at Robinson's makes a woman FEEL younger; to wear one makes her actually younger—and she looks the part.

The new tailleurs follow lithe and supple lines. Designers and cutters have achieved their greatest triumph in a decade. The length of coat balances in every instance the length of skirt; there is a fine harmony in every garment.

Nicety of detail and finishing characteristic of Robinson's distinguishes every coat and suit and frock.

A Suit--

Chosen at random is a suit which is typical yet very distinctive. The color is Beige; the fabric Tricotine. It has straight, rather conservative, lines and a close fitting coat sleeve; the coat lining is of Midnight blue Pussy Willow. The finishing touch is a waistcoat of Midnight blue tricolette. The bottom of the coat, which is slashed to form front and back panel effects is heavily embroidered in self tone in bold design for a depth of eight inches from the bottom. Price $110.00.

Other new Spring suits from $45 upward.

A Coat--

A late arrival is a great coat in Overseas Brown Evora, lined with self-colored charmeuse. A new feature that catches the eye is a wide bias band of Joffre blue charmeuse applied to the lining at the hem's depth. This band on the lining matches the Joffre blue facing of the great cuffs and collar, which are strapped as generously as a British aviator's uniform. A double belt crosses at the front. Price, $110.00.

Other fashionable coats at $65.00 to $200.00.

A Frock--

A frock of soft, black taffeta arrests and holds the attention. The skirt is a mass of soft folds radiating from a straight line of tiny, self-colored buttons extending down the front. The drapery is massed in bouffant fashion in the back and a great Alsatian bow completely covers the back waistline. By the way, the famous bow of Alsace, is to be very popular this season. The sleeves of this taffeta frock are long and close and buttoned to the elbow. The only color that disturbs its blackness is a half girdle of opalescent beads, but the wearer of this frock will be very chic. Price $99.50.

—Other distinctive Frocks, $45 to $150.

"Sports Clothes," Yes! Yet They Demand Fiber and Silks of Shimmering White

For Their Fashioning!

—And exquisite white silk and fiber weaves will be used abundantly for apparel other than that for "sports wear!"
—The "best" separate white skirt must be made of one of them.
—The short, quaint, youngish box coat.
—The suit that goes to matinee, theater, restaurant-dinner or that would a-calling go.
—The dear bride's gown.

The Picturesqueness of This Gainsborough Hat Is Unquestioned

—Wrought of dark blue tagel braid and matching taffeta, its broad brim is tilted daringly at the left and turns demurely downward at the right. It is faced with taffeta.

—The low crown, at its top, is of braid, but a little puffing of silk outlines it just where it joins the brim.

—Wee velvet roses, buds, berries, the brilliant scarlet of cherries, seed pods and soft moss have been formed into half wreathes, one of which encircles the crown, the other hiding the deep, left-side bandeau.

—An "extreme" hat, yes, but one which, worn by the type for which it was designed, has an exquisite, a distinctive, charm.

—Price $27.50.

—But one finds

Hats As Fascinating As Widely 'Different'

—as this in many a place in the Millinery Department—here a diminutive "bonnet" of shining black braid whose adornment is king's blue ribbon, quaintly tied, and tiny pink rosebuds. This, without question, is for the lass whose flaxen curls, tilted nose and "chubbiness" substantiate her title to the "ingenue" type. The brown turban of fine Milan straw, trimmed with a wreath of small brown silk pompoms, demands the company of a trim tailored suit of brown; the wee, closely-fitting hat of dark blue, whose crown is a-bloom with many-leaved pink roses, may go to the matinee with the frock of blue crepe; and the sumptuous Gage sailor —white or black—is a part of the "joy of the job" for the business girl!

SOCIETY.

the announcement of the engagement of Miss Marjorie Lacy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Lacy, to Lieut. Joseph I. Sullivan of Boston was made. Miss Lacy is a graduate of a fashionable girls' school in New York, and is well known in society circles as being passionately fond of out-of-door sports. Lieut. Sullivan is now stationed at the Arcadia Balloon School. The wedding will take place some time during the month of April.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cooper of 1837 Monterey road entertained at luncheon on Friday Mr. and Mrs. George Glass, Mrs. Fremont Anawalt and Mr. Perry, all of Long Beach. The event constituted a small reunion of pioneer Nebraskans, all having settled in that country in the early eighties.

Nearly 150 persons were served at the pre-Lenten supper at St. James Episcopal parish-house. The tables were tastily decorated with green and yellow. Those present were unanimous in their declaration of the success of the supper and the musical programme which followed, consisting of vocal selections by Mrs. W. A. Brackenridge, Mrs. Murray Bartlett and Edwin P. Jones, accompanied by the church organist, Edwin E. Tarbox. Rev. C. Rankin Barnes, rector, Rev. Ellis Bishop and Guy R. McCombs gave short talks.

In honor of her niece, Miss Elizabeth Harris, Mrs. Robert A. Hadden of 1144 Oxley street entertained a number of young ladies of the Presbyterian Church on Saturday afternoon. The afternoon was delightfully spent in sewing. Those present included Miss Corin Dodson, Miss Helen Fowler, Miss Jerrynee Lynn, Miss Madelaine Brown, Miss Grace Lawyer, Miss Elizabeth Coutts, Miss Lyda Lynn, the honor guest, and her mother and the hostess.

GARDENA.

On Friday night Mrs. Frank Graham was hostess to members of the Swimming Club. The guests of honor were Miss Anne Griffin and Mr. Frank Graham, the latter the husband of the hostess. The occasion was their birthday anniversary. The winds had discouraged a beach swimming party, which is the usual sport of the club on such occasions, but the big birthday cake was there. Cakes and candles and much of the fun and frolic of childhood were enjoyed by the sixteen usually-dignified grown-ups.

The jolliest kind of a picnic in Griffith Park one day last week was the culmination of a series of parties honoring Mrs. Dwire, who left on Monday to rejoin her husband, Maj. Dwire, at Fort Bliss. In the company were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Towne, Miss Blanche Towne, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Overman, Mrs. May McLaughlin, Mr. Kenneth McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Woodruff, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wood, Mr. and Mrs. James Tyner, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Stephenson, Mrs. Fred Neubert, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Simpson and F. Earl Sturdevant. Out-of-town guests were Miss Julia Dwire of Hollywood, Mr. and Mrs. Will Firmin, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Paull, Mr. and Mrs. Dudley of Los Angeles and Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Hammond of Long Beach.

On the 5th inst. the Wednesday Progressive Club, through the hostesses for the day, gave a charming noon luncheon to club members, covers being laid for fifty-odd members. Besides the president of the club, Mrs. William Gray, the hostesses were Mmes. C. A. Kelso, Kenneth Hubbell and A. Longoria.

Mrs. R. Jones of Strawberry Park, whose husband, Lieut. Jones, is stationed on the border, returned at the end of the week from San Diego, where she has been visiting friends. Mrs. Jones is staying with her mother, Mrs. M. Simmonds, where she will remain until her husband's location is more permanent.

One day last week Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Olds and Mrs. D. M. Olds motored to Claremont, where for a couple of days they visited in the home of Rev. Charles Olds, a missionary to China, who is spending a year in America. The Claremont family reciprocated, spending several days in Gardena. While here the entire party visited a performance of "Aida" in Los Angeles.

Mrs. O. C. Olds entertained delightfully on Wednesday the Magnolia-Centinela Club, a neighborhood affair, meeting fortnightly. There were seventeen present.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. King of Electric street were host and hostess to the Harmony Club last Tuesday night. The harmony was unbroken, but all was not musical, for as an innovation Miss Anna May Elliston gave most acceptably a couple of readings. Mrs. Edward Stephenson delighted at the piano and Mrs. W. J. Overman charmed with whistled solos. Eighteen members were present.

MONETA.

Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Gillett of Norwalk and Mr. and Mrs. Charles LeDow and son, Charles, Jr., of Terminal Island, were dinner guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Long, on Sunday.

Mrs. W. D. Cook of Tulare and Mrs. Flora Cook of Long Beach were guests for a day, last week, of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lane, of Olive street.

UPLAND.

The ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Christian H. Baer, in West Nineteenth street, formed the setting for a happy gathering, Sunday afternoon, when a score or more of friends gathered to join with them in the celebration of their silver wedding day. The rooms were attractively adorned for the occasion in huge bouquets of purple and yellow violets and ferns, and Mr. and Mrs. Baer were showered with many beautiful and costly gifts. AMERICA THE LAN
OF ZION

The Place of the New Jerusale

By DR. JAMES E. TALMAGE

Of the Council of the Twelve, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Note: For free copies of other articles of this series, send the author.

We believe in the literal gathering of Israel, and in the restoration of the Ten Tribes; that Zion will be built upon this (the American) continent; etc. (Articles of Faith, No. 10.)

The Holy Bible makes frequent mention of Zion and Jerusalem with the context showing that the terms are used interchangeably, if not as precise synonyms. This application of different names to the same place is justified by the fact that within the walls of the Jerusalem of old was a hill specifically called Mount Zion, and by contraction, Zion.

But the two names appear in other Biblical passages with distinctive meaning, indicating different places, and expressive of contrast instead of identity. For example, consider the prophecy voiced by Isaiah, relating to a time yet future: "Oh, Zion, that bringest good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain; Oh Jerusalem, that bringest good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up, be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God." (Isa. 40:9.)

The same prophet refers to a Zion of the last days in which the righteous shall be safeguarded, this to be in a mountainous land, with the "munitions of rocks" as a defense; and he particularly states that the land is very far off. (See Isa. 33: 14-17.)

More definite than Bible prophecies, however, are the predictions relating to the latter-day Zion made by prophets who ministered on the American continent many centuries prior to the rediscovery of the New World by Columbus. In the Book of Mormon the names Zion and New Jerusalem are used with allied meaning and sometimes synonymously.

Near the beginning of the sixth century before Christ's birth, Ether, a Jaredite prophet, compiled the history of his people from the time of their coming to America soon after the dispersion from Babel. Even before they had crossed the ocean, the sanctity of the western continent as aforeappointed land for people who would observe the laws of righteousness was made known to the Jaredites. In a summary of Ether's record, Moroni the Nephite, who lived a thousand years after the extinction of the Jaredites, says of the latter:

"And the Lord would not suffer that they should stop beyond the sea in the wilderness, but he they should come forth

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY LADY JANE.

Our press has come in for some terrible lashings at the women's clubs lately. Members of the Friday Morning Club, incensed at the publicity given to the side of the opposition in the case of the Ventura School for Girls, last Friday held up copies of the papers for observation on the platform, and denounced their "sensationalism." It was amusing for the poor abused press representatives to hear this in the same spot, where, in the morning, club members had stated that publicity would be the last resort for the correction of the unfortunate conditions existing at the Ventura school! When Dr. Jessie Russell, who, it must be said, has amazing staying powers in the face of such consistent opposition as was apparent at the club, asked Mrs. Carrie Bryant, of the State Board of Charities and Correction, whether or not the board had the power to enforce its recommendations, Mrs. Bryant answered that the board had no such power, but that with the assistance of the press the thing would no doubt be put through. Nothing could have been more surprising than the outcome of the meeting, last Friday. When any member of the opposition would rise, Mrs. Andrew S. Lobingier, the president, would question their purpose and their right to speak, and for a time it looked as though the first resolution of the club would suffice, but by a persistence nothing short of prodigious, the opposition managed to carry the resolutions presented by petition, to ask the Governor to remove Mrs. C. R. Weymann, the superintendent of the school.

Friday Morning Club.

At the Monday meeting of the Friday Morning Club, Alexander Saslavsky, violinist, will give a recital. At 2 p.m., the Public Affairs Committee will have an open meeting, at which industrial art will be discussed by C. P Townsley, Amelia Goldsworthy and Virginia Graeff.

Ebell Club.

At 2:30 p.m., tomorrow, the Ebell Club will meet with the popular author, Ernest Thompson Seton, as speaker. Mr. Seton was put on the programme by Mrs. Jay Millard, in place of Frederick Warde, who, because of his part in the Mission Play, will speak at the club at 10:30 a.m. He will address the club on "Personal Reminiscences" and will give the club members some readings.

Woman's City Club.

At the meeting of the Woman's City Club, in Hamburger's Auditorium, tomorrow, the speakers will be Mrs. George Barry, who will talk on "Civic Possibilities of the Motion Picture," and Mrs. Emma Tolman East, a civic specialist and author from Chicago, who will give a talk illustrated by stereopticon slides on "Post War Developments of Civic Centers, Parks and Highways."

At 10:30 a.m. Mrs. R. T. Brain's class in conversational French will meet in the auditorium. These lessons are free, but are open to members only. Admission by membership card. Nonmembers may obtain tickets of admission to the programme at the door of the auditorium.

Woman's Club of Hollywood.

C. P. Townsley added another lecture to the series which he is giving for the art section, last Wednesday afternoon, when he discussed "Environment in Art." At 2:30 p.m., six women who have won success in new fields of endeavor contributed to the symposium on "Women Who Have Blazed the Trail." Carrie Jacobs Bond, composer and music publisher; Bessie Fuhrer-Erb, concert master of the Woman's Symphony Orchestra; June Rand, designer of "Sassy Jane" dresses; Mrs. George Lasky, district chairman of country life; Mrs. Cora B. Fithian, head of the women's department, Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Miss Florence Shindler, advertising manager, were heard.

The usual class meetings will be held this week, with the music section offering a programme of modern Italian music at 10:30 a.m., Tuesday. Mrs. C. E. McDonald, Mrs. E. S. Browne, Mrs. Harry Elson, Mrs. Alfred Hogbin and Mrs. Ella Courts Beck, with Miss Rimpau, violinist, as artist guest, will contribute numbers.

Huntington Beach Woman's Club.

There was a large attendance at the Huntington Beach Woman's Club meeting last Tuesday afternoon, when nominations for officers to be elected March 25 were made. Mrs. F. E. Wilson, the vice-president, who has presided over the deliberations of the club since the resignation of Mrs. W. E. Gerhart, was unanimously nominated for president. Mrs. Joseph Vavra was the only one nominated for vice-president. Mrs. Ethel Dunning, secretary, and Mrs. Louis A. Copeland, treasurer, were nominated to continue in office for another year. The programme was furnished by the literary committee, and consisted principally of a two-act comedy, "Not a Man in the House." The cast included Miss Ruth Munro, Mrs. C. A. Johnson, Mrs. E. A. Maher and Mrs. S. A. Moore. The next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Business Woman's Civic Club.

Miss Harriet C. Robbins, educational secretary of the Y.W.C.A., in speaking of "plans for the coming year" at the last meeting of the Business Woman's Civic Club, said it was the intention of her organization to establish a free restroom in the Brack-Shops for the business women of that section.

At 8 p.m. March 17 Miss Lloy Galpin will address the club on "The War and Public Health," the third of a course of lectures on the "Background of the War."

Los Angeles City Teachers' Club

The monthly membership meeting of the Los Angeles City Teachers' Club will be held Monday at 4 p.m. Several speakers will add interest to the regular business session. Miss Von Hersen will address the club on "Russia," and Mrs. Mitchell on the "Y.W.C.A.," and a member from the salary committee will report on the salary situation. A reception to new members will be given Wednesday from 4:30 to 6 p.m., in the clubrooms. Sig. Leonard Mizleonico will give harp selections, and Miss Zoe McClure will sing.

Travel Club.

The civics section of the Travel Club, in charge of Mrs. Ellen French Aldrich, will present a programme tomorrow afternoon from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m., including "art, music and the morale of the town," by Mrs. W. H. Bowden, Mrs. E. W. Mecum and Rev. E. W. Mecum. The class in parliamentary law will meet at 2 p.m. A food sale will be conducted by the finance committee, of which Mrs. Chester Smith is chairman, at 1 p.m., in Bracket Hall. Last Monday the club enjoyed an African "Travelogue," by Mr. E. P. Barclay, who has recently spent two years in that country as a mining expert.

Women's University Club.

After hearing Miss Helen Fraser at their last meeting, the Women's University Club feels more deeply than ever the responsibility of its members to community interests. Next Friday Mrs. O. Shepard Barnum is to discuss "Coming Educational Legislation." Afterwards there is to be a short musical programme. At the April meeting the club is to have as its guests the French college girls from Redlands, Pomona and Occidental, who, with over 100 others, have been sent by their government to colleges throughout the United States.

Wednesday Morning Club.

The Wednesday Morning Club had as luncheon speakers last week Miss Mary Foy and Mrs. M. E. Johnson. At the afternoon meeting Mrs. Elizabeth Zahn, accompanied by Neil Stegner, sang "An Open Secret" and "Waiting," by Millard. Miss Faith Smith, general secretary of the Y. W.C.A., spoke on community welfare in connection with that organization. Mrs. Robert Edgren lectured on astrology.

The club indorsed the community property bill that is to come up in the Legislature, and also indorsed Mrs. M. E. Johnson as a candidate for auditor of the district federation board.

Next Friday the club will give a yama-yama dance and card party at the clubhouse, Avenue 28 and Sichel street.

D.A.R

Wednesday at 3 p.m. Miss Mary Rainey, 308 South Serrano avenue, will speak to the D.A.R. Col. John Sobieski, who was unable to speak at the last meeting on account of of illness, will do so at this meeting. Visiting daughters desiring to attend should notify the regent, Mrs. Henry Edgar Bean, 2116 West Twenty-ninth street.

Cosmos Club.

Dr. Silas Evans, president of Occidental College, will speak before the Cosmos Club Wednesday. Miss Paula Dunnigan will give a talk on "Synthetic Milk," and she will also discuss measures for women which are to come before the Legislature. The philanthropy committee, Mrs. William Behm, chairman, will meet at the home of Mrs. R. S. Nance, 1234 West Fifty-first street, Thursday.

Ruskin Art Club.

"Unfamiliar Japan" will be the subject of discussion at the meeting of the Ruskin Art Club, at 10 a.m. Monday. Mrs. J. F. Bennison and Mrs. J. W. Nethery will have charge of the meeting and Miss Belle I. Smith, Mrs. J. W. Hendrick and Mrs. E. A. Dial will be the speakers.

Illinois Woman's College Club.

The Illinois Woman's College Club held its monthly luncheon last Saturday at the Garden Cafe in the Broadway Department Store. Among the recent additions to the club are Mrs. Helen Brown Reed, who is receiving much favorable notice as a vocalist.

The result is a tone as vibrant and full of life as the human voice itself.

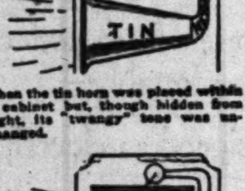
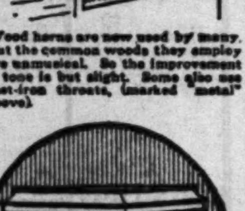
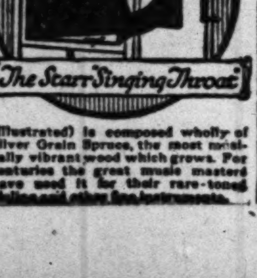
Early phonographs used tin horns to megaphone the music. The tone was metallic and unnatural.



Then the tin horn was placed within a cabinet but, though hidden from sight, its "twangy" tone was unchanged.



Wood horns are now used by many. But the common woods they employ are unmusical. So the improvement in tone is but slight. Some also use cast-iron throats, (marked "metal" above).



(Illustrated) is composed wholly of Silver Grain Spruce, the most musically vibrant wood which grows. For centuries the great music masters have used it for their rare-toned violins and other fine instruments.

According to revised figures, just issued by the Military Committee of the Williams Club of New York, the total number of Williams men in service during the war is 1651, 75 per cent. of whom were commissioned officers. This number is 37 per cent. of the total number of Williams men living, and does not include members of the S.A.T.C. or men serving the government in any civil capacity.

President Hibben's recently expressed hope that Princeton would some day become a great national university is apparently on the road to realization. As far as student representation is concerned, indeed, the university is already national in its scope. Its enrollment consists of men from virtually every State in the Union, and also from eight foreign countries.

The one hundred and seventy-fifth anniversary of the birth of James McGill will be celebrated next autumn by McGill university, of which he was the founder.

Definite announcement of a field artillery unit at Harvard for next fall is made by Col. Robert F. Goetz, F. A., in Cambridge on a mission from the War Department. The establishment of the unit at Harvard is in conformity with the War Department's plan to put similar schools in twelve or fifteen of the other large universities of the country.

Cornell has virtually completed plans for the delayed celebration of its fiftieth anniversary. The dates chosen are June 20, 21 and 22 and the programme for Friday, June 20, will include addresses by President Schurman, Justice Charles E. Hughes and Gov. Smith of New York. Saturday, June 21, will be alumni day and there will be a crew race with Annapolis, a baseball game with Pennsylvania, class dinners and a smoker to welcome home the Cornell men who have been in service. On Sunday the statue of Ezra Cornell will be unveiled and on Monday the usual commencement exercises will take place.

The Rifle Club of Tufts College has reorganized and it is expected that the coming season will be the most active one in the history of the association. It is expected that this club will compete in the name of Tufts in the intercollegiate rifle matches.

The Princetonian, the undergraduate newspaper at Princeton, now appears daily instead of three times a week. It is pubished in the morning instead of in the afternoon.

Although the freshman class is the largest of the four undergraduate classes at Harvard it is still considerably smaller than it was expected it would be. Most colleges in this year of returning peace report the experience of small senior, junior and sophomore classes, but of entering classes somewhat approaching the normal in size. At Harvard, on the contrary, the freshman class is smaller even than it was last year.

The Indiana Supreme Court affirmed a decision of the Marion Superior Court in which it was decided that Purdue University shall have more than $100,000 of annual appropriations and many thousands of dollars of special appropriations which have been held up by litigation since 1913.

The case is one which the State Board of Finance, composed of Gov. Samuel M. Ralston, Dale J. Crittenberger, Auditor of State, and George Bittler, State Treasurer, brought against the board of trustees of Purdue University in the matter of interpretation of an act of the 1913 Legislature in which a regular annual appropriation in common with other State schools was allowed the university.

Because of their interpretation of the act the State officials held up payment of a number of previously awarded appropriations. Judge W. W. Thornton held against them and in favor of paying the sums to Purdue, and when the State officials appealed to the Supreme Court the lower court's opinion was affirmed.—[Indianapolis News.

THE NEW.

IN STORES AND HOMES.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

Up-to-datest:

Stocks in brilliantly striped silks, to vie with those incorporated in men's shirts.

Oxfords, as a natural consequence of longer skirts.

Filmy picture-shapes of handmade horse-hair braid, for dressy summery wear. Black, white and pastel tints are among these airy hats, which need but little more than a few flowers as trimmnig.

The ear-ring hat! A black stunning shape, innocent of trimming, save for the long, pendant ear-rings attached at either side! Far from ingenious, by reason of this addition which lends it a truly vampish air.

The Watteau hat, in such variations as would fairly cause the Watteau shepherdesses to neglect their sheep—if they ever had any!

Now is the Time to Buy:

Oriental rugs which you have been denying to that vacant spot in your house, since the beginning of the war. That great sale this week invites consummation.

The vacuum cleaner that has long been the mecca of your house-cleaning thoughts. The one which not only suctions the dirt out, but piles up the pile of carpet or rug, is the one to buy. Hooverize on labor and put the saved time to work in brain and soul development!

St. Patrick novelties. Let's celebrate everything that comes along! It was so long that we could not celebrate anything but war work and stamp-and-bond purchases. Now let us victorate whenever possible.

Can the New be Newer?

What is a "new" novelty? Often I see it advertised, but I cannot find it in the dictionary.

If a thing is NEW; it cannot be newer. NEW is the latest to arrive; the last to be created. NOVEL is NEW. It looks to me as though there could not be room upon the same stage for both these terms—rather as if they could not be applied to the same object—at least not without objection from the respecter of words and phrases. Arise ye defendants of "new novelties!" Vindicate your choice; or else confess to us some of the OLD novelties.

Item from Paris.

Shredded ingrain carpet is the latest trimming adaptation of Mme. L'Estreme of Paris.

Surprising Fashion announcement, say you? No more so than many which have come from the fantastic fashion fold. Contorted shoestrings, called "pulled tape," frayed out yarn, used as couturial accessories; unbleached cotton cloth as lining to fine silk and velvet wraps; gingham placed ornamentally upon sheerest organdy and voile! And think of all the ingrain carpets going to waste!

Still Removalling.

That household in a big store is still removalling. The good housekeeper is still bargain-finding, there.

Giving 'Em Fits.

When Evelyn began trying to find underwear to fit little Evelyn, it was also to begin to riot about the unfittingness of such garments to wee, sma' bodies. All too big, or too something, they were, until she almost decided she would have to take to knitting them herself. But, on the last lap of her race after something fitting, she found the place in that big Broadway store where they give attention to that very thing—underwear which really does fit little children.

The Prayers of the Rug-Wanter.

"I know now, why they are called 'prayer rugs,'" exclaimed Adaline, as we looked dotingly upon the collection of floor coverings on sale at that popular store. "Ye-es?" I questioned. "It is because you simply cannot look at them without praying that fate will kismet them into your possession! I want, oh, so devoutly! that one, and this, and those!" Seeing restraint in my look, possibly, she hastened to add: "Oh, I do not mean to be profane, or, or mundane, or whatever you deign to call it—but I do want some of those rugs and at the price, I think I really ought to have them!" Whenever Adeline wants anything, she tries to make it an economic duty to possess it; and in this case, her persuasion had good grounds.

A New Tasty.

The liquid quintessence of Spanish spicery: That is what I would call that new sauce! Made in Los Angeles, and embodying all the flavor and savor of chile and its confreres, this condiment should find its way forthwith to every discriminating table. As a gustful companion to meats, to give a dash to salad dressing, to nippitize the creamed cheese in sandwiches, and —in fact, to have and to hold in ever-readiness to help with that something of delectability which is the sine qua non of palatable cookery, this sauce is a boon.

Lenting.

During these fastful days, when vegetables are exalted to an important place upon the family table, it is well to know of cooking ways that are different. Just now, cauliflower is plentiful and good, but many object to the odor of this delicious vegetable when cooking. To obviate this, add a small onion cut fine, and, strange though it may seem, neither vegetable will emit a disagreeable odor. Neither does the onion noticeably alter the taste of the cauliflower.

Ear Puffs.

Fooled you, didn't I! You thought I would give you a recipe for some marvelous new sort of rolls or biscuits, but I was only intending to remark that the geographical location of ears was again problematical, since the renewed vogue of puffs or "buns" coiled hairfully over the ears of the extremely vogueful girl.

Golf Gamboling.

Hadn't you supposed golf to be a perfectly unexciting, even a self-righteous game? I had, until I overheard two men discussing their golf bets. Bets! BETS! Gamboling! Police! Never mind the hold-ups or the porch climbers—gamboling in Los Angeles and its adjacent territory MUST BE STOPPED! Help!

But there's no gamboling when you purchase those new silk golf stockings, a consignment of which arrived recently at that big Broadway store. To put money on those new hose is said to be as safe as buying Liberty Bonds. Of twenty-strand silk, those hose are; and warranted not to "ladder" however swift one's course, however tight one's garters. You may wear them, even if you do not golf or gambol.

Abloom in Fashion's Fields.

Hems will be deeper.

Beading is much used.

The waistline is longer.

Shoulders appear narrow.

Coats are suggestive of the cape.

Long sleeves curve over the hands.

The neck should be simple, if not plain.

Crepe and satin are used together.

The newest neck is in the form of a deep U.

The oval or egg-shaped silhouette continues.

Embroidery of straw on linen is a novelty.

One of the newest beaded bags is four panel.

Silk capes are very popular for summer wear.

The silhouette is broadening toward the hips.

The redingote back is featured in the coat dress.

The transparent sleeve has never left the world of fashion.

Folds and flounces are introduced as trimming.

Tucks are used on coats to trim sleeves and collar.

'Tis surprising, but the chemise dress is still here.

Some skirts are narrow to the necessity of employing slits.

The spring woolens are striped, squared or checked.

The new silk gloves have stitching in contrasting colors.

Cream color and black is a first choice in color combinations.

Broad picture hats are often trimmed with bands of ostrich.

Embroidery appears in the most unlikely place on suit coats.

Paris has a great vogue for underwear trimmed with color.

Orange and black is a popular combination for embroidery.

A novel coat sleeve has stole extensions which suggest a mantle.

Wolves Made to Commit Suicide.

Wolves are a plague in Alaska, where the natives are commonly obliged to store their food supplies on platforms erected seven or eight feet above the ground, thus putting them beyond the animals' reach.

Most ingenious of all wolf traps is one of extreme simplicity used by the Eskimo. It consists merely of an iron spearhead—or a suitably-shaped blade of chipped flint will serve—which is set point upward in the ice, so as to be frozen securely in position. A chunk of seal blubber is wrapped about the spearhead or flint blade and tied fast.

Alaskan wolves are marvelously keen of scent. It does not take them long to find the attractive bait, about which a snarling pack of them will gather, licking and chewing at the blubber. Presently one and another of them cut their tongues on the sharp edges of the flint or iron. Blood runs. They do not know that it is their own blood, and the taste of it drives them crazy.

Presently they begin to attack each other, the weaker being overcome by the stronger. Blood flows in streams over the ice, and soon all are killed or badly wounded. The pack is nearly destroyed, only a few perhaps being able to limp away and nurse their hurts.—[Philadelphia Ledger.

PASSING OF A MAN.

BY TRUMAN B. HANDY.

When Charles Emmet Van Loan, litterateur, sportsman and patriot, was a schoolboy in San Diego it was thought that he would develop into a premier painter. Or perhaps a musician. None of his intimates gave him credit for literary ability, although the year that he was the prize scholar of the grammar schools of that city it was predicted that he would make his mark.

But as the years passed, and he grew from the grades into the halls of a San Francisco high school, his ambition also grew. He wrote, and amused his friends with his humor. And illustrative ability to him was but a second thought, often forgotten, sometimes revived with the hope that some day—some day—he could use it to caricature the characters of his fiction.

As a boy "Charlie," as he was universally known, was an all-wool product, who reveled in sports and played a particularly good game of baseball. He sang, too, and strummed on the mandolin, and drew pictures in his leisure time. He was long-legged and gangling and handsome, and an object of worship to the other sex. And just when he arrived at an "interesting" age, he adjourned to San Francisco.

His letters written at the time he was in high school there are full of descriptions of unusual happenings. They are written in a generous hand, and in each is the thought of his friends at home. He finished his course, and returned to the Southland, and entered a local business college. And on graduating he joined the stenographic forces of the Standard Oil Company, writing at the time that "he shoved a typewriter for a hundred bucks a month." He became expert, and was promoted to the cashier's window, and went on record as being the concern's youngest executive.

Van Loan had the ambition to do well whatever he attempted. As a stenographer he became the best in his office; as cashier, the most efficient on the pay roll. Later, when he wanted to write, he became a sporting editor, and when a few years ago, he lost the use of his left arm, he wanted to play golf and often made an "80" on the links of the Los Angeles Country Club with the uninjured member. The accident that partially crippled him occurred five years ago, in the San Bernardino Mountains, when his automobile skidded over a cliff. He suffered a broken jaw, a badly bruised back and a compound fracture of the left arm.

He fell a victim to the "authors' itch," which, he said, is sometimes picked out of the empty air, in which case it is called inspiration.

"I wasn't inspired," he once wrote. "I caught the blamed thing from somebody else, being exposed to it by meeting the friend of a friend of Jack London's. This friend once removed held up a poker game to read us a manuscript, and he permitted us to examine about a dozen rejection slips bearing the names of the biggest magazines of the day. I studied the form of the document—the typewriting, spacing and paragraphing.

"It struck me immediately that if this long-haired person could attain such literary prominence, I also could cause editors to take notice of me. And I didn't think much of that yarn anyway; there wasn't enough action in it.

"With this in mind, I wrote a cheerful little story on seventeen pages of yellow foolscap, and it was full of Chinamen, detectives, gambling halls, opium joints, love's young dream, comedy relief and sudden death. There were three murders in that story, and one suicide. The most I can say for those murders is that they were thorough. The first two victims were shot six times apiece. I would have shot them more extensively, but the gun I was using accommodated only six cartridges. The third victim got off easy. There were five holes in him when the ambulance called, but that was a case of author's contrivance. I had to save the last shell so that the hero would have something with which to blow out his brains in the final paragraph. (It had to be the final paragraph, for in my boyish enthusiasm I had killed off the entire cast of characters.)

"I began shipping my cargo of corpses to the magazines, and as I knew enough to enclose return postage, I soon accumulated enough rejection slips to make me quite at home in the company of the other literary person. I put the Chinese story in the top tray of my trunk, but I didn't forget it. I was always able to fish it out and stage an author's reading. That may have been one of the reasons why my roommate packed up his dental library and took a change of venue.

"The desire to write continued to annoy me, and I turned my attention to the newspapers, where editors are in so much of a hurry that they haven't time to be too critical.

"One day a city editor offered me a job. I guess he did it to get rid of me, but I fooled him, I accepted it. I thought I was to be a reporter, and to wear an oxidized silver fire-line badge above my left suspender buckle, and arrive everywhere three jumps behind the hurry-up wagon and ten minutes ahead of the Coroner. I was mistaken.

"What I did not know was that the sporting editor of that paper had just happened to resign, and the city editor was in the market for an expert on baseball, horse racing, prize fighting, dog shows, billiard matches, yachting, track and field events, three kinds of soccer, Rugby and rough-house, bowling, lawn tennis, golf and whatever else was loose.

"Six years, and oh, what bully years they were! Six years of variety—for it wasn't always baseball games and horse races. Six years of looking at life through a kaleidoscope; of watching the Great Human Comedy from a front seat, and getting money for it! A job? No, it was a picnic—a three-ring circus!"

While he held the sport desk of a local paper, Van Loan built up the friendships that he never forgot. In the old days of rough-and-ready fighting here he was the commanding figure in his box at the ringside. And his cronies of the arena have not forgotten him. Last Tuesday night, when Frank Keenan told the crowd at the Vernon bouts that "Charlie" had taken the count, he was greeted with tears. The time-gong tolled ten times, and on the final stroke the audience, comprising the ringsiders of the vicinity, the men who go principally if a fatality occurs, commenced to pray in the darkened hall.

And if Van Loan could have had his wish he would have asked nothing more than the demonstration by his own people.

Van Loan was a product of the West. He was born at San Jose, and the happiest hours of his life were spent here in the golden sunlight. Every time he "blew in" to the East he took with him whiffs of Pacific salt air, and the atmosphere of California flower gardens and orange groves. He loved Los Angeles better than any other place on earth, although he never talked of it like a real estate purveyor.

And he married a westerner, and as he was a man with a big brain, he was apt to be absent-minded at times when preoccupied. The day of his first marriage he was at tea with a friend.

"Where's your wife, Charlie?" he was asked. "Won't she miss you?"

"Oh, that's so, that's so," he recollected. "Maybe she will. I've never been married before, and I kind of forgot."

Van Loan's favorite philosophy was faith in his fellow-humans. It was his creed that God is good, California is Arcady, golf is the pastime de luxe of all ages, the Allies would win in a walk, and magazine writing rates would go up with other prices.

The humor and patriotism of his pen were the humor and patriotism of the man himself translated, interpreted. No mental fertility exceeded his, and he brought to the help of his fancy a wit, an esprit, which made everything he touched sparkle and sing. And finally his regard for his fellows brought to his pen all the tenderness of which fancy is capable, plus a delightful insight into human nature which entranced his contemporaries and which will have the power still of pleasing a later and more fastidious age.

He has left his mark.

When McCormack Received Less.

The announcement that the receipts of a recent recital by John McCormack in St. Louis, exceeded $12,000, recalls the interesting fact that the tenor, beginning his career in that city fifteen years ago, received $48.50 a week for singing in the Irish Village at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Thus, the financial returns from one night's concert are now about 250 times what McCormack was able to earn in a week in 1904. After severing relations with the Irish Village, McCormack went to Italy to study, and won his first fame in opera at Covent Garden, London.—[Detroit News.

and package leaving the District will carry the message. The slogan is printed on the letterheads of numerous firms outside the city, concerns that have consented in this way to help the people of the District.

Many of the answers received in reply to the little postscript disclose the fact that business men and others in cities outside the District are unaware of the voteless condition of the people of Washington.

A firm in Rochester, N. Y., wrote: "It was really a great surprise to us to learn from the imprint on your letterhead that the residents of the District of Columbia are taxpayers without representation." The writer promised to bring the question before the local trade association at its next meeting and asks for further information as to the assistance he can render to the District's people.

Another firm writes from Texas: "We shall be very glad to bring the matter before our local commercial body. We shall be pleased to present the matter to our Congressmen and Senators with the hope that the taxpayers of your District will receive the consideration they deserve."

FOR AMENDMENT.

The question as to the necessity of a constitutional amendment to secure suffrage for the District is repeatedly discussed and debated in the city. Many of the residents of the District believe that such action would be unnecessary.

Advocates of the amendment hold that as the Constitution gives Congress exclusive jurisdiction over the District, the Constitution must be altered before the people of the District can share in their own lawmaking. Opponents of the amendment believe that the right of exclusive jurisdiction gives Congress the power to bestow upon the residents of the city the rights of citizenship whenever it sees fit. The consensus of opinion among the leading business men of the city seems to be that the amendment would expedite matters, and it is for the amendment that they are working.

For the residents of the District who do not use letterheads [illegible] has been designed by O. F. [illegible] Washington a little "Suffrage for the District" sticker, bearing the same appeal as the postscript in the same words.

Since the stickers appeared in February, over 25,000 of them have been pasted to letters and packages going out from the Districts.

OUR POSTAL SAVINGS.

It is a fact not generally understood among us that the United States has one of the best postal savings bank systems in the world, although, considering our population, its depositors represent a very small percentage of our money savers. There are at present approximately 600,000 patrons of our postal savings bank system, carrying deposits that average $242.

This is a high-water mark for the size of average deposits, but there was, during the final six months of the war, an actual falling off in the number of depositors of more than 60,000.

The most popularly supported postal savings bank system in the world is in Switzerland, where over half of the population are depositors. In England one person in twenty is a patron of a postoffice bank, while in the United States only about one person out of 170 saves money in this manner.—[The [illegible] Magazine.

American vs. English Dentistry.

"The Americans have it all over the English when it comes to dentistry," writes a correspondent from overseas. "The English dentist seems to feel that the thing to do with an aching tooth is to pull it out and end the pain, while the American dentist tries to save all he can. You see women everywhere whose clothes indicate that they are in prosperous circumstances who have teeth missing from the front of their mouths and who make no effort to cover their losses. An American woman with teeth out in front would feel that she is almost unfit to be seen until she can get the dentist to have porcelain teeth bridged in. American dentists are in great demand both in England and France. It is said that many Americans in the army medical forces are planning to remain on the other side of the water for the practice of their profession with the ending of the war."

DALMATIA LAND OF THE "BORA."

Strip of Sea Coast Scourged by Dread Sirocco.

Long Swept by Racial as Well as Climatic Tempests.

Two Natives Become Scholars Famous in World History.

[From National Geographic Society Bulletin.]

Small wonder that Dalmatia, which was under Austrian control until the European war, should form one of the most sharply-contested regions in the rival Italian and Jugo-slav claims, for this strip of sea and land, for eight centuries, has been swept by continuous racial tempests. With an area about equal to Connecticut, Dalmatia is so shaped that nowhere is it more than thirty-five miles wide, and it narrows down to but a mile at Cattaro.

With a climate of extreme temperatures, hot and dry when the sirocco (hot southeast wind) sweeps over it, cold and wet when the dread bora, or "wind of the dead," comes from the sea and terrorizes mariners along its shores, peasants find life a struggle. The land is not fertile, much of it is not arable at all, and a common rural picture is that of men and women cultivating grapes and figs and olives on terraces on the sides of the frequent hills.

Perhaps that is why the women, so far as the work is concerned, are sturdy and docile, and willingly lend themselves as burden bearers and [illegible]. They are primitive enough to find relaxation in festivals, weddings, funerals and fetes, and at such times they form the picturesque groups Dalmation travelers tell about, with bright-colored costumes, headpieces decorated with coins and [illegible] bedecked with jewels.

LATIN INFLUENCE IN CITIES.

The Croats and Serbians constitute the Slavic element in Dalmatia. They speak the same language, but employ two alphabets. The Serbs use the Russian and the Croats the Latin letters.

In the cities the Latin influence is more prevalent. The reason therefor is the story of Dalmatia.

In the Middle Ages the Dalmatians were a people without the consciousness of a country. During the Slav influx into Illyria the invaders encountered little opposition, even in Dalmatia, except in the seaport towns. The Latin element in the cities resisted the migration and thus engendered the strife for supremacy which persists to this day.

Much of the early rivalry was economic. Tradesmen and farmers naturally wished to exchange their goods with the Hungarians. The coast cities preferred to do business with Venice, which controlled Dalmatia.

Though Dalmatia did not develop a strong national feeling of her [illegible] neighbors," because of her [illegible] population, she made rapid [illegible] science and literature. But the story of her culture is one of individual achievement, rather than general advancement. Thus it came about that this early seat of Balkan culture had no printing press in its capital city, Zara, until 1796, and, in the eighteenth century, Venetian Dalmatia had only one public school.

One famous son of Dalmatia was Roger Joseph Boscovich, esteemed by scientists for his work setting forth a new atomic theory, but more popularly known because of the adoption of his plan for assuring the [illegible] of the dome of St. Peter's at Rome, when a crack was discovered in it. He taught, experimented, wrote numerous treatises, went on a diplomatic mission to England when the neutrality of his native city, Ragusa, was questioned, and wrote verse as voluminously, and not so successfully, as he wrote scientific works. Upon one occasion he penned 5000 Latin lines to set forth the fundamentals of astronomy, with copious footnotes, which critics asserted were not helpful to them, and which the public apparently did not find readable.

Marco Antoni de Dominis mingled theology and natural philosophy with dire consequences to himself. He set forth the first correct explanation of the rainbow. But his theological career was less fruitful. As archbishop of Spalato he attacked his ecclesiastical superiors in his writings, fled to England, returned to Rome and did penance with a rope about his neck in St. Peter's, and wrote a book refuting his heretical views. Then he was tried by the Inquisition. He died before the trial ended, but the trial went on. He was sentenced, two months after his death, to be dragged through the streets of Rome and to be burned publicly. His body was removed from its coffin and the sentence executed.

Dalmatia's beauties have been recounted by many travelers. Among the scores of islands off its coast are many rich in history, such as Lissa and Lessina, where Roman and Greek relics are to be found; [illegible] with its ten caverns, the most beautiful of which is the Blue Grotto, entered by boat, and Lacroma, off Ragusa, where Richard Coeur de Lion is said to have found shelter during a storm on his return from the Crusades and to have built a church there in compliance with a vow so to honor his place of refuge.

THE PROFITABLE AND PROLIFIC PEANUT.

Every time a gamin in the Ghetto of New York or Chicago sinks his teeth into a peanut bar or purchases a bag of "red hots" from a street vender, by just so much is the commonwealth of Texas made wealthier; by just so much does the State gain in affluence; by just so much is her standing as the bell-wether of States made more certain.

Primarily planted as a substitute crop and as a barrier growth against the incursions of the boll weevil, the peanut has become one of the most profitable and prolific crops in the State. Though the largest acreage of peanuts is found in the eastern part of Texas, Dallas county has many fields of the small, Spanish variety and the succulent nut is finding new friends among the farmers every year. It has been estimated that [illegible] bushels of nuts are used in the candy industry every year. Peanut butter, peanut cream and peanut oil—just a few by-products of the crop—are being exploited more and more each month and are finding wider and wider favor as a seasoning and as a delicacy.—[Dallas Times-Herald.

BITS OF VERSE.

"Say, Bill—"

Well, Bill, it's sort of quiet since the Kaiser cut and run,
Although our job's not finished, why,
the toughest part is done;
And today I got to wonderin', just concernin' me and you,
Of how it's goin' to be with us, and what we're goin' to do.

For we've heard the shells a-whinin,' and a-ploppin' overhead,
And we've seen the pale moon shinin' on the tangled heaps of dead;
We have seen the rockets soarin' and we've heard the cannon roarin,'
And we've felt the sting of fightin' when our eyes was seein' red.

For the time is soon a-comin' when together you and me
Will be packin' on a troopship for our trip across the sea;
And first thing before we know it, we'll be walkin' up the street
We swung along, seems no time since, with restless, eager feet.

And you'll go to sellin' sugar in your dinky little store,
And you'll swear the eggs is fresh laid, as you've very often swore;
And I'll shine the same old trousers on the same old office seat,
As I pound the same old clicker that
I always used to beat.

We' who've smelled the smoke of battle, and have tingled to the thrill
Of the joyous love of conquest and the maddened lust to kill—
We'll go back and maybe marry, now the battle flags is furled,
Settle down and raise a family—
Hell, Bill, this is sure some world!

My Star.

I have a gold star on my breast,
A star of strife, a star of rest;
It marks a sword thrust through my heart,
It tells of glory and of pain,
Of bitter loss and wondrous gain,
Of youth that played the hero's part.

O star of gold upon my breast,
Tell of those stars that he loved best;
He bore the stripes, he suffered all
To keep our banner free from stain;
He hath not given all in gain
In answering his nation's call.

O star of hope upon my breast,
Strengthen the faith I have professed!
He died that nations might be free;
Help me to live for truth and right,
And with my woman's soul to fight
Nerved by his immortality.

Her Little Cheek.

Her little cheek will be as sweet, my boy,
When you come home, as on that day of joy
When at the altar she became your dear
Forever and forever — don't you fear!

Her little arms will be as soft and fair
When you come home, and just as gold her hair
As when you tossed its silken threads that day
You said good-by, entrained, and went away!

Her little smile will be as dear, my lad,
When you come home, as on that morn so glad
With love's fine fragrance of immortal things
And all the world to you was flowers and wings!

Her little heart will be the same,
dear kid,
When you come home, and, 'neath her blushes hid,
You'll find her mouth and in her wondrous kiss
The longed-for, heavenly, happiest of bliss!

White Magic.

Blind folk see the fairies,
Oh, better far than we,
Who miss the shining of their wings
Because our eyes are filled with things
We do not wish to see.
They need not seek enchantment
From solemn printed books,
For all about them as they go
The fairies flutter to and fro
With smiling, friendly looks.

Deaf folk hear the fairies,
However soft their song;
'Tis we who lose the honey sound
Amid the clamor all around
That beats the whole day long.
But they with gentle faces
Sit quietly apart;
What room have they for sorrowing
While fairy minstrels sit and sing
Close to their listening heart?

ANTHRAX LAID TO SHAVING BRUSHES

A year-long fight to prevent the spread through the A.E.F. of anthrax, a malignant disease communicable from horses to man, resulted in a Federal regulation requiring that all shaving brushes must be stamped with the name of the manufacturer.

This fact has just been made known by the Chief Surgeon's office in connection with a report on communicable diseases during 1918, which showed that, in the twelve months, thirty cases of anthrax developed among American soldiers in France, and that the disease was rapidly fatal in many of the cases.

Practically all the cases occurred among newly-arrived troops, and were traced to the use of infected shaving brushes. As a part of the prevention campaign, thousands of brushes under suspicion were taken from Q.M.C. stores and sterilized.

The disease is characterized by the appearance of what looks to be a boil at the back of the jaw. The sore develops rapidly, deepens malignantly, and, in the absence of prompt surgical attention, usually causes death within several days. Most of the cases in the A.E.F. followed small cuts, made while shaving.—[Stars and Stripes.

Logical.

A Richmond youngster had quite a list of toys he wished for Christmas. His mother took him downtown to see the toys, so that she could know just what sort of gun, wagon, etc., he desired. He noticed the way she exhibited to him the different styles of the toys he had ordered, and her anxiety worried him. Finally he could stand it no longer. "Mamma," he broke out, "if you want to so badly you can just buy me all those things now and when I get home I'll think up something else for you to get me for Christmas."—[Indianapolis News.

BROADWAY, FOURTH AND HILL.

"TAY PAY" ON PARLIAMEN

Not Subservient to Any One and Highly Intellectual.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, March 1.—I have spent nearly every hour the last two weeks at sittings of the new House of Commons, and am now able to form some judgments of its composition and future. First, it will not be subservient to Lloyd George or anybody else as anticipated. Bonar Law's progress in getting big changes in the present rules of order, with a view to accelerating the progress of bills, saving time and preventing more filibustering, was embarrassed at every step by pronounced and obstinate criticism, mainly from coalition members, and he was forced to make several changes in his original programme.

My second impression was that a House with so many members new to parliamentary or even political life was like an ingenuous child delighted with a new toy, but quite uncertain as to whether to kiss it or to pull it to pieces. Thirdly, these youthful members of Parliament have in most cases been elected on no definite political programme. Support of Lloyd George, "the man who has won the war," "hang the Kaiser," "make Germany pay full indemnity," represent good electioneering catchwords, but not stable political opinions. While, then, it is true the majority are conservatives, projectionists and some profiteers, their political ties are not strong enough to make certain any anticipations as to their course. The supreme feature and distinction between this and other parliaments is the absence of clearly-defined political opinion. My fourth impression is that this is a singularly cool House intellectually. This is due not merely to the absence of all great old figures, but the abilities of political service, but for readiness to pay election expenses and subscribe largely to the party funds.

ADHERES TO INDIVIDUALS.

Fifth, this Parliament differs from all others in the substitution of adhesion to a particular man instead of to party conviction. But adhesion to Lloyd George by a Tory majority must always be capricious, for the fortunes of every individual figure in our changeful parliamentary system vary daily, sometimes hourly, and parasites that fawn upon such a figure in his hour of prosperity turn on him the first moment he seems to slip. Two things alone can keep this House faithful to Lloyd George—first, the hatred of every member for surrendering the social and other distinction of a parliamentary seat and the big expense of getting it; secondly, sheer terror at the many perils to capital, because of present unrest of labor and its growing demands and faith that Lloyd George is best able to confront it.

Already this dreaded specter has brought to the knowledge of even the narrowest reactionary that the weakness of the present House of Commons is due to over-representation of Toryism and under-representation of popular elements, as a result of a general election where minority members slipped into seats through split votes between Liberal and Labor.

The Westminster Gazette, which carries on a strenuous and not less deadly, because polite, campaign against Lloyd George, comments on the national conference between capital and labor as an admission that such capital and labor are not adequately matched in the House of Commons itself, and that this conference must therefore be regarded as a supplement, if not substitute, for that direct consultation between the two forces which ought to have been found in the House of Commons.

MINERS' PROSPECTS GOOD.

The probability of the moment is that the miners will get most of their demands in the matter of reduction of hours and increase in wages, but their further demands for nationalization of mines will remain for future discussion. It is a sign of the extraordinary times in which we live that such a suggestion is not merely advocated by some important journals like the New Statesman, the organ of the State Socialist party, or inspired by Sidney Webb and Bernard Shaw, but debated with some moderation by the old moderate Liberal journals. Even mine owners themselves show a sense of the threatening situation by discussing joint management of their mines by owners and miners.

I have no news as to Ireland, where there is a pause largely owing to the illness of Lord French, who, though papers said little about it, hovered between life and death for some days, even now making slow recovery. The release of Sinn

Once Gray-Haired Not Always So

—No longer is it necessary for man or woman to be held back on account of gray hair. The business world takes keen notice of gray hair nowadays—but why worry, when it can be easily restored to its natural color with the wonderful Co-Lo Hair Restorer?

THE VENICE OF PRUSSIA.

Danzig, Claimed by Poland, a City of Many Canals.

Streets are Crooked Enough to Suggest Boston.

Famous St. Mary's Church Like Mighty Fortress.

[From Bulletin of National Geographic Society.]

Picture a far north Venice, cut through with streams and canals, equipped also with a sort of irrigation system to flood the country for miles about, not for cultivation, but for defense; a city of typical Philadelphia streets, only with those long rows of stoops made of stone and highly decorated, and jutting into the roadway instead of on the sidewalk, and you catch a glimpse of the composite Danzig.

As a city of churches Danzig vies with Brooklyn; its crooked, winding streets suggest those Boston thoroughfares of cowpath derivation; and were its grain warehouses more modern the visitor might believe himself in Minneapolis. Minneapolis, that is, until he heard their names—such names as Golden Pelican, Little Ship, Gray Goose and Milk Maid—then he might look about for some popular resorts of New York's Greenwich Village.

FORTRESS-LIKE CHURCH.

Physically, Danzig escaped many effects of the Reformation. Even in her famous St. Mary's Church, one of the largest Protestant edifices in the world, covering an area as great as the Cathedral of Notre Dame in Paris, are to be found reliquaries and manuscripts, embroideries of Roman, Byzantine and Gothic designs, treasures in precious metals, stones and ivories, and a noted collection of vestments. In appearance almost as much like a fortress as a church, bringing to mind Luther's militant hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," the church has been called "one of the most German things in Germany." In many ways it suggests the Prussian militaristic spirit. From the vaulting, for example, projects one of Napoleon's cannon balls.

The streets of Danzig are lined with ornate old houses of the Hanseatic period, crowned with high gables, often profusely ornamented. Balconies overhang the streets and in spite of the impediment they offer to traffic many of the elevated stone porches remain. Gargoyles grin from ancient walls. Vistas abound. There are many old water gates. One of these, the Hohe Tor, is fashioned after a Roman arch. Another, the Kran Thor, with each successive story projecting farther than the one below, looks like the leaning tower of Pisa.

A VARIED EXISTENCE.

Danzig's beginnings are not known. Poland, Denmark, Pomerania and Brandenburg held it at various early times. In the fourteenth century it came under the sway of the Teutonic knights. Not long afterward it became one of the four centers of the Hanseatic League. With the decline of the league it allied itself with Poland, retaining most of its rights as a free city. Russians and Saxons took the city and the score or more neighboring villages it governed in 1734.

When Poland was partitioned, four years before the American colonists signed the Declaration of Independence, Danzig was separated from Poland, and twenty-one years later Prussia gained possession of it. Again made a free city by Napoleon, it passed once more to Poland, then back to Prussia in 1814.

PRODUCTION AND USES OF VEGETABLE TALLOW

The American Consul at Hankow in 1906 reported that a small consignment of vegetable tallow had been shipped from Hankow to the United States as a sample, but that no business had resulted therefrom, and all of the exports of this product—about 26,000,000 pounds for the year—had gone to Europe. The American Consul at Hankow in 1918, reporting on the trade for 1917, stated that 10,500,000 pounds of vegetable tallow, valued at $1,400,000, were exported to the United States, out of a total export from China of 20,200,000 pounds. Hankow handles the whole of China's exports of this product. The best quality, the Kinchow, and the second quality, also white, are used in making high-grade toilet soaps and face creams. The third and fourth qualities, which are of a greenish shade, are used in cheaper soap and candle manufacture.—[Commerce Reports.

A YANK IN VERDUN

BY H. SPEARMAN LEWIS.

Our car was at the crest of the hill, in what had been No Man's Land. Barbed wire entanglements stretched in every direction like wheat fields. And yet men had fought through them and whipped machine-gun crews as well.

Trenches were as plentiful and varied as chicken tracks. Some were holding as well as if occupied yesterday. Others had caved in from winter rains. All showed superhuman and everlasting labor.

No trees, not even stumps. No rocks—just road, fields, yellow dirt to mark the trenches, rusty wire and rain and mud—and so they lived till the Yanks went over. Today the field has been cleaned and swept and salvaged by the cleaners until nothing remains but the barbed wire, too hazardous to handle.

We passed from what had been the Yank-French front line trenches to the German trenches—perhaps 150 feet—quite casually. I was conscious of no sensation except intense solitude and calm. When we returned to our car a great white road stretched before us rebuilt by doughboys who otherwise are marking time while the Peace Conference deliberates. In fact, the arteries of France have been reopened by the boys in khaki while diplomacy fences.

When we reached Essey, well within the devastated area, I stepped from the car into hell with the fires drawn, the basement flooded, the walls caved in and the roof blown off! Underfoot was a slimy but open road—rebuilt with a neatness that mocked the chaos of the little church that had slid into the main street and had been dumped back uphill again.

The church seemed to offer shelter and I slid up the hill to find four walls and no roof. In the chancel scattered about were a lot of funny little figures. One, a bishop or something, had his hand extended as if in frantic warning not to approach. A bit of his face had been chipped away and the little man was as earnestly bidding us be careful as though breath was in him.

A negro emerging from a crude shelter carrying a piping hot tin of stew, directed us without questioning to the source of our heart's and stomach's desire. It may once have been a stable or a cafe, the front room of the leading citizen or a wagon shelter. Shells leave no identifying cards. Today it serves as a semi-shelter for a mess sergeant's field stove, with what is left of the walls serving as a windbreak. A section of the roof remained intact. A hole above served as a natural chimney for there was not enough stove pipe to reach the roof and the smoke just went up and out.

From this crude kitchen many men were being served—fifty or a hundred. The shelter was very small so they filled their mess kits and stepped outside. Outside in the rain, and with the ruins of a brick wall as their table, they stood and ate.

We were very hungry and the beefsteak and potatoes were very good. We passed around the cigarettes and got an extra pot of American coffee.

At Flirey—Flirey of fame—the complete desolation came to me more poignantly than at any other point—not because it was Flirey, for after leaving Essey ruins made no further impressions upon me except the cumulative operation of convictions that were rapidly forming.

My first view of Flirey—once a village of, say, 300 houses—was from a hilltop bisected by our road. No one lives there now, nor has lived there for months, except the outpost doughboy. And in all this universe of ruin we had parked our car in the center of a road over which it seemed as if no other human would ever travel, to be politely told to "move on" by an M.P. (military police) who steeped from nowhere and directed a second truant car upon its way as majestically as if he had been policing traffic at Spring and Fifth streets.

The balance of the day was a blur of ruins, one village fading into another. I remember Thiacourt because a fine Carolian, whose battalion buried the dead, told me how the Yanks had got the Huns' goat at Thiacourt by walking right up to his wire, digging in "just about enough to scratch the sod, and calmly shooting it out" with the Hun intrenched in concrete dugouts and sandbag shelters. Many Yanks made the big investment, but the boys who came on took pay in full.

The hill up which they crawled and dug and went hungry and thirsty as, inch by inch, they cut the distance looks like a mountain. It is pockmarked with shallow holes.

Still, Thiacourt was but an incident, freshened in memory only because of the looming hill and because, a month ago, in a little Dijon cafe, I had heard the story of its taking from a man who had buried its dead. And he told it very quietly, as do those who have chummed with death.

The following day we set forth for St. Mihiel. We had hoped to get to Verdun, but an early blowout in our machine made St. Mihiel our terminal. St. Mihiel is famous in this war as the apex of the wedge that the Germans shoved into that area and held for four years—until the Yanks blew him out last summer.

They say that preliminary bombardment and barrage were classic in military annals. I have heard it described technically. All I know is that Gen. Pershing decided that salient was a good place to blot out to give his doughboys a little appetizing work, and the whole crushing force of the American army was turned loose there one night.

In thirty-six hours the salient wasn't; 17,000 prisoners had been captured and an area of fifteen to twenty miles deep at that point had been "liberated," which is a military term and substitute for blown up and made uninhabitable.

One house in St. Mihiel is typical of all, although St. Mihiel is not totally destroyed. A great hole through the roof, or through a wall. An explosion that blows off most of a roof, sends the floors crashing to the cellar. Where the floors once rested is cut as clean from the supporting walls as though done with a razor. Some buildings have been reduced to powder. Seldom do marks of fire show in the smaller buildings. Made of stone, there is little to burn. The house of cards just comes tumbling down.

We set out for Verdun, via a western road from Toul, going in a general way in the direction of Bar le Duc, Commercy, crossing the Meuse and following the left bank to a point fifteen miles out of Verdun, where we crossed on an engineers' made bridge and entered Verdun from the national highway.

Much of the road in the valley of the Meuse was very bad. The river is high and the ground marshy. Water frequently up to car wheel hubs. Valley here is from one to two miles wide, commanded on both sides by hills, and it was here that the two great armies fought back and forth in the water, losing thousands of men. But the Yanks got across!

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon a doughboy stepped from his sentry box and waved us across a draw bridge, and we were in Verdun, cemetery of Hohenzollern hopes! As towns go in Europe, Verdun is something of an infant. Its present citadel dates back only some 600 or 700 years; hence it is rather among the moderns.

The nearest thing I can give you as a simile is an inverted coffee cup on one of the old-fashioned and expansive soup plates. The soup plate not inverted. The inverted cup is Verdun.

Inside the cup, tunneled far below even the high-explosive shells, lived the resting or supporting troops; 35,000 could be taken care of there when relieved from period of trenches.

The actual hand-to-hand fighting, in which the Huns admit losing more than 500,000 men killed and wounded, all occurred on the ridge of hills five miles out. The French held the trenches just far enough over the hills to see what the Boche was doing on the other side. Occasionally the Boche would make a specially-determined drive and would get over the ridge of the hill. In fact, he took two outlying forts, or strong points.

But he didn't get Verdun, and he didn't nearly get it. He partially encircled it and he shelled the citadel and the little town clustered about it to his heart's content. But the Meuse still lay between, and men slept and rested underground, and ammunition was stored there, and food cooked, and clothes dried.

We were punctillious to obtain French permission to enter the citadel. A Poilu was detailed as our guide, and we tramped up and down the underground corridors for two hours. It takes four to complete that circuit. The side of the passageways or tunnels is about that of a subway bore. The walls are of brick, dry, white-washed, and steam pipes crackle cheerily. We are 300 feet underground.

Soldier garrisons were eating, drinking their red wines, sleeping. A moving-picture theater, a chapel with right pretty stained-glass windows and a great kitchen claimed our attention.

Floors of concrete, with a little narrow-gauge track buried along each passageway—for ammunition and supplies. Electric lights blazed and the hush of earth weighed solemnly.

A winding stairway took us to the open sky, and I stood atop of Verdun, and I looked out across the Meuse. A shell had splinted the rock at my feet. I picked up two small pieces and shoved them in my coat. And right over there—right along those hills—a million men had fallen!

Verdun will be rebuilt, because it is a railroad head and a strategic military point. Today it is more wrecked than not, but still habitable in some sections that nestle outside the great citadel.

CHURCHES ARE ASKED TO AID HOME GARDENS.

MINISTERS REQUESTED TO CARRY MESSAGE TO CONGREGATIONS FEBRUARY 2.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Forty thousand ministers, covering every denomination in the United States, have been requested by the National War Garden Commission to aid in the campaign for victory gardens. The commission suggests that on Sunday, February 2, the message of the importance of home food production should be carried to the congregations.

The National War Garden Commission is sending to the 40,000 ministers data on home food production and garden books. The United Society of Christian Endeavorers, from its headquarters in Boston, has joined in the campaign, and the Rev. Francis E. Clark has sent out a call to thousands of members of that organization with the commission's data. The letter from the commission to the ministers says, in part:

"To co-operate with the plans worked out by the United States Food Administration for helping to solve the post-war food problems, the commission's efforts for increased food production and home conservation will be continued during 1919.

"This commission bespeaks your helpful co-operation in conveying to your people the message of food needs. To give this message intensive force, it is suggested that these needs be emphasized the same day throughout the country. May we ask that you bring the matter before your congregation on February 2, 1919, and that you suggest that copies of our books on 'Home Gardening' and 'Home Canning and Drying' may be had free of charge upon application to this commission."

Reports of the National War Garden Commission show that organization work is going on in nearly every town in the United States. Thousands of posters are now being distributed through the agricultural agents of the United States Railroad Administration and other agencies in the various towns and cities.

TESLA'S LATEST.

Moon Does Not Rotate, nor do Radiograms Through Air.

In an article in the Electrical Experimenter, Nikola Tesla, inventor, classes as "famous scientific illusions" the generally accepted theory of the moon's axial rotation, the theory of the pointed lightning rod and the theory that wireless messages go through the air.

"It is well known since the discovery of Galileo that the moon, in traveling through space, always turns the same face toward the earth," says Mr. Tesla's article. "That is explained by stating that while passing once around its mother planet the lunar globe performs just one revolution on its axis. The spinning motion of a heavenly body must necessarily undergo modifications in the course of time, being either retarded by resistances internal or external, or accelerated owing to shrinkage or other causes. An unalterable rotational velocity through all phases of planetary evolution is manifestly impossible."

Dr. Tesla says that a cosmic coincidence which would make the moon revolve just once every time it makes an orbital journey around the earth would be miraculous.

"The moon does rotate," he concludes, "not on its own, but about an axis passing through the center of the earth, the true and only one."

Dr. Tesla says that wireless messages between stations any great distance apart do not follow the earth's curvature through the air, but pass directly through the earth [illegible] says that Hertzian waves [illegible] through the thin strata of [illegible]tive air would constantly be [illegible]ed against the nonconductive [illegible] close to the earth's surface, [illegible] therefore in a sort of [illegible] losing force immeasurably [illegible] rebound. Only an infinitesimal [illegible] of the original wave strength, [illegible] says, would reach the receiver.

He visions a great station [illegible] will one day keep the earth [illegible] with just enough electricity to [illegible] wireless sending tremendously [illegible]ple.

Gen. O'Ryan's Constellation.

It is not often that a [illegible] command perpetrates a pun [illegible] veritable pun, however, has [illegible] imprinted on the helmets and [illegible]tor trucks of the American Twenty-seventh Division. A recent [illegible] of the Gas Attack shows a [illegible] in which a number of stars [illegible] arranged as to correspond with constellation Orion. Now, as [illegible] one knows, the gallant and [illegible] commander of that division is [illegible] O'Ryan. The idea is clever, and [illegible]haps a bit humorous. Certainly O'Ryan has proved himself a [illegible]tary star, and the Twenty-[illegible] Division in its capture of Mont [illegible]mel and its thrust through the [illegible]denburg Line south of Cambrai truly entitled to be considered [illegible] constellation.—[Outlook.

A two-year appropriation [illegible] $1,000,000 will be asked of P[illegible]vania's Legislature for the [illegible] assistance fund, to be used for [illegible]sions.

A SANDSTORM IN THE DESERT

A SANDSTORM IN THE DESERT.

Mohammed El-Habib's Journey Across the Sahara.

Keeps Alive by Diet of Camel's Milk and Dates.

Moslem Faith and Hope Endured to the End.

[Special Correspondence, London Times.]

It was Mohammed el-Habib, who came from the untraveled deserts far away to the south of Morocco, who told the story of the sandstorm to the writer. For a long time he would come, perhaps once a year, to visit the writer at Tangier, riding [illegible] days on his camel from his desert home to Mogador, and thence another sixteen to twenty days on mule to Tangier, for he seldom ventured on the sea. He would stay a week or two, and then, wearying for the desert, leave as unexpectedly as he had arrived.

In a moonlit garden in Fez Mohammed el-Habib told the true story of the sandstorm:

"God's spring was over and God's summer was upon us, for every season, good or bad, is God's season, and every day God's day. In the days of prosperity our thoughts are only for the present; in the days of distress we forget the days of prosperity. Days come and days go, and every day is written in the books of God.

"And with the summer came the great heat, and with the heat the withering of the grass and the drying up of the little pools in the stony [illegible]. So we dwellers in the black tents descended to the lower lands, where even in summer there is water in the wells, some [illegible] of us in all, numbering the women and children, with our flocks of sheep and our herds of camels. [illegible] days we passed on, and the camels grazed on such dry thorn [illegible] as they could find by the way, while our sheep ate as is the manner of the country, for each [illegible] carried, tied to his back, a [illegible] hay, cut and dried in the [illegible] that one and all nibbled [illegible] went, and each carried food [illegible] his neighbor.

"[illegible] we reached the summer [illegible] there grew even palm trees [illegible] bushes, and we pitched [illegible]-hair tents in a circle and [illegible] after our journey. And when [illegible] and sheep and the shep[illegible] rested we dispersed them [illegible] the surrounding country, to [illegible] the dry grass, and, lest the [illegible] be reduced, we sent [illegible] afield, for there were other [illegible] the country round.

"[illegible] the she-camels that were in [illegible] kept with us, and our food [illegible] dates and milk. The dates [illegible] purchased and brought with [illegible] milk there was always a [illegible]. Bread we had none, and [illegible] sugar we ate only on the [illegible] days. And in the sum[illegible] man can hunt or go abroad, [illegible] is the heat. Day is as the [illegible] of a furnace, and at night [illegible] is only half-closed. Our [illegible] spent under the shade of [illegible], listening to the wise men [illegible] the Word of God and [illegible] our children; and all can [illegible] write, and many know the [illegible] Koran by heart—and may [illegible] rest on such.

"[illegible] came, and days went by, [illegible] day was marked in the [illegible] God. And then came the [illegible] that brings fear to the [illegible] dwellers in tents. For [illegible] it blew softly, but the [illegible] it increased in strength, [illegible] wings it bore the fine [illegible]—and little whirlwinds [illegible] of dust that passed [illegible] above our tents, scat[illegible]. And we prayed to God [illegible] merciful with parched lips [illegible] blood—for the heat was [illegible] of God. Hard we [illegible] the wells, but we [illegible] to cover them, and hour [illegible] wells were choked by [illegible] sand. Our eyes, in pain, [illegible] but death, before us, [illegible] water in the water-skins [illegible], for we had filled [illegible] before the wells were [illegible] buried them in the [illegible] wind drinks the [illegible] through the skins. Under [illegible] resisted the tempest [illegible] and awaited the judg[illegible] praying the while. And [illegible] blew, and the daylight [illegible] only the darkness [illegible] the women lifted up [illegible] and wailed, and refused [illegible].

"[illegible] still the wind blew. [illegible] were scattered in the [illegible], and our camels, [illegible] necks, lay low to [illegible] uttering dull groans, and [illegible] distended in terror. [illegible] again one would [illegible] its hobbles and [illegible] the desert to die. [illegible] the wind blew.

"[illegible] water was almost done, and [illegible] in the face, and [illegible] in the roaring [illegible] counsel, though our [illegible] be heard in the [illegible] wind, and some decided [illegible] other wells, three [illegible] off, and others de[illegible] and trust in God. [illegible] too weak to move, [illegible] sufficiency of water for [illegible] and such as went forth [illegible] upon their cam[illegible], and after con[illegible] to the care of God [illegible]—and none to this [illegible] they died.

"[illegible] wind blew. [illegible] water that remained [illegible] in a large bowl, for [illegible] had cracked and [illegible] hold it, and we [illegible] up to its rim in the [illegible] it with a wet [illegible].

"[illegible] the woman, my wife, [illegible] us, has led us [illegible] of death; but let [illegible]. He and He alone, [illegible] and our deaths [illegible]. Many have passed [illegible] many will follow, and [illegible] the child ——! Be[illegible] still a bowl of water. [illegible] not drink,' and in [illegible] will give the child [illegible], and you and I will [illegible]—but we will leave [illegible] bowl for him, so that [illegible] him die.'

"[illegible] down to sleep, and at [illegible] ill at ease and [illegible] he had only five sum[illegible] little life. When dawn [illegible] gleam in the sand[illegible], for it was the hour [illegible]. And I knew not if I [illegible] my eyes saw truly, for [illegible] door of the tent was [illegible] the bowl of water [illegible] and from the bowl [illegible] antelope, the [illegible] God's creatures, who never approaches man or the habitations of man. And the child laughed as the antelope drank. I woke the woman, my wife, and she saw, too, and we marveled, and neither the child nor the antelope heeded us. And the woman cried: 'Behold, the little water we kept for the child is gone; surely death is very nigh.'

"And when the antelope had finished drinking it stood still, and the child laid down the bowl and cast his little arms round the antelope's neck and kissed each of its beautiful eyes and laughed again.

"And the spirit of poetry came upon me, and I stood up and declaimed:

'The hunter and the hunted have become as one;
Thirst and fear of death have brought them together.
In the hunter's tent the hunted one drank life from the hands of the hunter's child,
And their love is sealed with a kiss of peace.'

"And still the wind blew.

"And the woman cried: 'I am athirst. How long, O God, how long!' And I soothed her and spoke to her: 'God will not take the life of the child who gave his hope of life to the antelope.'

"And then the wind ceased, and the silence was as a great emptiness.

"And God's rain fell."

The Seamstress

Freedom? Yes'm, they is a good many kind of freedom, for instance.

Yes'm, they's freedom from nagging and freedom from asking your husband for every 10 cents you get, and they's freedom from neighbors' gossip and they's freedom from having somebudy always wanting to snatch your soul from the burnin', and they's freedom from dust and freedom from too much rain, and they's—.

Ma'm? How did I happen to be athinking so much about freedom this morning?

Well, I think the kind of morning it is reminded me of wanting to git out and not sew nor nothing but stay out in the sunshine, and when you said something about freedom it brought all my thinking back again and reminded me of when I was in Californy, and that was what I was athinking about, added to all the other kinds of freedom . . .

My land! (No'm, I ain't got no pins in my mouth; it's just a needle, and I ain't no more feared to talk with a needle in my mouth than what I am a pin.)

I say, didn't I tell you about the day Isabel Pearl and me was took by a friend out to see some little children dance right outdoors, in a tent in the middle of the winter? Now that's what I felt like doing this morning, you know, age ain't got anything to do with your feelings about such things . . .

Ma'm? Why, no'm, they didn't take cold at all. And all they had on you could of tied up in your pocket handkerchief. You know, Los Angeles has got every kind of a place in the world, including dancing places. And this one is named the man's name, and the woman's name put together, right pretty. It is called "Denishawn."

Ma'm? Yes'm, I reckon you seen her dance lots of times, but I ain't never seen her at all, and if she dances any cuter than them children I shore would like to learn to dance that away.

Ma'm? No'm, Miss Ruth want at home. But Isabel Pearl and me set on the porch in the sun and talked to a friend of Mis' Grays (what I sew for at home, and took me out there) and Mr. Shawn . . .

Well, Ma'm? Yes'm, he's just come home, and he's agoing to teach a course before they close the school for the summer, and Isabel Pearl got that crazy about the dancing she says to me:

"Ma, don't you think we could stay 'till the 10th of May? 'Cause I want to take a course in dancing."

My land! And I just thought about her how dreadful she would take cold, but wouldn't it be wonderful to git up there and kick up like that and sway and wave your arms and bow your body and turn and twist till you was as plum limber as a sapling.

I says, "If you are agoing to stay and take lessons, I think I will, too."

Well, you ort to of heard her laugh. It did me good. Yet and still, it was the gospel truth. I wanted to git out there with my bare feet and a crepe shirt and jump up and down. The sun out here or anywhere gits you to feeling thataway.

Well, Mr. Denishawn, or Mr. Shawn, I mean, didn't laugh at me. He says that age is something you ort to cut the acquaintance of, or something like that, and I think so, too. And now you know people in clothes are like a lot of birds in a cage, and a tight cage, at that. He's a nice young man and all his sense ain't in his feet.

Well, I never did see such a healthy lot in my life as them girls and little tots. I set there most froze, though it want cold, with my furs around my neck and red flannel on and teddys over that, and a underbody and my waist and skirt, and my tailor skirt and coat, and was shet off air tight from the outdoors air.

Well, and them little tots hadn't on nothing but some undies and the young ladies hadn't nothing on but little trunks and a smock, a short one, tied in at the waist.

Now that's what makes me say that it is natural for folks to want all kind of freedom, and I think that freedom from disease is one of the big freedoms, and I would like to hippetyhop around like them children and enjoy the nice air on my body as well as my face.

Well, you know that Mr. Shawn studies a lot, all I reckon because he studied for the ministry and has learned psychology and all that, and he's a dancer instead of a preacher, but has got a working religion just the same, and anybudy what gives as much freedom to people and teaches wonderful things we all don't know about the prettiness of body freedom and how to develop the body, is doing just as good as to be in the ministry.

Oh land, have you seen the cute new evening dresses what are made of brocade satin, and have one or two bunchy tulle tunics, ruther short over 'em? And then, they ain't got much sleeve, or you can have one if you want, and they have a little silver on the waist and mebbe a flower at the girdle. Well, they look nice and airy, and I don't blame the girls when they get them on for wanting to dance.

Yes'm, Miss Ruth St. Denis is coming home soon, and she is so tired, she's been dancing so hard and long that she is going to take a rest. They say she's got gray hair same as mine. And if she can dance with gray hair, why can't I?

Well, Isabel Pearl and me couldn't stay no longer 'cause the money give out. Ain't it provoking not to be rich sometimes?

But my land! There I go! Why just look at all the things I got to be thankful for? Mebbe Mr. Shawn is a little finer looking than Lonny—that's my husband—and he sure looks like he must of made a good soldier in his soldier clothes. But I'm satisfied with Lonny and dancin' may be a little freer and gayer than sewing. But if it want for sewing, mebbe, they wouldn't be no clothes at all to put on. I reckon the worst work in the world ain't going out to dressmake.

MANUFACTURE OF OILS IN PALESTINE.

The present method of manufacturing olive and sesame oil in the Palestine consists of a circular stone trough in which a stone disc rotates on edge like a wheel and is operated by a horse, mule or camel. One man is constantly stirring, removing and replacing the olives as they are crushed and another carrying the whole olives to the mill and returning with the crushed ones. A crude wooden box press is used to extract the oil. The primitive devices, while they still exist, are rapidly falling into disuse, as they are too laborious and do not produce as much oil as modern presses. Modern French presses are operated where no power exists by a long beam pulled by rope and tackle, while some are operated by kerosene engines. With these presses one squeezing is enough, instead of two or three under the native methods. These modern mills produce a better table oil which is sold locally at an advanced price. Instead of allowing the olives to stand for some weeks while the entire crop is collected, the modern method, utilizing little labor, permits the olives to be crushed soon after being picked. About $20,000 worth of olive and sesame oil was exported in 1914, $3200 coming into the United States. Under the native process the oil obtained from the last pressings is used in soap making, and $680,000 worth of soap was exported in 1914. This was, next to oranges, of which $730,000 were exported, the largest item of export. Wines and spirits, sesame seed, almonds, fruit and other products constitute the remaining exports.—[Commerce Reports.

MUNITION CITY, BORN IN WEEK, DIES IN DAY.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

CHARLESTON (W. Va.) Feb. 14.—When the United States entered the war, a monster munition plant was projected at Nitro, fourteen miles from here, on the Kanawha River, and a city sprang into existence almost in a week. Twenty thousand men were working there, and long rows of houses were built by the government to shelter its employees and their families.

Activity at Nitro practically ceased at the signing of the armistice and thousands of men left Nitro and Charleston. The last developments are an inventory of the plant and equipment, just begun, and the changing of the plant into an ordnance supply station. There are now only 1600 men here, most of them engaged in taking inventory and guarding the buildings. The War Department has recommended the razing of every other row of the bungalows so hastily constructed. This step has been ordered as a matter of fire prevention.

The wheels of the plant have been silent ever since the Hercules Powder Company turned back the industry to the government two months ago and no official announcement has been received from Washington as to what disposition will be made of the expensive proposition.

Getting Ready to Celebrate.

A friend of ours writes from Paris that the great event there of the future is the entry of the troops after peace is signed. The traffic in windows is already proceeding apace. A window to seat about six persons, first floor, on the Champs Elysee, about forty yards from the roadway, can be had for 4000 francs if secured now, but will probably be much dearer on "der Tag." A corner window in the boulevards can be had for 25,000 francs—and they are sure of getting it, too. Whew!—[Pulitzer's Pertinent Paragraphs.

A Valuable Asset.

"Did the distinguished visitor go away singing the praises of your town?"

"No," replied the chairman of the reception committee. "I'm afraid he was a bit disappointed in the industrial growth of our town, but he made one remark in which we can all justly take pride."

"What was that?"

"He said we had the finest golf links in seven States."—[Birmingham Age-Herald.

The People and Their Troubles

DOROTHY DIX TALKS

Why Marriages Fail.

BY DOROTHY DIX.

A man wants to know what is the matter with matrimony.

"Why is marriage so generally a failure, and why do so few people find any happiness in the holy estate?" he asks.

Marriage is a failure because men and women enter into the most binding of all contracts with less thought and consideration than they give to buying a new hat.

If they were going to buy a house they would hire a lawyer to look up its title, but they marry people without ever investigating what sort of mortgages rest on their past lives. If they were going to pay as much as $25 for a dog, they would be careful about its pedigree, but they do not bother to find out what rotten strains of blood may flow in the veins of the men and women they marry and that they will inflict on their children.

No other enterprise in which people engage in which they exercise as little forethought as they do in marriage would turn out any better than marriage does.

Marriage is a failure because people deliberately pick out one kind of husband or wife when they want another, expecting the marriage service to work some sort of miracle that will change the individual they have chosen for a life mate into something entirely different. The man who desires an industrious, thrifty, economical wife doesn't marry a domestic girl who has taken the blue ribbon for breadmaking. He picks out a little fluffy ruffles whose idea of heaven is to live in a smart hotel and look like a fashion plate.

The girl who yearns to ride in a limousine and wear Paris frocks, and have a box at the opera, doesn't pick out for a husband a business man who thinks in dollars and cents and who has the gift of gathering dollars. She selects a dreamy poet or an up-in-the-air idealist who will never be more than one lap ahead of the Sheriff.

And because fluffy ruffles can't cook and won't cook and the dreamer will never learn how to make money, the man and the woman are disgruntled and discontented and bat matrimony. Yet their position is no more unreasonable than it would be if they had bought a bunch of violets that took their eye and appealed to their taste, and then found it wasn't beefsteak when they got it home.

Matrimony is a failure because human nature lacks adaptability. When you think of a man and woman who come of different heredity, who have had a different environment and a different education, who have different ideals and different tastes, undertaking to live together in the intimacy of the home circles, it is not strange that they get on each other's nerves. The wonder would be if they did not fight over everything from politics to pie.

People get just as tired of their parents, their friends, their brothers and sisters, their business partners, and just as much irritated by their little ways and personal peculiarities, as they do of their husbands and wives. But they don't have to be perpetually with their relations, parents and friends. They have the relief of absence and so are saved from hating them. When we acquire sufficient wisdom to introduce judicious separations from our husbands and wives we shall take the curse off of matrimony.

Marriage is a failure because we are all selfish. Husbands and wives are intent on getting the best of the bargain for themselves, and pursuing their own happiness instead of seeking the happiness of the party of the other part. The man feels that the woman should have no thought but for his pleasure, and spend her life kowtowing before him. The woman feels that the man should be nothing but a slave, toiling to deck her out in fine raiment and to permit her to spend her time in the pursuit of amusement.

Matrimony is a failure because people are not willing to make the sacrifices it demands. They think that they can have their cake and eat it, too, that they can enjoy all of the advantages of married life and still keep the freedom of the unmarried.

A man wants his little home, his devoted wife and his children and yet he wants to run around with the boys and have little love affairs on the side. The woman wants a husband to protect her, to support her, and a home to shelter her, and yet she wants to go out to parties and dances and restaurants, as a debutante does, and not to be burdened with the actual work of making a home, or taking care of babies.

And nobody makes a success of anything that they go at halfheartedly, and in which they do not put their whole interest and for which they are not willing to pay the price of success.

Matrimony is a failure because it is a problem to whose solution people bring less real intelligence than they do to any other problem on earth. They don't even try to solve it. When they find that it is a riddle, compared to which the riddle of the Sphinx is easy guessing, they just throw up their hands and quit.

Yet there are very few marriages that could not be made happy if the man and woman, who have sworn to take each other for better or worse, would make an honest effort to try to get along together. A few concessions on either side, a little of the ordinary politeness we show any stranger, a little jollying, a careful keeping off of the grass of each other's pet prejudices, would enable almost every couple to keep out of the divorce court.

Finally, matrimony is a failure because people do not love enough. Most of us never really love anyone but ourselves, and self love never brings happiness. Whenever you find a man and woman who love each other better than they do themselves, there you will find a marriage that is not a failure. It is a grand and glorious success.

CATCHING COOTIES.

Dear Mr. Editor: Your reference to the possible appointment of a cootie commission for our beloved State calls attention to a matter of the closest importance, not only to the soldier but the civilian. In fact, it would be hard to imagine anything more intimately associated with his being.

Although the returned infantryman is steamed, sterilized, fumigated and incensed on his arrival in the home land, a great many cooties get by this foamy barrier. Especially is this true of the German cooties that were sometimes acquired when our brave boys captured an enemy trench. The German cootie is characteristic of the Prussian breed. He is insidious, but hard-headed and determined. He is full of propaganda and sometimes, with the assistance of his bony, protuberant skull he will bore deep beneath the skin, and there is a grip to his toenails that makes it practically impossible to dislodge him. There he is with a snug nest and a life job spreading the malignant Hun virus through the veins of his victim.

The only way to get rid of him quickly is to kill the man upon whom he is preying—for the German cootie will not stay on a dead person. As rats desert a sinking ship, so will the German cootie leave a body as the life current weakens. It was in this way, in fact, that most of them were acquired. As the victorious Americans swarmed through the German trenches slaughtering on every hand, these vampirish cooties would desert their dead companions and spring to the arms of the lusty conquerors, as it were.

But we do not want to kill our brave soldier boys merely to rid them of the venomous cooties that are boring into their vitals. Therefore it is of supreme importance that the commission at once, and that the Governor should support the cootie Assembly should provide with characteristic liberality for its maintenance.

A cootie commissioner should be a blend of astronomer and detective, and should be fearless in the discharge of his duty. I fancy that a man like Francis J. Heney would make an ideal cootie commissioner.

Sometimes the cootie will bore in so deep that it is necessary to use a corkscrew to remove him, but with a determined commissioner this would be no hardship. There are men trained in the use of the corkscrew who are still willing to serve their country—even in the capacity of cootie commissioner.

Hunting down the proscribed cootie is hardly a ladylike job, but as women insist on sharing the burdens and emoluments of public duty, so also there are women trained in the methods of Swedish massage whose experience and qualifications might make them of inestimable value in this unselfish service. Besides this there are nurses and other women workers overseas who have perchance acquired cooties of their own.

Patriotic citizens should write to their representatives urging the immediate creation of a cootie commission to be maintained after the usual manner—by the taxpayers.

Christianity and Peace League.

LOS ANGELES, March 6.—[To the Editor of The Times:] In his sermon, last Sunday, an eminent clergyman of this city told his audience that the President of the United States is a wild theorist, the League of Nations a fantastic dream, and that our nation has no business to interfere with the terror-stricken or terror-striking barbarities of the old world.

Is there not a touch of egotism in this clerical view of the present world situation? If this country, "under God," has been endowed and deemed justified, by the power, the love and the wisdom, to checkrein the brutality of a powerful egotism imperilling the safety of the entire world during the last four years, it certainly should be our supreme duty to enlist all our energies in the effort, not only to subdue the evil but also to prevent its recurrence.

As surely as a swollen river will drown its surrounding lowlands the moment its protective levees are down, as surely will the savage nations of Middle Europe assert their old claims and resume their "vested rights," their brutal conquests and unscrupulous occupations when the restricting power of international intervention is removed.

Nor can we find Christian virtue, or even political logic in the suggestion of the clergyman to wait with the peace league until peace and order have become normal factors in the life of the nations. For if this be advisable with regard to the unparalleled savagery of Europe, who should we not apply the same principle to the savagery of China and Africa—not half so frightful—and keep back our missionaries until the savages fought and exhausted their brutalities by the grace of God! . . . If, in the night, we were awakened by the groans of our helpless neighbor in the process of being murdered by ferocious burglars, would we turn over in our comfortable bed and wait until daybreak, when quiet and peace was restored, and then venture to take note of the incident?

It was the humble, but profound philosopher of Nazareth that gave us the formula to the peace which alone is conformable to Christian virtue: "I did not come with peace (the selfish peace of comfort) but with a sword"—the sword of justice in the service of love, for the protection of suffering. "Observe the signs on the spiritual horizon of our times," cries our President, "I summon you to comradeship in the new world now rising."

Let us be loyal—if not to our President, at least to Christianity and its humanizing ideals; loyal to those countries who have placed their trust and faith in our pledge of honor given them in their distress and helplessness. And to break away from this pledge, as embodied and actualized in the league of peace, would not only be an everlasting blot upon our national honor, but imperil the moral and economical solidarity of every nation on earth—including our own.

Where are "Examiner" Rebuilders?

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—[To the Editor of The Times:] After reading the appeal of Hon. Myron T. Herrick for aid in the necessary work of restoring the devastated portions of France, I am led to wonder what has become of the Los Angeles Examiner's "Rebuilders of France" launched with such a flourish a year or so ago. The Examiner, you know, collected a little fund at the time and invited its readers to enter a voting contest to decide what French town should be the first to be rebuilt.

CONDUCTED BY GORDON RAY YOUNG

"GREGG"—A BRILLIANT NOVEL.

[illegible] Story of a Man with a Mystifying Personality, Revealed in a Finished Psychological Manner by Fleta Campbell Springer; A New Book by W. B. Maxwell; Also by Thomas Dixon; A Short Story by Rex Beach.

[illegible] It is as easy to know when a [illegible] is painstakingly, thoughtfully planned and written as to know when the sun is shining. Style tells in the choice and precision of words [illegible]; but the form, the design, [illegible] and calculated revealments, the unity of purpose suddenly discoverable in every incident and [illegible], tell the most. It is a disappointment to find that many writers who laboriously polish their [illegible] with lamp oil have only [illegible] of architecture in their [illegible]. "Gregg," a first novel by [illegible] Campbell Springer, is distinguished by the three qualities, particularly by the last.

"Gregg," I think, is the best [illegible] novel since Mary S. [illegible] "The Rudder;" and Mrs. [illegible], I think, is the best of our [illegible]. Mrs. Watts's style is far [illegible], her wit more in evidence, her canvas the more crowded and the more deftly manipulated, [illegible] general accomplishment the [illegible] artistic—but not even she has [illegible] thoroughly stripped a baffling character of superfluities than Mrs. Springer, who goes even [illegible], and having stripped the [illegible], re-creates doubt as to its [illegible].

It is impossible to read "Gregg" [illegible]. It is even a little tiring—[illegible]—because every sentence is weighted. It is precarious [illegible]. Not one novel in a hundred, [illegible] more than a hundred, is so [illegible] with significance at every turn [illegible]. "Gregg" does not give [illegible] impression of being written but [illegible] constructed; and the elimination of unessentials has been obtained watchfully. I fancy that [illegible] Springer wrote with the re[illegible] of short-story technique [illegible] consciousness. As a story [illegible] utterly devoid of action; as a [illegible] study there are few [illegible] without an appraisable [illegible]. And since "nothing happens" [illegible] that something happens [illegible] usual novel, Mrs. Springer is [illegible] tell a story at all only by [illegible] the reader keyed to more [illegible] impressions. If each [illegible] each incident, did not have [illegible] the story would soon become muddled and formless. Haste [illegible] as fatal to her method as [illegible] a can of paint at a canvas. [illegible] the story purports to be [illegible] by a man, an artist in Paris [illegible] the war, and its concern is [illegible] the personality of Allan [illegible], a shy, reticent, seemingly re[illegible] soul, anyone would—or [illegible] know in spite of whatever [illegible] appeared on the title page, [illegible] it was written by a woman. [illegible] not a defect but a characteristic; only a woman would see, [illegible] and weigh the significant [illegible] of the insignificant things that [illegible] does and says.

[illegible] read "Gregg" for the story [illegible] is about like looking at a [illegible] portrait for the picture. [illegible] is a tour de force in the ac[illegible] of what the average [illegible] would not consider worth [illegible]. Gregg is introduced in [illegible] sympathetic light; he is [illegible] forward, and impalpably, [illegible], the sympathetic [illegible] fades out, and at last the [illegible] ceases to be sympathetic [illegible] almost despicable. But [illegible] himself never changes. He [illegible] same man—and the author [illegible] scarcely one direct statement relative to Gregg's character. [illegible] ability with which impressions are conveyed and revealments [illegible] is remarkable, and Gregg is [illegible], not a figure of mirage. [illegible] Springer uses more direct [illegible] in presenting Monica West. [illegible] is no puzzlement about [illegible], no mystery of personality [illegible] blind. Monica West is [illegible] second wife; the first with [illegible] left him. No one knew [illegible] really was no "why" [illegible] except that she under[illegible]—or didn't?

[illegible] it seems to be revealed that [illegible] simply a man without a [illegible]; there is charm to him, but [illegible], he has mystery but no [illegible]; he is not a fraud for [illegible] not pretend; he is natural, [illegible] sensitive and indifferent [illegible] something of the charm, [illegible] mystery remains, even to [illegible] after the end—for Gregg [illegible] from the story—his friends, [illegible] their complete knowledge of him, feel that perhaps had [illegible] with aviation he would [illegible], awakened; that maybe after all, there was something [illegible] man that nobody really [illegible].

[illegible] will be some doubt as to [illegible] Mrs. Springer's own opinion of Gregg is. She has no right [illegible] and should not be ac[illegible] anything so grossly inar[illegible].

[illegible] psychological studies end [illegible] question mark; notably, [illegible] "Hamlet," and Shaw [illegible] from farce and witty [illegible] by the unsolved prob[illegible].

[illegible] this phase of higher [illegible] is delicate and precarious; [illegible] from it. But in so far [illegible] Springer confirms, rather [illegible] the doubt, that Gregg [illegible] misunderstood, and was [illegible] inarticulate, just in so far [illegible] the supreme touch. Perhaps [illegible] think she has failed. [illegible] Greggs and I have [illegible]. They fooled me—[illegible] fooling me still, and [illegible] I deny—and so I am [illegible] unconvinced, by the [illegible] poised question that seems to require an affirmative regarding Gregg's "soul."

A novel like this is not a treatise in exposition, not a compendium of authorial observations: it is an appeal to the higher faculties of the imagination. The imagination is not offered a perch; it is given a shove into space. Was Gregg misunderstood or wasn't he? Did Monica West understand him when she almost despised him, or when she recovered her earlier admiration and sympathy?

If Mrs. Springer's subsequent novels continue to be of the quality and importance of this one, critics will be debating Gregg for years to come. They ought to debate him. He sits on every doorstep, he is the problem of every tea. And is he real, or is a poseur who guesses just one layer deeper than the average poseur; who knows how easily the average poseur is detected and plays a more subtle game? That he may play this instinctively, unconsciously, has nothing to do with the problem. And if Mrs. Springer is ever tempted into a definite, a footnote-like explanation of her character she will not be the artist she seems to be. However, I don't think the reviewers will ever get an "interpretation" out of her. She seemed to know too thoroughly what she was about in the novel to be intrigued by a magazine confessional.

"Gregg" is a distinguished achievement, and notably so for a first novel.

"The Mirror and the Lamp."

A reviewer in a cynical mood would be likely to say that W. B. Maxwell takes the most sensational plot he can find and treats it as dully as possible, and it would have about as much justification as most of the cynical things said by reviewers.

Mr. Maxwell may be remembered for "The Devil's Garden" and "The Ragged Messenger," but a war in which the author spent most of his time has intervened. There is nothing about war in "The Mirror and the Lamp" (Bobbs-Merrill Company.) It is a voluminous novel, with a full 200 pages and more devoted entirely to the background of the story, which, reduced to simplest terms, deals with the love of a dreamer who is about to enter the church for the love of a man's wife.

Edward Churchill is one of three sons, all of whom expressed intentions of entering the church, none of which were kept. Edward is the only one of sensibility and innate refinement; and from boyhood his alert mind quests sensitively among abstract problems of life and religion. In taking up religious work he is established in the most disreputable district of London—Limehouse, which has been [illegible] a rather romantic glamour by Thomas Burke—a glamour that Mr. Maxwell realistically denies with many long detailed chapters that are entirely convincing. There Churchill meets Lillian Vickers, married to a professional bully, and as much out of place in such surroundings as a gazelle in a pigsty. It is a matter of love; religious theories go to smash as they and most other theories frequently do go to smash in the concrete; and the intended priest does not hesitate to use his fists in beating up the bully. The beating is returned with vengeance when a small mob, primed for the work, catches Churchill alone.

The workmanship throughout the book is careful and the elaborate background is full of design and correlation, but I fancy that the average novel reader will call it "slow going." Mr. Maxwell is not a master of the quick contrast; he must bring up whole vanloads of scenery and devote much time to arranging it, but there is no questioning the effect of the finished arrangement.

The conclusion is altogether unworthy of Mr. Maxwell, particularly in his method of treatment. He seemed reluctant to quit the story and so goes on and on—long after the book was finished—to tell the details of Edward's successful literary career. The rewards heaped upon the heroes in the end by grateful and admiring authors is seldom convincing; this ending is downright tedious and grossly sentimental.

"The Mirror and the Lamp" are symbolic idealism; the hero works out his symbolism and theories into magazine articles, some of which are rather too extensively reviewed in the book itself. "The Mirror and the Lamp" is conscientious and high-minded. It is about the farthest removed from "light reading" of any novel within a twelve-month, and much of its "weight" is useless.

"The Way of a Man."

In Thomas Dixon's novels it is the tail that wags the dog, the moral that is adorned by a little narrative. Mr. Dixon is one of the emotionally purposeful writers whose idea of a story is a sermon, disguised a little to sneak upon and grab the attention of people who do not attend church.

"The Way of a Man" (D. Appleton & Co.) demolishes in the Dixonian way all this nonsense about women being anything but sex creatures who ought to get married—and stay there. Ellen West, the voluptuously beautiful—and the author harps on that voluptuousness with the true pulpiteer-moralist's fascination and vehemence—is the brilliant editor of a magazine that stands for women's rights and free love. Ellen is conscious of her seductive charms and vamps a la Theda Bara. Three proposals in the first three chapters, or maybe less, titilate her ears. A great millionaire pops the question on sight; a roue novelist also deigns the promise of reform if Ellen will only let him cuddle his head on her voluptuous bosom; a stray little idealist from off the farm walks in and Ellen is immediately consumed with passion. He reminds her of her childhood sweetheart. She loves him and he loves her—but ah, she has principles. She won't marry—not legally. He has ideals, too.

And so this messy mixture of Elinor Glynnish voluptuousness and savage pulpit-pounding wends its weary way to show how the young idealist gradually becomes in love with a young unsophisticated maid who has no scruples against godly marriage, and how Ellen, the voluptuous, at last flings herself into the arms of the millionaire—though he also wants a court record of the transaction.

"Too Fat to Fight."

A sentimental story with an ex-football hero who tips the scale at 285, is a novelty if not a distinction. Rex Beach tells it in "Too Fat to Fight" (Harper & Bros.,) a short story bound in a small volume and offered at 60 cents net. Norman Dalrymple, called "Dimples," is just naturally big and a bit unnaturally childish, but a good fellow. He tries for Plattsburg, but the powers-that-be drafted the military regulations under the impression that if a man toted around so much weight he couldn't fight. Dimples tries the Y.M.C.A., but his morals can't pass muster, for he does drink a bit and knows the difference between a full house and a bob tail. But influence lands him with the "Y" in France. He's the champion soup carrier and cheer-o boy of the army, gets nicked by a shell and loses a leg, is kissed by a French general, and has his fame celebrated by Rex Beach. It is a good little buoyant yarn—but awfully sentimenta for that stern chronicler of the Klondyke.

WILLIAM WINTER ON DAVID BELASCO.

A Posthumous Biography of the Leading Theatrical Manager.

THE LIFE OF DAVID BELASCO. By William Winter. (Two volumes.) Moffat Pard & Co., New York.

It is unusual to find in a posthumous volume the biography of a person still living; for strangely enough biographies are, conventionally at least, the special properties of the dead. David Belasco remains as one of the dominating influences of the stage, and there is no reason to believe that he will not continue to make "history" for many years although every now and then some pert young critic writes Mr. Belasco's obituary. The young critics, with that vast assurance of impudence which is characteristic of immature years, say Mr. Belasco is a "mountebank," a Cagliostro—largely because he buttons his collars in the rear and doesn't object to being called a "wizard." The young critics for many, many years had disputed the right of William Winter to his opinions on the theater; though for more than a half century he had been intimate with the theater, a man of high ideals, if a little stubborn against acknowledging merit in "problem" plays and farces.

Mr. Winter was a prodigious worker, and though much in his many books is provocative and controversial, they are eminent stage history. The present book was planned several years before his death "as a comprehensive record of the American stage which he proposed to write;" and though sick most of the time, he worked on it almost up to the time of his death. "Might better be dead than to sit idle!" he exclaimed.

Among his notes for a preface was the statement: "David Belasco is the leading theatrical manager in the United States; the manager from which it is reasonable to expect that the most of achievement can proceed that will be advantageous to stage, as an institution and to the welfare of the public." There is noble generosity in his expression of the reason of writing the biography of a living man: "I have long believed that a truthful, comprehensive, minute narrative of his career—which has been one of much vicissitude and interest—ought to be written now, while he is still living and working, when perhaps it may augment his prosperity, cheer his mind, and stimulate his ambition to undertake new tasks and gain new honors."

Belasco's father was a "harlequin" on the English stage, but the family came to San Francisco in the gold rush, and David was born there in a cellar, July 25, 1853. After trials and travels, Belasco returned to San Francisco and appeared on the stage. His early life was a hard one, and not unadventurous. "It was freely predicted," Belasco has said, "that I would end in State's prison, probably on the gallows," and he led the life of a vagabond actor up and down the Pacific Coast, even going into Mexico. The mother of Blanche Bates, herself an actress with Belasco in the "old Californian days," once said of Belasco's ability in writing plays: "He was a marvel! In the old days I have known a star to give Belasco an outline of a plot, with three or four situations on a Thursday night—and we acted the play on the next Monday."

Belasco's grounding in stage work was exhaustively thorough, and in California he came in contact with many of the popular dramatists and most of the important actors. And Mr. Winter has written more than a mere biography; he has made a contribution to stage history, and notably to the Californian annals.

It was in San Francisco at this time that Belasco began to experiment with "stage effects," lighting and "arrangement," and began that artistry which has since caused him to be called "the wizard." It was about this time that Belasco put on what the papers called a "terrific fire spectacle." Belasco explains: "I did away with the lycopodium boxes and made my 'flames' by a series of red and yellow strips of silk, fanned from beneath by bellows and lit by colored lights. Some complaint was made of danger to the theater and the authorities came upon the stage to investigate. They were a good deal nonplussed at finding the 'fire' nothing but pieces of silk!"

Belasco at 29 transferred his "ambitions" to New York. Mr. Winter goes over the ground minutely, and not the least valuable or interesting part of the work is the attention given the stage in general and other persons. Belasco's hardest fight was perhaps with the theatrical trust, out against which he stood firm. Mr. Winter, himself an "old-time" enemy of that syndicate, goes exhaustively into this history.

Belasco is seldom thought of as a dramatist, though he has written, arranged and adapted more than a hundred plays. He is unquestionably the greatest master of stage effects known; and though he too has his many "failures," he has made many spectacular successes, not only by scenic effect, but by dramatic revision and building up of weak manuscripts.

"The Life of David Belasco" is edited by Mr. Winter's son, Jefferson Winter; the format is uniform with other of the author's works and generously illustrated.

THE CENTENARY OF 1919.

The year 1819 was unusually prolific in remarkable babies—not just healthy, blooming youngsters, but children whose intellectual proclivities might almost cause the suspicion that they sprang from the head of Zeus. . . . It is fitting that, on this important centenary, the birth of these children, who later afforded such a great enrichment of the shelves of American literature, should be honored by all lovers of their art. William Wetmore Story, James Russell Lowell, Edwin Percy Whipple, Julia Ward Howe, Walt Whitman and Samuel Longfellow came into the world during that memorable year a century ago. They did not come as usual factors in the evolution of life—to live and die and be forgotten; they came with the power of creating their own immortality in the minds of men. That their one-hundredth birthday is not only remembered, but celebrated, is a tangible proof of this power.

Lowell's role in this 1919 centenary is particularly interesting because of a certain quality of historical timeliness in his work. For Lowell was more than a great litterateur—he was a statesman as well—a statesman who picked up the threads of sympathy which lay between England and America and arranged them preparatory to the tying of the immutable knot which the events of the last four years have finally effected. In England he performed "perhaps as subtle and far-reaching public service as the history of American diplomacy records," says Ferris Greenslee in his life of Lowell. On his return from England Holmes wrote the following tribute to Lowell's work in that mother isle:

"'What if I send him,' Uncle S., says he,
'To my good cousin whom he calls J. B.?'
A nation's servants go where they are sent;
He heard his Uncle's orders and he went.
By what enchantments, what alluring arts,
Our truthful James led captive British hearts,—
Whether his shrewdness made their statesmen halt,
Or if his learning found their Dons at fault,
Or if his virtue was a strange surprise,
Or if his wit flung star-dust in their eyes;—
Like honest Yankees we can simply guess."

In Sanders Theater, Harvard Memorial Hall, just across the "Yard" where Lowell himself read his great Commemoration Ode, a celebration of Lowell's birth is to be held on February 22. Lowell's pen was a versatile one; the range of subjects it treated covered not only critical, poetical, and literary subjects, but questions of national feeling as well. A revival of Lowell, of course, is not necessary, for he is a light which shines steadily in the world of letters. However, the sudden prominence of national consciousness and national pride in America lends to Lowell's poems and political works a flavor of timeliness and modernity.

Edwin Percy Whipple was not only Lowell's contemporary, but almost his exact coeval. He was a man who in his time enjoyed fame of no mean proportion as a critical essayist and lecturer. The only available sketch of the life of this writer, whose centenary we are now honoring, is included in the newly published history of "The Saturday Club," of which famous society Whipple was a member. The quality of Whipple that gave him his wide popularity is well described by Bliss Perry in "The Early Years of the Saturday Club." "His thought and his style were subdued to what he worked in, namely, the physical presence of auditors who wished to be instructed as to facts, guided in ethical judgments, and duly amused, all within the hour. His books remain, at least for the greater part, lectures that once served their day, the highly intelligent and capable service of a middleman, distributing to the general public the produce of other minds."

Samuel Longfellow, a brother of Henry Wadsworth, and his biographer, is another author who belongs to this 1819 group of writers. His works, "Hymns and Verses," "Essays and Sermons," "Memoir and Letters," and the "Life of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow," distinguish him quite independently of his relation to the poet.

William Wetmore Story's genius as sculptor, painter and author was admirably balanced by his interest and talent in the law. His versatility of tastes was reflected in his writing—especially in his widely ranging "Conversations in a Studio," containing a large number of topics running from such subects as "Painting and Sculpture" and "Remarks on Ancient Drinks." Story is also remembered by "Roba di Roma," his novel of the Eternal City. Not the least of this author's achievements was that his work inspired Henry James's delightful biography of himself.

One of the most interesting personalities among all these authors whose centenaries we are now celebrating is Julia Ward Howe, author of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic." "Julia Ward Howe, 1819-1910," a biography written by her two daughters, Laura E. Richards and M. H. Elliott, reflects this unusual personality in such a way as to immortalize it. The remarkable quality of this biography won for it the Pulitzer prize for the best American biography of its year.

All the above-mentioned authors were literary products of Boston. But during that momentous year of 1819 other places, as well, were giving potential literary genius to the world. The birth of the poet, Walt Whitman, caused the little town of West Hills, Long Island, to emerge prominent on the literary map. The author from this section of the country was to strike an entirely different note in American literature—a note of fresh inspiration and new reality. His best outdoor poems are collected in a volume entitled "The Rolling Earth." The standard and best biography of Walt Whitman was written by Bliss Perry.—[From "The Piper" (House organ of Houghton Mifflin Company.]

ROOSEVELT.

THE GREAT ADVENTURE. By Theodore Roosevelt. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

The last book by Theodore Roosevelt was "The Great Adventure," taking its title from the first chapter that spoke of death, which was no doubt written—not with apprehension of his own approaching end—but under the stimulus of his son's fate in France. "Ever a fighter," was this American whom more proudly than accurately we called "typical." One of his very last messages to the people was: "Never yet was a country worth living in unless its sons and daughters were of that stern stuff which bade them die for it at need; and never yet was a country worth dying for unless its sons and daughters thought of life not as something concerned only with the selfish evanescence of the individual, but as a link in the great chain of creation and causation, so that each person is seen in his true relations as an essential part of the whole, whose life must be made to serve the larger and continuing life of the whole"—a spartan philosophy from which in the trial hour he did not flinch.

"The Great Adventure" contains many of the fine essays which Roosevelt wrote during the war. They are strong, virile and point the way to high national attainment. And though Roosevelt's outspoken, often ferocious attacks against the powers-in-office had an undoubted salutary effect in restraining officialdom during the war, yet when the issue of the moment is passed one takes pleasure in forgetting the rough-and-tumble articles. The present volume is rather free from personal attacks; but it is spirited, aggressive and large visioned, containing the sentiments and characteristics that made Roosevelt a big American.

"THE RED COW."

THE RED COW AND HER FRIENDS. By Peter McArthur. John Lane Company, New York.

"This book," says Mr. McArthur, "is dedicated to all city men who feel sure that they could farm at a profit. If each one buys a copy, I can afford to keep on farming."

There one gets the revealing flash into the character of Peter McArthur, the Canadian humorist, who has gathered his newspaper clippings into a book, almost as illuminating as the insight when the book has been read. The book does not belie the humor and wise amiability of the dedication.

Mr. McArthur has obviously written about the commonplace and every-day incidents of farm life. He is as gossipy and as unaffected as though writing a letter to a brother, also genial and quietly humorous. He tells of the red cow, the mother of his flock—or brood—or whatever it is a prolific cow has at the end of a few years of maternity; and how these precocious cows break through fences and get into the orchards, of the difficulty in bottle-feeding a calf, of the introduction of sheep to the farm, of dressing a broken lamb's leg, of shearing and of using sheep for a lawn mower; he tells of pigs and horses, and of chickens and ducks and turkeys. And it is all interesting, not because it is about a farm, but because it is written by one who has the rare gift of literature—something of the kind of thing one might have expected from Charles Lamb had he been a farmer instead of a "book worm."

Jackets.

We care not who reads a nation's books as long as we can read the jackets. Nowadays, no jacket, no book. It is the gaudily dressed barker who stands outside of the thought-shop and howls his wares at you—stridently, in yellow; appealingly, in blue; luringly, in white; threateningly, in red.

We know a man who spends whole days in a big Fifth avenue book store reading the jackets on the books. He says if he went to the public library he'd have to read the book, as there they peel off all jackets. But in the big book store he has found the Seven-Leagued Boot of Knowledge. He knows all about all books by observing jackets. He confesses to have read the jackets on 7402 war books. He knows all about Theodore Dreiser, Joseph Hergesheimer and Amy Lowell by reading the press notices about their books on the back of the jackets of their latest works.

The jacket is still in its infancy, like the movie. Whoever first conceived the idea got hold of something of which he did not know the value and future importance. The jacket is becoming more and more literary, and Wells and Shaw and Huneker, we understand, receive fabulous prices for writing jackets.

Jacket collecting will be the next craze. Private libraries will disappear and give place to jacket files. Men will pay enormous prices for jackets in years to come, as they collect rare objects now. There may even, some day, be a Metropolitan Museum of Jackets, a Louvre whose walls will be hung with curious and artistic book coverings.

Pity the French! In their yellow-backs, which have circulated throughout the world by the millions, there is only literature. The French have no jackets on their books! One has really got to read these books to know what is in them. Ah, but wait! They are going to change all that. And we predict that you will live to see Bibles with a jacket, by Billy Sunday.—[New York Sun.

Alfred Noyes.

Thirteen years ago Alfred Noyes made his first appearance in this country in a slim volume of poems, published by Macmillan. This was followed in the two succeeding years by "The Flower of Old Japan" and "The Golden Hynde." In 1909 Frederick A. Stokes Company became Mr. Noyes's American publishers with the bringing out of "Drake," and nearly every year since has seen the appearance of a new volume of Mr. Noyes's increasingly popular poetry. The poet himself has stimulated interest in his work by frequent visits to this country which have resulted in a delightfully personal friendship between himself and his American audience.

Recently Frederick A. Stokes Company has taken over from the Macmillan Company the publication of Mr. Noyes's first three volumes, so that his complete works are now in their hands, a total of thirteen volumes, including eleven of poetry and two of prose. Mr. Noyes's new book, "Walking Shadows," is proving to be one of his most successful publications. It contains vivid tales of the sea in war time, told with the power and skill of a master story teller. A volume of poetry, entitled "The New Morning," is now in the printer's hands. It contains all the poems written by Mr. Noyes since the appearance of "The Lord of Misrule" in 1914.

SIEGFRIED SASSOON.

Robert Nichols, the English poet, author of "Ardours and Endurances," has written an introduction to Siegfried Sassoon's "Counter-attack," a volume of war poems just published by E. P. Dutton & Co., which is well worth reading because of its brief, intimate glimpses into Sassoon's personality, the effect of war upon him and upon his brother poet, who writes the introduction, and the attitude toward war of the soldiers at the front. Mr. Nichols says that Siegfried Sassoon comes on his father's side from Anglo-Jewish stock, and on his mother's, from the famous family of the Thornycrofts, sculptors and architects, and that before the war he had treated his writing of poetry as a diversion, a personal pleasure, and had given only private publication to the several small volumes of verse he had written. Four years ago he was but recently from Oxford. He entered the army at once and as a captain in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers he has won the Military Cross and has fought three times in France and once in Palestine. His experiences in war, Mr. Nichols says, have caused a revolution in his thought and feeling and in his poetry. His former book, "The Old Huntsman and Other Poems," published last year by E. P. Dutton & Co., contained poems of both the pre-war and later quality. The war poems, as in all his verse dealing with the war, were bitter and ironic and very realistic. The book had instant success and, because of the character of its war verse, won the admiring regard of the soldiers at the front. Mr. Nichols, who was also with the British army in France, says that one met it everywhere and that soldiers were always saying to him things like this: "Hello, you know Siegfried Sassoon then, do you? Well, tell him from me that the more he lays it on thick for those who don't realize the war the better. That's the stuff we want. We're fed up with the old men's death-or-glory stunt." Of this war verse Mr. Nichols says: "He breaks out, almost like a madman, into imprecations, into vehement tirades, into sarcasms, ironies, the hellish laughters that arise from a heart that is not broken once for all, but that is newly broken every day while the monster that devours the lives of the young continues its ravages."

THE VISION WE WON.

"The Vision for Which We Fought," by A. M. Simmons, one of the Macmillan issue of The Citizen Library of Economics, Politics and Sociology, rather optimistically discusses the rewards of the war. Mr. Simmons is inclined to feel that because the war needs have shown us that competition is disastrous, that invention does not require competition and that profiteering has become an opprobrious word, that we will throw off those features of our industrial system for a higher nobility of purpose. His observations on labor and women and education are similarly rosy.

GERMAN CONSPIRACY.

Gustavus Ohlinger in "The German Conspiracy in American Education" (George H. Doran Company) tells and shows how the pro-German element in the United States, for years and even during the war, insidiously injected their propaganda into our school-books. He shows various and devious ways by which the Huns went at it to contaminate Young America and inculcate a tenderness for Germany. Exchange professorships, clubs and books—text-books themselves—were used for propaganda; and the Germans brought pressure to bear throughout the land for the teaching of their tongue in the schools.

THE PURPLE COW.

[According to Browning.]

All that I know
Of a certain cow
Is that it can throw
Somewhere, somehow,
Now a dart of red,
Now a dart of blue
(That makes purple, 'tis said)
I would fain see, too,
This cow that darties the red and the blue!

WHEN PEACE COMES.

BRITAIN AFTER THE PEACE. By Brougham Villiers. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

The average man is much concerned over victory. Give us that, and—thinks the average man—our troubles will be over. Some keen-minded people are even more apprehensive over the habiliments of peace than the issues of the battlefields. Mr. Villiers is among them. War has shown Britain, he says, that a comparatively few workmen can maintain peaceful industries while the majority are released for war work, for war industries are arms. What will happen when these are freed from war and seek to return to their jobs? The armies, he maintains, will be mustered out slowly or rapidly as the demands of employment regulate. And the monumental debts, what of them? He thinks it would be a blessing if salaries and prices went up and so minimized the value of a dollar, and of a pound. And land owners—something must be done to restrain them, for if prosperity comes after the war they will be sure to increase their rents and so be about the only people to ultimately profit. Sooner or later, he believes, society's profits find their way into the pockets of the landed class. He offers as a solution that all land owners be compelled to appraise their property at that valuation upon which they are equally willing to pay taxes or to sell. He is of the opinion that the reluctance of the Prussian Junkers to submit to taxation, when taxation seemed inevitable, had much to do with precipitating the war. The Junkers wished to get revenues out of their neighbors, in the form of indemnities, and so save their own gold.

Whether or not Mr. Villiers convincingly suggests the solutions to the peace problems, he has made a thoughtful contribution. He is not pessimistic although he is very serious, and in the light of his deductions it seems a time for serious consideration of what is coming after war.

A BOOK'S INFLUENCE?

One of the incidents in Harold S. Latham's book for boys, "Under Orders: The Story of Tim and the Club," has to do with the way in which a band of boys sets out to collect some of the bad debts for a merchant of the town. The boys were to have a certain percentage of the collection, the money raised in this way to be applied to the purchase of Thrift Stamps.

An amusing letter has recently been received by the author from the editor of one of the big dailies in a large western city, telling what happened when one of the readers of "Under Orders" tried to follow in the lead of the boys' club of the story:

"My little girl of eight," so runs the letter, "said after reading 'Under Orders,' that the book was just full of good things for boys to do, and she wanted to organize the boys and girls of our locality to collect the bad debts in our district. Her mother and I gave the matter no more thought, until a tradesman called up and asked why we wanted a list of all his bad debts. He said the only bad debts he had were those of prosperous people who kept him waiting for his money. He thought the Thrift Stamp plan a good idea, but he hesitated about letting other people know who owed him money!"

YANKEES AT SEA.

THE U-BOAT HUNTERS. By James B. Connolly. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

England maintained a "silent navy" and no civilians were permitted to accompany the fleet; and it looked very much as though the English admirals, who had charge of the American fleet, would keep the correspondents kicking their heels in port. Mr. Connolly had some trouble and a polite argument or two in getting on board Yankee destroyers—the U-Boat hunters—but on board he went, and has much to say of the chasing and fighting, of the gallantry and daring of the Yankee sailormen.

Mr. Connolly's book is not so intimate and not so comprehensive as Mr. Paine's "With the Fighting Fleets." However, both authors have related the same incidents and it will be a matter of taste to decide the preference; though for my part I prefer Mr. Connolly's stories to his articles as a correspondent, but in either he has a crisp, graphic style and gives clear and satisfying pictures. A chapter that can hardly fail to please anybody is "Flotilla Hunting—At Sea," and "The Destroyer Boys" does much to give the inland public an idea of the sort of men and ships that are hounding the Huns.

Really True.

An Indianapolis seventh grade was studying the gender of nouns. As a final review the teacher asked the pupil to give a few definitions. Masculine gender was defined and then came the request for a definition of the feminine. Alice, whose mother is a rather noted feminist, recited: "Feminine gender is the gender that opposes masculine."—[Indianapolis News.

PENS PORT OF MISSING MEN.

of Surgeon-General Seeks Lost Soldiers.

in Hospital Papers Invites Information.

Pathetic Letters of Inquiry are Received.

FREDERIC J. HASKIN.
[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

HINGTON, Feb. 27.—"We very bitter against the ones in for not trying to hunt our after he fought in mud and from one end of the line to the in the worst branch of the His father is in poor health, the suspense and grief are killing by inches. He is our only our only dependence in our age. May the Lord help you for us."

is an excerpt from one of the of letters that have re poured into the Surgeon-'s office of the army, asking its new division—the Port Men. From all parts of they come, and from all of persons who have lost of their boys since they went and are eager for any information. Some of them photographs of soldiers, and contain soiled envelopes that carried letters to France and them back again, because to whom they were ad could not be found. Still are sent by registered mail to the Surgeon-General's office importance of the inquiry. the Surgeon-General's office are stripped of their —the name of the missing company and regiment, date and name of the place was last reported to be— then mailed to the Port Men. This is the inter that has been attached paper column, now appear the army hospital papers, the three large ones in , Newport News and and the twenty-six scattered throughout the circulation of these, pa estimated at 50,000. In oth 50,000 soldiers read these and note the names of the under the head, "The Missing Men." Out of the is almost certain to be one soldier who has known one of the men reported missing in the column. Maybe he was in the same company, and knew where the man was last stationed. In the majority of instances, he is even likely to know what ultimately became of him. In any event he is apt to be able to shed some light on the situation.

The other day, for example, the Surgeon-General's office received a letter from a Washington woman asking for information concerning the whereabouts of a certain lieutenant stationed somewhere in France. She was writing for his mother in Honolulu. The name of the lieutenant was immediately printed in the Port of Missing Men, and was seen by a private in one of the army hospitals, who reported that he had been in a hospital with such an officer at Savenay, France.

At that time he had been recovering, the private asserted, and was soon to go back to duty. The mother of the lieutenant had not heard from him since last May, and this information, coming over six months later, was extremely reassuring.

DOING ALL IT CAN.

You may ask, along with most of the anxious mothers, sisters and wives who write to the Surgeon-General's office, why this information is not reported by the Adjutant-General's office of the army. One's first impulse is certainly to sympathize with the woman who was "bitter against the ones in authority for not trying to hunt her boy," and with one more indignant mother, who writes: "We cannot help but feel that if the government had given as much attention to locating the boys after the war was over as they did to get them at the beginning of the war, they would know something about the missing boys."

But upon investigation, they are compelled to admit that the Adjutant-General's office is certainly doing all that it possibly can with a difficult problem.

Consider some of its difficulties: In the first place, it has millions of men to keep track of. Millions of men with plenty of opportunity for geting lost. In trench warfare, a man's head is the most imperiled portion of his anatomy, and it is not unusual for a man's head to be blown completely off. With it, disappears that identification disc which every American soldier is supposed to wear around his neck—when he does not misplace it or forget to wear it. When the relief corps comes across a casualty of this sort, it is often unable to identify it. Back at headquarters, they know that certain men have not returned, but they cannot be positive as to what has happened to them.

MANY GET MIXED.

Usually, it is assumed that they have been killed, but this is by no means certain. For men often get mixed up in the confusion at the front; are separated from their companies and carried to remote hospitals, or are absorbed into other companies. There have been several instances where wounded men have managed to drag themselves away from the front all the way to a deserted village. When the enemy was pushed forward the people would return to the village, and the wounded man would be cared for by individuals.

Then there are the numerous cases of shell shock, where men lose all memory of their identity, and baffle all efforts of the military authorities to trace their histories. It must be remembered, also, that the rate of desertion is fairly high in the army. While, according to army reports, it has been kept at a minimum during this war, due to obvious difficulties in deserting a trench, a goodly percentage of men are known to have deliberately left their ranks. Sometimes, when a man dislikes his superior officer, it is merely a case of desertion from one company to another in the general confusion of combat.

All these things serve to prevent the Adjutant-General's office from securing correct information in regard to a man's whereabouts. In the long run, their representatives may run down the facts concerning a man's disappearance, but in many cases no clew is available.

ONE OTHER SOURCE.

There is one other source of information however, which heretofore no government has ever taken advantage of. That is the returning soldier. It was a member of the staff of the hospital paper, The Right About, who conceived the idea of utilizing this source through a column in his paper which he called the "Port of Missing Men." The Surgeon-General's office at once recognized the value of such a column of inquiry and arranged to have it printed in all the hospital papers.

Lieut. Crudington is in charge of the work. He is a young ex-newspaper man of broad sympathies and great ability, who is organizing the Port of Missing Men on the largest possible basis, inspired by the fact that it has already helped many persons to locate their missing men.

"Of course, what we do is simply supplemental to what has already been done by the Adjutant-General's office, and our scope is limited, too," said the lieutenant in discussing the column. "We cannot, for example, print photographs, or find men who have enlisted in other armies, or trace husbands who have used the army as an excuse for deserting their wives."

Such requests are, however, not infrequent in the letters that reach the office. "I am writing to ask you about my husband," one woman writes. "I haven't heard from him for three years. I am his wife and have three children for him. Would like you to help me find him, as I want to write to him." With the exception of her husband's name, no other information was given. Naturally, the Surgeon-General's office could not handle a case of this kind, which would be one for a detective.

PATRIOTIC REQUESTS.

On of the most pathetic requests received by the port of missing men is that from families, who have been informed of their soldier's death by the War Department, and want to have the report confirmed—or denied, if possible. Or if really dead, they want to know how he died, where, and if there was anyone to take care of him.

Most of these are mothers who have offered the supreme sacrifice, their sons, and desire to know at least the details of how they were taken. A few letters come from mothers and wives suffering the greatest agony of suspense, because they have received letters from their sons or husbands dated after they have been reported dead in the casualty lists.

"I understand that my son was killed on the 26th of last July," writes one mother, "but I have two letters from him—one dated August 4 and one September 10. Can you find out for me if he is still alive?" Thus, there is often hope even when hope is dead. For, more than likely, some convalescent in our military hospitals will see this mother's inquiry and write in to report that her son still lives.

WOLVES MENACE SHEEP INDUSTRY.

Northern Minnesota's development will be retarded as long as effective wolf - extermination is neglected, according to advocates of the DeLury emergency wolf bounty appropriation bill in the Legislature.

Development of the sheep industry is essential to the development of the north country, they assert, and the sheep industry can make no progress so long as a menace exists in great packs of marauding wolves.

Commenting on the possibilities of sheep raising, Representative DeLury of Walker asserted that in one instance a flock of forty paid for itself the first season, without taking into consideration the value of land clearing and fertilization.

But to accomplish this, adequate protection from wolves was afforded by forty-eight-inch woven wire fencing, and alert man and dog patrolling, which is too great a problem for the average settler.

The sum of $30,000 paid out in wolf bounties would mean the actual extermination of 4000 wolves, Mr. DeLury contends. It is fair to assume that of this number, at least one-half would be females, whose unborn progeny likely would number 10,000 more within three months.

The sheep industry must be given encouragement if the North woods country is to develop in proportion to the rest of the State advocates of the measure assert, and the wolf is the one obstacle that is too great for the average settler to overcome.—[St. Paul Pioneer Press.

MONTANA HAS PLENTY WORK FOR SOLDIERS.

RESUMPTION OF BUILDING OPERATIONS AND NEW CONSTRUCTION IS PLANNED.

[A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

HELENA, Jan. 22.—With thousands of acres of new land under the plow as a result of the war, and with accumulated building operations, postponed because of the war, either contemplated or under way, to total more than $500,000, State officials here predict that the progress of Montana in every line will be greater in the next three years than in the decade preceding 1914.

Already plans are being made by State and county Councils of Defense to place returning soldiers in the general plan of development of a greater State, either in agriculture, mining or industry. The larger part of the 35,000 men furnished by the State to the armed forces of the nation were taken from the agricultural sections of the State. Correspondence with county Councils of Defense, according to Charles D. Greenfield, Sr., secretary of the State Council of Defense, indicates that all these men will find employment in their home communities, and with the anticipated development of agricultural resources, many in addition.

"Men in the army and navy who were taken from other than agricultural pursuits will find no trouble in getting back their former employment," said Mr. Greenfield. "Employment for returning soldiers is not a problem which will be difficult of solution in Montana. In almost every county of the State there is an organization, composed of members of the county Council of Defense, Red Cross Chapter and other organizations, which has its plans already made to aid the homecoming soldier and sailor, whether he is wounded or physically fit, to become again a self-supporting member of the community."

Besides the deferred construction of more than $500,000 reported to the War Industries Board by the State Council of Defense, a large amount of new construction is expected during the present year. This will include public and private buildings, and the expenditure of $5,000,000 on public roads by the national government, the State and the counties is estimated for the year by the State Highway Commission. Railroad construction that had been planned by transcontinental lines traversing Montana and which was halted by the war, aggregating several thousand miles, also is expected to be put through during 1919 and 1920.

For timing work the dial of a Swiss stop-watch carries additional marks to indicate at any point of elapsed time what the corresponding output an hour would be.

BOLSHEVIST TO REPRESENT US.

Ex-Rev. George D. Herron to be at Marmora Conference.

Will be Congenial Spirit for Lenine and Trotzky.

Free Love and Revolution are His Chief Preachings.

[From Harvey's Weekly.]

Lenine and Trotzky, or whoever shall appear for those advanced anarchists at the Marmora conference, will meet a congenial spirit in Ex-Rev. George D. Herron, whom President Wilson has appointed to represent the United States, along with William Allen White of Emporia, Kan.

George was born in Montezuma, Ind., in 1862, attended a college at Ripon, Wis., received a D.D. degree from Tabor College, began to preach in Lake City, Minn., continued as pastor of the First Congregational Church in Burlington, and served later as professor of applied Christianity in Iowa College. "Who's Who's" record, prepared by himself, informs us that he "resigned owing to opposition of trustees to his teachings." As a matter of fact, he was expelled by both the college and the Congregational church of Iowa.

The "teachings" which produced this untoward effect conform precisely to the edicts respecting the marital relationship recently imposed by Lenine and Trotzky upon the Russian people. George wears no shackles in love.

WHAT HE BELIEVES.

A few sentences from his published works will indicate his views, to wit:

"People who love each other and who, therefore, ought to live with each other, need no laws to bind them together. The coercive family will pass away with the coercive economic system. Even when love exists on the part of one and not on the part of the other there can be no possible good in the two being kept together by external law. . . .

"Lives that are essentially one, cooperative in the love and truth that makes oneness, need no law of state or church to bind or to keep them together. Upon such the imposition of force is a destruction and a blasphemy. On the other hand, no law in the universe has a right to keep together those vitally and essentially one. It is only in freedom that love can find its own, or truth blossom in the soul or other than a slave individually unfold.

"Civilization, with its network of falsehood and suspicion of retribution and revenge, is a sort of world conspiracy against the soul's integrity and against individuality. Yet the right of a single soul to fully and freely express itself, to live out and show forth all the truth about itself so that it need have within itself no hidden thing, but be naked before the universe and not be ashamed, is infinitely more important than the whole fabric of civilization.

PRACTICES IT, TOO.

It must be said for George that he practiced what he preached. In 1883 he courted Miss Mary Everhard of Ripon, married her in the regular way and lived with her seventeen years. Then he fell in with Mrs. E. D. Rand, a Wisconsin widow, who had both faith and money. The combination attracted George, but the impressionable widow was getting along in years too rapidly to suit his fancy. Fortunately, she had a daughter of about the right age named Carrie, and George's heart went out to her. How Carrie felt about it nobody could tell, but the old lady was enchanted and started in forthwith to clear the way for an ideal relationship.

For some reason or other George regarded his legalized wife as an obstacle and for some other reason or other he did not care personally to undertake the task of removing it. Whereupon the widow approached the wife in a business-like way and offered to buy George for Carrie. There was some haggling over the price, no two being able to agree as to what he was really worth, but finally the widow fixed the upset at $50,000 and the wife accepted. She was sick and tired of George anyway. So she got a divorce and the widow took George and Carrie away somewhere and hired a minister to "announce" that they were man and wife. It was not according to Hoyle, but neither was George nor the widow, for that matter, and George said he felt just the same as if he had gone through a regular ceremony. Poor Carrie didn't say a word. She stood it as long as she could and then up and died.

PITCHFORK BRIGADE.

Meanwhile, the widow bought some land down in Metuchen, N. J., and George started a free-for-all love colony for those who had money, but recruits had barely begun to arrive when the neighboring farmers' wives handed pitchforks to the hired men and told them to get busy. George saw them coming and didn't stop running until he got to Italy, where, having left the widow at home, he could develop his socialistic theories in peace and quiet.

He is now a full-blown internationalist and a budding Bolshevik. We quote from his more recent published utterances:

"I am myself but an humble and unimportant follower of the international socialist movement for the overthrow of the system which at present dooms the peoples of all nations to slavery, misery and hypocrisy. . . .

"I have no expectation that the present kind of civilization can be amended—it can only be ended. The new system that shall give to every man at first what he is supposed to have earned and afterward what he needs, can no longer be called a party or sectional term. All kinds of socialism mean the organization of a world in which every man shall be born with an equal inheritance.

"What shall become of God and gods, of temples, creeds and faiths in the new morning of socialism? It seems to me that the effect of the socialistic idea possessing the world would be to change the entire attitude of human life regarding the future. . . .

"It is already too late to reform society in America. It is no longer a question whether you will have a socialistic revolution. It is only left to you to decide what kind of a revolution you will have."

"The FREE" Sewing Machines

Easter sewing is one of the most pleasurable of the housewife's tasks, IF — her sewing machine is "THE FREE." "The Free," so the manufacturer says (and so we believe,) sews faster because it is rotary and ball-bearing.

Unlike any other sewing machine it swings the long shuttle on the rotoscillo movement (meaning rotary and oscillating combined.)

"THE FREE" has no noisy cam movements to hasten deterioration—no springs or irregular shaped wheels. The jar and noise of the vibrating machine is entirely gone.

"THE FREE" sewing machine may be had in three different styles—the table top, the cabinet and the portable electric.

GOOD WORK BY FARMER'S WIFE.

How One Small Missouri Gift Greatly Helps After War.

"Buy Two Trees to be Planted in France," She Says.

Mabel Potter Daggett Gone to Carry Out the Request.

[From the Kansas City Star.]

She is a farmer's wife, and she lives near a small town half-way between Kansas City and St. Louis. She has no children; no son of hers marched away to war, and she has no daughter through whom she served her country vicariously. Being a farmer's wife, with the days of her life bound around with drudgery, she had little time for giving that personal service which women all over the land gave so wholeheartedly, and which played so important a part in the final results.

In the evening, when there was no mending to do and all the household chores were done, she read her paper, and among the few luxuries the world brought to her door was a magazine. In it she read of what other women, to whom $1000 did not mean as much as a dime meant to her, were giving toward the restoration of France.

"PLEASE BUY TWO TREES."

"I am sending you $1.20," she wrote to the editor of the magazine a few weeks ago. "It isn't much, but it is all I can spare. With it will you please buy two trees to be planted in France? You ought to be able to buy a good-sized tree for 60 cents."

The editor sent for Mrs. Mabel Potter Daggett. "If a woman in this woman's circumstances," he said, "will make this effort and this sacrifice, it is only just to her to see that the money is spent exactly as she wants it spent, and that a report is made to her afterward. I want you to go to Missouri to see her, and then make arrangements to go to France to carry out her commission."

Mrs. Daggett went to Missouri and interviewed the woman; she sailed for France on the Espagne last week, and she will be gone a year.

"I am going," she said, "to link up the human end of the work of the American Committee for Devastated France with the American people. As everyone knows, this is Miss Anne Morgan's committee; she has the machinery to put every dollar sent her just where it is intended to be put. If money is given for buying milk, or building a home, the committee uses it for the purpose for which it was given.

"But—'I am willing to adopt an orphan,' a woman in Ohio complains, 'but I want to know more about the orphan after I have adopted it.' 'Of course, I am giving,' says a woman from Maine, 'but I would take a greater interest if I knew how my money is spent. One does not like to drop it, and see no results that interest one personally. Now, I am making dresses for a French child of 4. How much more interested I would be if I only knew the child's name.'

"Don't you see it is the personal contact everyone wants? That is what I am going to France to secure. There will be no errand too trivial, or too enormous, for me to undertake. If money is given to me to buy a child's clothes, I will turn the money over to Miss Morgan's committee, but after it is spent I shall see the child, learn its name and the conditions of its home, and report to the woman who donated the money.

SHE'S GOING AS A NEIGHBOR.

"I will do everything the American women would ask a kindly-disposed neighbor to do for them if the neighbor were sailing for France. I will locate some dear boy's grave, put the flowers on it his mother requested, and then write her concerning the location of his last resting place.

"If the woman wants her donation spent in refurnishing a home, I will personally visit the home and write about it after her money is invested. Nothing will be too trivial to interest me, for, after all, who may, or may not, say what is trival? The two trees donated by the dear woman in Missouri cannot be classed as trival, for they represented a great sacrifice to her and served as the inspiration that resulted in my going.

"I shall have an office in Paris—27 Avenue de L'Opero—and for one whole year I shall devote the best there is in me to being a good neighbor of the American women who remain at home. I shall visit personally the people and places of personal interest to them; and devote my time in office to writing about them. The woman who adopted an orphan will learn if its eyes be blue or brown; the mother whose son made the supreme sacrifice will be told if the blubs she bought for that tragic little flower bed are growing; if a woman is sewing for some little French waif I shall take the interest a good neighbor might take in sending her a pattern with the information as to whether little Suzette looks better in blues or pinks, and what she said when she got her new clothes.

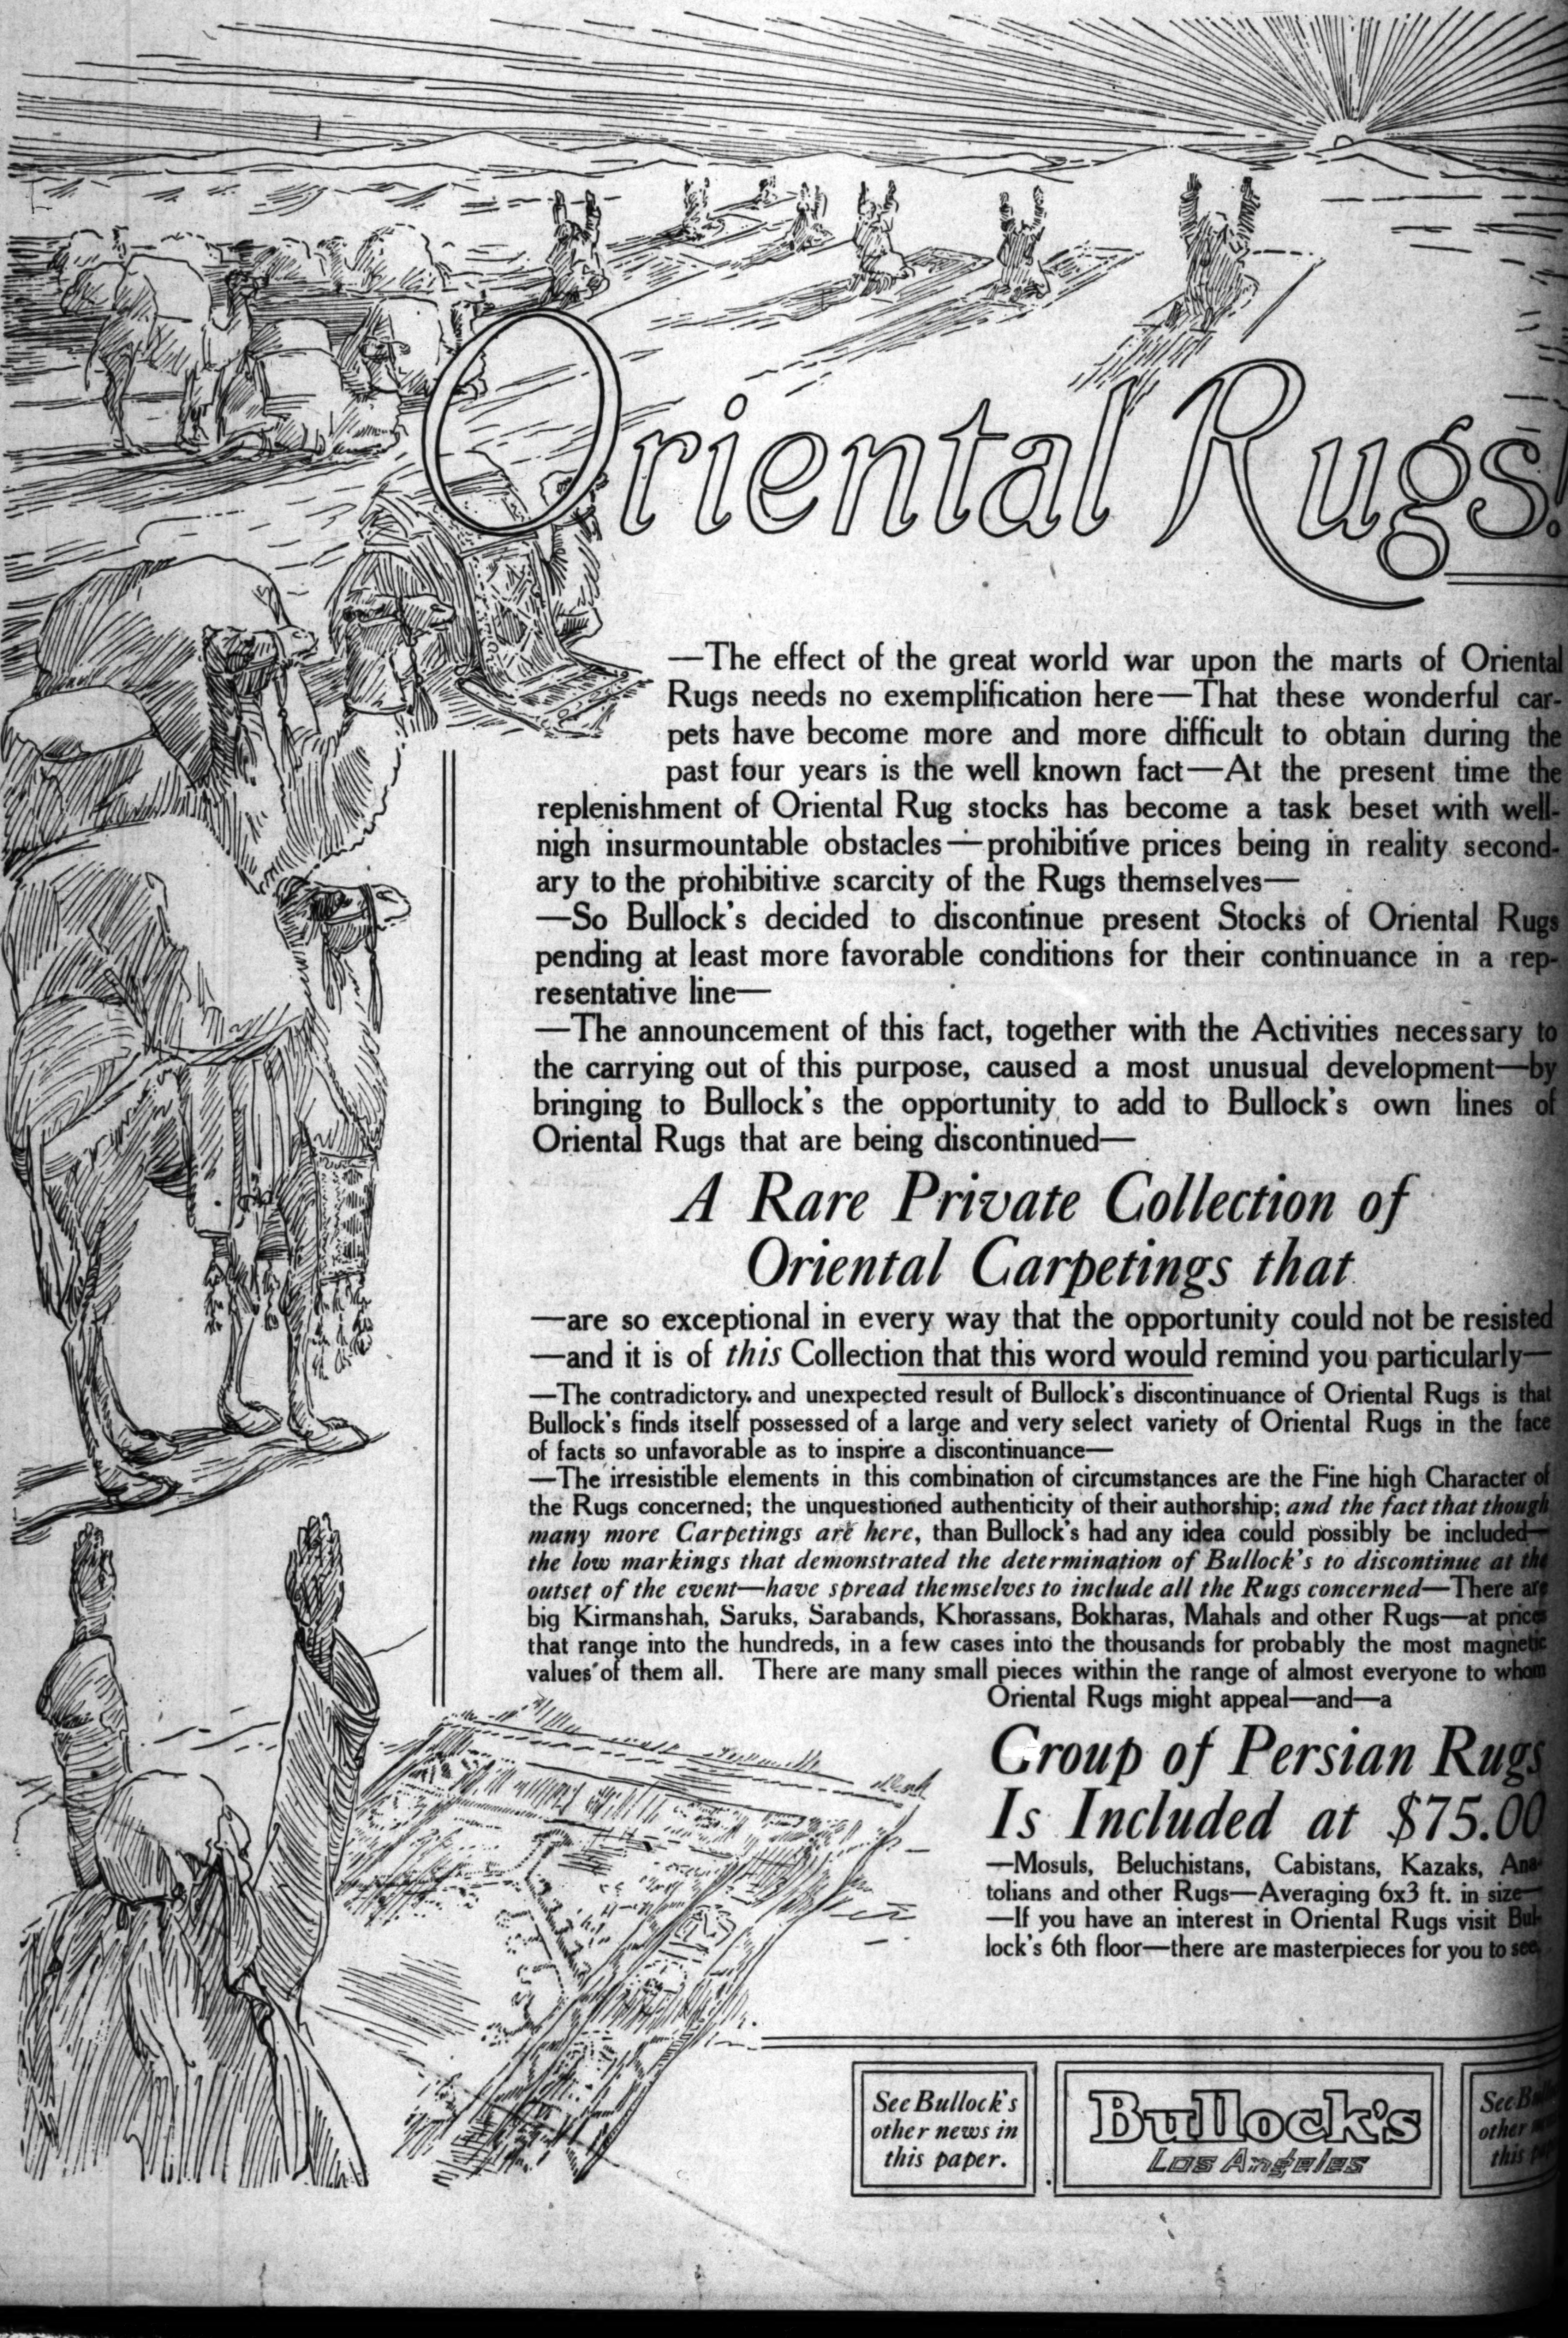
TO MAKE GIFTS PERSONAL.

"The American women are giving and giving generously; I am to serve as a sort of international Amanuensis for them. We have the donors here, and the recipients there. It will be my work for a year to link the two together; to make our giving less mechanical and more human.

"Of course there will be errands that represent greater expenditure than the personal giving. For instance, the children of a western town raised $1400 to rebuild a school in France. I intend to see that they get a picture of that school to be hung in their school building. It is the personal contact we must have if we wish the work of the committee for devasted France to continue; we shall not feel that we have dropped our money into the ocean if we may, through print or picture, get a glimpse of the results of our giving."

Among the many other activities of the committee for devastated France is the subcommittee that is endeavoring to "rechickenize" France. Ten cents buys an egg, and a button goes to the donor, which reads, "I have a chicken in France."

"Of course," laughed Mrs. Daggett, "I will not send any descriptions of individual poultry, but I hope to write of the general results of this movement."



Oriental Rugs!

—The effect of the great world war upon the marts of Oriental Rugs needs no exemplification here—That these wonderful carpets have become more and more difficult to obtain during the past four years is the well known fact—At the present time the replenishment of Oriental Rug stocks has become a task beset with well-nigh insurmountable obstacles—prohibitive prices being in reality secondary to the prohibitive scarcity of the Rugs themselves—

—So Bullock's decided to discontinue present Stocks of Oriental Rugs pending at least more favorable conditions for their continuance in a representative line—

—The announcement of this fact, together with the Activities necessary to the carrying out of this purpose, caused a most unusual development—by bringing to Bullock's the opportunity to add to Bullock's own lines of Oriental Rugs that are being discontinued—

A Rare Private Collection of Oriental Carpetings that —are so exceptional in every way that the opportunity could not be resisted

—and it is of this Collection that this word would remind you particularly—

—The contradictory and unexpected result of Bullock's discontinuance of Oriental Rugs is that Bullock's finds itself possessed of a large and very select variety of Oriental Rugs in the face of facts so unfavorable as to inspire a discontinuance—

—The irresistible elements in this combination of circumstances are the Fine high Character of the Rugs concerned; the unquestioned authenticity of their authorship; and the fact that though many more Carpetings are here, than Bullock's had any idea could possibly be included—the low markings that demonstrated the determination of Bullock's to discontinue at the outset of the event—have spread themselves to include all the Rugs concerned—There are big Kirmanshah, Saruks, Sarabands, Khorassans, Bokharas, Mahals and other Rugs—at prices that range into the hundreds, in a few cases into the thousands for probably the most magnetic values of them all. There are many small pieces within the range of almost everyone to whom Oriental Rugs might appeal—and—a

Group of Persian Rugs Is Included at $75.00

—Mosuls, Beluchistans, Cabistans, Kazaks, Anatolians and other Rugs—Averaging 6x3 ft. in size—

BEAUTY HINTS—KEY TO BEAUTY.

(Witch Hazel) toilet preparation. These goods are guaranteed chemically pure, and will not encourage the growth of hair. The cleansing cream and skin food will keep your skin clean, "really clean," and is most delightful to use before powdering. The astringent is a tonic, and will close the pores. Your money is cheerfully refunded if you do not find them all I claim. H. JEVNE CO. or ANNA M. BERGERON, SCIENTIFIC CARE OF THE SKIN, including removing superfluous hair, warts, moles and birthmarks with the electric needle. It makes no difference to me who or what you have tried. I guarantee satisfaction. Located in Los Angeles in business 16 years. 820-21 HAAS BLDG., corner Seventh and Broadway.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS, WARTS AND MOLES.

Pulling a few stiff hairs from the face may start a serious growth. Let me demonstrate free of charge how pulling, cutting, using wax depilatories and the so-called hair removers promote growth of hair on the face. My electric machine is the only known method of killing superfluous hair, fuzz, warts and moles, without destroying the surrounding tissue. This machine destroys 300 hairs an hour. I have had 19 years' experience and devote all my time to the work. A binding guarantee that any hairs or moles I treat will never return. Many L. A. satisfied customers will testify to my skill as an expert.

USED CARS OF UNEQUALED VALUE—

Taken in on new Hupmobiles and Chalmers cars. A large number of which have been overhauled and refinished.

We know these cars are priced considerably below actual value.

But we must keep them moving to make room for others coming in.

Therefore, we feel it would be very much to your advantage to look these over before buying.

Remember, we are not selling used cars for a profit, and that owing to the popularity of Hupmobile and Chalmers cars, we are very careful as to the quality and condition of the cars we take in trade.

The following are some of the cars recently traded in:

1918 Maxwell only driven 2000 miles, just like new.

Oldsmobile, 8-cyl., driven 9000 miles.

Dodge sedan, driven 4700 miles, just like a new car. Wire wheels and extra tire, complete.

1917 Hudson super 6. A real buy.

Jefferies 6-cyl., fine mechanically and good tires. Will sell $475.

Model N Hup, now being overhauled. See Taylor on this.

1917 Chalmers, 5-pass., overhauled and refinished. None better.

7-pass. Hupmobile, thoroughly overhauled and refinished. A car for service.

1917 Reo, 4-cyl., with good tires and 1 extra. This car is actually in the best condition mechanically of any used car ever traded in to us.

Overland, model 86, in very nice condition with extra good refinish job and good tires.

Overland, 83 model. A good running car at very low figure.

1918 Ford town car, only used 500 mi. Practically a new car. Snap.

Empire 6, 5-pass., a good serviceable car. Cheap.

A famous 32 Hup roadster, just going through shop. Will be something real nice when finished.

We have several other cars of good makes of a little older model that would make good trucks, which we will clean out at very low prices.

See us for real values in good used cars.

[illegible]—A USED CAR IS NOT A USED-UP CAR if purchased from EARL V. ARMSTRONG, INC. At least ¾ of the mileage built into the car is still there. Buy and drive this bargain mileage—it's worth many times what you pay for it.

We believe in the used cars we offer for sale. We believe in the people we sell them to—therefore we offer an exceptional guarantee to every purchaser of a car from this company that is sold in excess of $400. We are proud of our used car stock; we take pleasure in offering them at prices that will please you. We will sell you a NEW car later on if you purchase a used car from us now.

WE HAVE MANY MODELS
DIFFERENT MAKES FOR YOUR APPROVAL.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS.

CHANDLER SIX

TOURINGS
CHUMMY ROADSTERS.

You do not dare to purchase a CHANDLER until you have investigated the REBUILT, REFINISHED, FULLY GUARANTEED ones that we are offering at a range of prices from $800 to $1800, on TERMS. You cannot respect yourself as a wise purchaser unless you at least learn about these values, and what CHANDLER SERVICE and CHANDLER GUARANTEE will mean to you for the next year to come. Our business has been the marketing of CHANDLERS practically since they were first placed on the market. We know most of the Chandler owners and we know quite a bit about the manner in which they have taken care of their cars. We will not accept a used CHANDLER in exchange on a new one if it has been abused. We do not have to. We cannot secure all the NEW CHANDLERS that there is a demand for, so you may rest assured that we are particular about the used cars we accept in exchange. If you do not believe this, try us out with some car that is not up to standard, and see how quickly we refuse it. We are not independent, but we are careful of our reputation, and we do not want to be forced to offer a poor used car for sale.

Dort touring car, 1917 model; a real bargain at [illegible], terms.

Buick little six-cylinder 1917 roadster; looks like new and is as good as it appears, $1100, TERMS. If you will allow us to demonstrate it to you, you will purchase it.

Paige 1917 touring car at $875, terms. This is real value for the money.

1917 Saxon six-cylinder touring car. POSITIVELY in perfect mechanical condition. It has many extras, including BOSCH MAGNETO, RAYFIELD CARBURETOR, bumper, spotlight, extra tire, etc. Easily worth $825. TERMS. FULLY GUARANTEED.

1917 Dort touring car, $600. Terms. Don't think that because the price is low that the car is not in good condition. It is excellent. FULLY GUARANTEED.

Hupmobile, 1916 touring car; thoroughly overhauled and refinished and easily worth the price of $850. Terms.

Maxwell 1918 touring car, fully equipped in every respect, and in good mechanical condition; $700, terms.

We GUARANTEE MOST OF OUR USED CARS. ADDING A LIBERAL SERVICE PERIOD AS WELL. IF YOU PURCHASE A GUARANTEED CAR YOU ARE THOROUGHLY PROTECTED. Our GUARANTEE is equal if not SUPERIOR to any offered by our competitors in used cars.

WE HAVE FOR SALE.
One attractive R. & L. electric coupe with brand new batteries, newly painted, car guaranteed for a year; price exceptionally low.

We have very pretty four-passenger electric coupe, battery less than a year old, four new cord tires and tubes. We offer this car for cash, $400. Tires alone are worth over half of it.

We have just received a 5-passenger Detroit electric coupe, which cost $3250. We are authorized to sell this car at a supreme sacrifice. Outside of a few scratches on the tires, we defy anyone to tell it from a brand new machine. It can be driven from either the front or rear seats. It is a beautiful car and a wonderful bargain.

HUN FALL PICTURED IN BAY SCENE.

German Prisoners at Brest Gaze at Surrendered U-Boats, Symbols of Empire's Wrecked Ambitions; French Brides Marvel at New Home Here.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

The terrific drama of the great war in its last year which I was privileged to witness—the stupendous spectacles which were flashed before the vision with staggering rapidity—all but left the onlooker numbed and blinded. Holocausts became commonplace. Yet, in retrospect, it seems to me that the most strikingly impressive thing that I witnessed was not part of the overwhelming struggle at the front, that clash of worlds which reached from the Alps to the English Channel, but rather a peaceful scene in the afterglow of this blood-red conflict.

This was at Brest. Toward evening just before setting sail I was walking among the wharves below the ancient walls which still bulwark this old seaport. A group of laborers in round caps and greenish-gray uniforms attracted my attention. These were German prisoners. They had ceased for a moment in their work, and were looking out across the bay. Melancholy was depicted in their faces, and in their very attitude.

I followed their gaze. Here was what they saw. About a hundred yards from shore and in front of them lay moored fourteen German submarines, which had been delivered to the French. Half a mile out beyond and directly in line with the submarines were silhouetted the gigantic outlines of the Leviathan, formerly the German liner, Vaterland and once the pride of that nation. Into the belly of that great ship, no longer German, were pouring thousands of victorious American troops, homeward bound.

WRECK OF BABYLON.

What must have been the reflections of those Germans on the shore, they themselves prisoners, as they gazed out over the water on these symbols of their wrecked hopes, of a ruined empire once proud and respected, of a shattered dream of world conquest, the blasted remnants of an iniquitous ambition. In Berlin there might be drinking and dancing, but this huddled group of prisoners on the mist-mantled shores of Brest knew that another great empire had gone the way of Babylon.

Most of the American casual officers embark from Brest. Formerly, considerable trouble was experienced there. Occasionally, officers, overcome by homesickness, sought to make their getaway to America without the proper credentials. There was one case of an officer being taken off shipboard two days out from France, placed on board a destroyer and returned to that country. Now they have erected a gauntlet in Brest which no officer without the proper credentials can hope to run successfully. This consists of a series of examinations and inspections which eventually land a man on shipboard. This system, which is largely automatic, was devised by Capt. J. M. Roberts of Redlands and formerly with the Packard Motor Car Company in this city. He is in charge of the clearing station there.

The Leviathan draws so much water that she is forced to anchor in the middle of the bay at Brest, being unable to enter any of the quays. This necessitates taking on fuel from lighters, and by the rather antiquated system of coal passing. As the ship requires approximately 9000 tons of coal for a trip, getting this into the bunkers a basketful at a time is a laborious and protracted undertaking.

SOLDIERS DO COALING.

To speed up the work a very clever system has been adopted. The work of coaling is turned over to soldiers who are going to sail on the Leviathan. The sooner the coaling is completed, the sooner the vessel will get under way. And under these conditions no homebound soldier is a slacker when it comes to coal passing. This stimulates them as no amount of wages could. Bonuses may have been required in the shipyards, but none is needed in the coaling of an American-bound boat. It is the urge of home.

On this particular trip the Leviathan was carrying about 8000 colored troops. Also we had three military bands on board. The coaling was placed in charge of these colored troops, and took about two days. During these two days these bands took turns at playing ragtime from the eighth deck. Under this added inspiration, the darky doughboys on the lighters down below worked at double-quick. Unquestionably it was the strangest series of band concerts ever staged in the history of music. And the coaling was done in record time.

But out in the middle of the Atlantic we had a concert which was in a class by itself. On board was a colored military band. This was divided into two equal parts, and equipped with identical instruments. Each part was known as a "jazz" band. The side making the most noise won. Christopher Columbus was a farseeing man, but how little he dreamed when he sailed this then uncharter ocean that some time two "jazz" bands composed of negro doughboys from the country which he had not yet discovered would disturb the nocturnal peace of Neptune in mid-Atlantic while going home in a ship about 10,000 times as big as the Santa Maria after having upset the old world.

Thus time and events do move, although there are some in Washington who do not seem to be aware of the fact, and are still snoozing around in the Columbian era.

SHEDDING THE COOTIES.

One of the chief concerns of the military authorities is to send officers, enlisted men and civilians, who have been attached to the army, home in a cootieless condition. A Bolshevik can get into this country easier than a cootie. A cootie trying to squeeze through one of our ports hasn't as much chance as a camel endeavoring to horn its way through the eye of a needle.

First, we were renovated for cooties at Brest. Then, fearing that some cooties might have managed to get on board with forged credentials, another inspection was held four days out. This time no mercy was shown to cooties which were apprehended. They were thrown bodily into the ocean, which was certainly a mean trick on the fish. One cootie is sufficient to make the life of a whole whale miserable. Docking in Hoboken we were purified some more, and again on disembarking. It is believed that not only all the original cooties embarking from Best, but also their numerous progeny were exterminated.

In our party were S. S. McClure, the magazine publisher; Wilmer Bolling, brother-in-law of President Wilson, and Lieut. Garfield, grandson of the martyred President and a brother of Capt. Garfield, who has charge of the President's bodyguard in Paris. Lieut. Garfield joined the French army before America entered the war, and continued with it until the armistice.

It is necessary to explain how the grandson of President Garfield came to be linked up with a cootie episode. Lieut. Garfield happened to be my bunk mate, but that had nothing to do with it. He was bringing a valuable meat hound back from France. Dogs were not particularly welcome on board, and this pup weighed heavily on his mind all the way across. Answering mess call and howling dolefully at the sad sea waves were its chief pastimes.

COULDN'T FIND DECK.

As far as known, dogs do not carry cooties, which chiefly feed on human beings. So the dog was not subject to any inspection, and the cootie authorities never gave it a thought. But just a few minutes before landing in Hoboken Lieut. Garfield found a typewritten order in his stateroom. It read:

"You must bring your dog to 'I' deck for cootie inspection before landing."

Ostensibly, it was signed by the chief cootie officer, but the whole thing was a fake. However, it looked genuine, and Lieut. Garfield, taking the hound under his arm, galloped aloft and below in a frantic search for "I" deck, for the time was short and he didn't fancy being stalled on shipboard for the night with the bright lights of Gotham glittering just across the Hudson.

The decks of the Leviathan are designated by letter, but there is no "I" deck. In a panic it might be mistaken for a No. 1 or the J. Not until Lieut. Garfield had explored all ten decks did he discover that he and his dawg had been made the victims of a cruel hoax.

Four bluejackets, members of the crew, were bringing home French girls whom they had married. These girls hardly were out of their teens. For them it was a tremendous adventure. They had never before been half a day's travel from their native village. And they could hardly speak a word of English. It was interesting to watch them as this greater world was revealed to them—their silent contemplation of the ocean's immensity, their ejaculations of "grand maison" when they caught the first sight of skyscrapers and their squeals of surprise when the outlines of that great industrial eruption, New York City, burst on their vision—Manhattan, tremendous and overwhelming, so unlike the villages and cities of their own native France, which nestle close to the ground like flower beds.

HOMESICK BRIDES.

One could but wonder if they would survive being transplanted. Everything over here will be so foreign to them. It was interesting to watch them on shipboard. They made brave attempts to partake of our American breakfasts. But it was no use. After a few days they even gave up the attempts. They would push aside the ham and eggs or chops, of whatever the matutinal dish happened to be. They wanted only the breakfast of their mere and their grand mere—a bit of bread and a cup of chocolate or cafe au lait. I fear by this time there are four very homesick brides in New York. Looking at them you could but feel that these country girls, radiating the soft, gentle spirit of France, were something frail that would be crushed in the torrent of Broadway—flowers that would wither and die and lose their fragrance in the hurly-burly of the new world.

But if there ever were four devoted husbands, it was these four bluejackets. All of them were eager to introduce their brides to their mothers-in-law, and it must have been a strange presentation, with neither able to speak a word of the other's language. Doubtless, however, there are advantages in having a mother-in-law who can't make you understand just what she thinks of you.

Speaking of flowers, reminds me that the golden hues of the California poppy may this spring mingle with the purple of France. While over there I received a package of poppy seeds from Mrs. George H. Pennington with a request to scatter them on the graves of our American dead. These were sown among the graves of those who died on the banks of the Marne, and let us hope that they grow and bloom and mantle these mounds with the reflected sunshine of the Golden State.

IN WHOSE FAVOR?

On the train out of Chicago there were two passengers who caught and riveted my attention, because so unlike. One was Jess Willard, huge, tremendous, healthy and prosperous. His name was in all the headlines. I was talking with him and Tex Rickard about the forthcoming fight with Dempsey when a girl in the uniform of an army nurse entered the car.

This was Miss Pearl Scott of Boston, who had been mentioned briefly and rather obscurely in the dispatches for heroic action near Verdun. Wounded in the side by a high explosive shell she continued to care for the fallen soldiers with no thought for herself. During this battle she was also gassed. You know what gas does to the lungs. The doctors in Boston told her that Arizona meant life to her.

And she was going out there to work in a Harvey House restaurant that she might live. One could but contemplate the contrast—the frail nurse and the big world's champion.

HOLD-UPS AT WORK.

Masked Men Find Victims in Three Sections of City.

Hold-up men, masked and using revolvers to frighten their victims, were reported at work in three different parts of the city just before midnight. Three men in a Ford set up headquarters at Eleventh and Elden streets and robbed Harold Conway of 932 West Twenty-second street of $25; Louise Douglas of 4120 Normandie avenue of a ring worth $200 and a valuable bar pin and necklace. They robbed Grace Smith of 1214 Fedora street of jewelry worth $150 and fired two shots at Bertha Roberts of 1118 Elden street because she did not stop and hand over her handbag. She stopped, but the robbers secured only $2 when they stole the bag.

Two men wearing blue masks held up Raymond Stinson of 1028 Ingraham street at Eighth and Whittier streets shortly before midnight. One of the men wore a soldier's leggins and breeches. Stinson handed over $7. Wong Hing handed over $20 to one man with a revolver at the corner of Concord and Lexington streets, Hollywood.

NEEDED THE MONEY TO LEAD GAY LIFE.

ALLEGED FORGER ADMITS BURGLARIZING BAY CITY BUSINESS HOUSE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, March 8.—Stanley L. Kirkman, who was arrested by the local police last night on a charge of burglary and forgery, today admitted to Chief of Police F. W. Ferguson that he entered the automobile establishment of the Miller Company night before last. He said he needed money to entertain girl friends at the Venice cafes and the dance pavilion. He had about $20 when placed under arrest.

Kirkman says he is a graduate of the State Normal school at Fresno, class of 1917, and that he has an uncle in the floral business in Pasadena.

He used to work as a machinist in local garages and when he passed a series of checks on Los Angeles merchants yesterday, he was dressed in a begrimed suit of overalls and jumper, under a worn coat.

At his room in a lodging-house on Pier avenue were found silk shirts, expensive shoes, neckwear and numerous auto parts.

Yeowomen to Have Own Quarters.

NEW ROAD WILL HELP AUTOISTS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA ANA, March 8.—Good news for Riverside and San Bernardino residents who drive through Orange county is contained in the announcement just made that the new Santa Ana Canyon road is completed and has been accepted by the Board of Supervisors. This puts the road in such shape that it will be open all summer, providing the shortest route from Riverside and San Bernardino to the beach resorts and eliminating the detour through Pomona which has been necessary when the canyon road was closed. The new road, on the slope of Sulphur Slide Hill, was built at a cost of $40,000 and is believed to have solved the problem for all time. The former road alongside the river below the slide was a source of continual trouble, especially during the rainy season.

RE-ESTABLISHMENT OF "ORIENT EXPRESS."

The company which controls the sleeping cars of Europe is about to establish a palatial through train from Paris to Constantinople. It is, indeed, the re-establishment of the famous Orient Express, which was one of the world's finest trains. The new Orient Express will run between Paris and Constantinople, but it will follow a route quite different from the old route. It will avoid, as if they were accursed, the lands of Germany and Austria.

The ante-bellum Orient Express went by way of Munich, Vienna and Budapest. For more than half the distance it was on German or Austro-Hungarian territory. The route of the new Orient Express will be through Milan, Venice, Trieste, Zagrab, Nish and Sofia. It will, indeed, touch Bulgarian soil, but Bulgaria no longer has anything in common with Teuton nations. There is no reason to avoid Bulgaria, harmless now and pitifully repentant.

The railway from Berlin to Bagdad was one of the most enticing dreams of imperial Germany. It was looked upon as a consummation which would signalize German world supremacy. It would mark the fulfillment of the plans and the plots for Mittel Europa, which would dominate the planet. In these plans and plots Constantinople was the half-way house. Germany was busily working both ways from Stamboul when war came. Throughout the progress of the struggle Germany never forgot that, after all, the establishment of Mittel Europa was the main aim. It bought Bulgaria and conquered Serbia and Rumania and Bolshevised Russia and saw its dream almost fulfilled. Only a "contemptible" army of British and Hindus in Mesopotamia stood in the way.

The crash at Chateau Thierry, hundreds of miles from Mittel Europa, wakened the Pan-Germanists from their golden dreams. Only a few months later the dream had become a nightmare.

Now Constantinople and the great, rich, undeveloped Asiatic lands beyond Constantinople are brought into direct touch with civilization. It is the touch of the world democracies, the touch of efficiency not debased by kultur or imperialism. It is the magic touch that will work miracles for the benefit of everyone.

The first trip of the new Orient Express from Paris through Italy, Jugo-Slavia and Bulgaria to Constantinople will mark an important step in world progress.—[Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TRAVELS BY DOG TEAM, RAIL AND STEAMSHIP.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

NENANA (Alaska) Feb. 7.—(By wireless and mail.) Attendance upon the sessions of the Legislature in Alaska involves more in the north than merely boarding a train for a certain destination. Take, for example, the case of Representative-elect Almer Rydeen of Candle, Seward Peninsula.

Rydeen made the long overland journey from Candle to Nenana by dog team. From here he will take passage on the government railroad to the end of steel, thence continue by dog team to Talkeetna, the end of steel in the Anchorage division. At Talkeetna he will again entrain to Seward, where he can take passage on a boat for Juneau.

This new route from the Seward Peninsula, however—via Nenana and Broad Pass—has cut the old "mushing" distance from interior Alaska points to the coast considerably, and affords travelers a cheap and easy route of travel.

Rehearsals are held regularly and the next one will be held Friday night. The public is invited.

FAMOUS BAND COMING HERE.

Men Who Played for Wilson in Paris to be Heard.

Arizona Border Musicians are with Fortieth Division.

Expect to go with Sunshine Men to Camp Kearny.

Unless some unforeseen military jinx bobs up and queers things the home folks in Arizona and Southern California will soon have the pleasure of listening to the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Infantry Band, which was chosen out of all musical organizations in the American Expeditionary Forces to play for President Wilson during his stay in Paris. After six weeks in Paris, during which four concerts were played each day, the famous old Arizona border band has rejoined its regiment, which, with other organizations in the Fortieth Division, expects to be home at an early date.

Although orders from the War Department call for the sending of all troops to demobilization camps within the district where the men were inducted or enlisted, a careful examination of the personnel of the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth band has revealed that it will be only slightly affected by this order, the majority of the bandsmen being from the Southwestern States and, therefore, slated to accompany the Sunshine Division back to its old training ground—Camp Kearny.

Members of the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth band, however, were not the only ones honored in Paris, for the President's honor guard, during the first part of his stay, was made up entirely of veteran officers and noncommissioned officers picked from all the companies in the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Infantry.

During its season in Paris the band was engaged by Pathe Freres to make a dozen records of the latest American jazz melodies and these records are said to be enjoying an almost unprecedented demand throughout France.

Organized many years ago when the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth used to be known by its pre-war title, "First Infantry, Arizona National Guard," the organization enjoyed a reputation from one end of the border to the other. The band that played in Paris was practically identically the same that played through Southern California during the Third Liberty Loan campaign last spring, and then toured its home State, Arizona, prior to its departure overseas.

Following are the members of the organization who were chosen to play in Paris upon the occasion of the first visit to Europe of any President of the United States:

Walter J. Born, Carl O. Nystrom, Richard Cloudesdale, Frank L. Christenson, Avery Carpentine, Joseph R. Crandall, John H. Cress, Edward F. Eldridge, Donald B. Adams, Thomas E. Adams, Everett K. Falck, Claude M. Frazier, Karl R. Goetz, Richard Harper, Gilman Haugen, Stanley Hayes, Joseph Holden, Alvah W. Hult, Paul G. Johnson, Paul E. Kelter, Charles Laws, Harold G. Lindoft, Guy A. Maktima, John McKinley, William T. Moore, Scott W. Morrill, Secundo Musso, William T. Osborne, Fred D. Perry, Eugene C. Pommal, William L. Reardon, Wheeler G. Rosenberger, Otto B. Schwalen, Albert H. Smith, Richard H. Wilson, George L. Wolter, Roscoe C. Wright, Morris A. Young, John J. Valiquet, Domer A. Reitz, Richard Osborne, Bernard J. McDermott, George Miglio.

Lieut. Albert R. Etzweiler, leader of the One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Band, personally conducted the concerts in Paris. Lieut. Etzweiler is a Phoenix (Ariz.) musician and is given a great portion of the credit for the showing made by the band in France.

ALASKA GOLD MINE PAYS BIG DIVIDEND.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

ANCHORAGE (Alaska) Feb. 5.—(By mail.) Despite exceptionally high labor, cost of mining supplies and transportation charges last year, the Gold Bullion Mining Company, which operates a gold quartz property in the Willow Creek district, about sixty-five miles northwest of Anchorage, has declared a dividend of $87,625.12, or 4½ cents a share. Although the par value of the shares is $1 each, 1,947,227 of the 2,000,000 shares put on the market sold for from 10 to 25 cents a share.

The Willow Creek district, aside from the Juneau district, is the richest gold quartz region in Alaska. In 1918 it produced ore valued at $300,000.

SINN FEINERS SET UP ARBITRATION COURTS.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

DUBLIN, Feb. 21.—The Sinn Feiners announce that they are establishing in Ireland Courts of Arbitration to deal with legal business, intended to take the place of the King's Courts. By resorting to the Sinn Fein tribunals it is urged that the people may avoid the payment of fees to the British exchequer and the employment of lawyers generally out of sympathy with the Sinn Fein cause. It is claimed that every sort of case from small debts to high court actions can be successfully handled in the Sinn Fein courts, some of which are said to be already at work. No method has been provided by which the Sinn Fein courts may enforce their decrees.

HUN TROOPS QUELL REDS.

Many Spartacans Taken Prisoner in Berlin Fighting to be Sentenced to Death.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BASEL, March 8.—Government troops have suppressed the armed revolt at Berlin, according to a dispatch from that city, and are now protecting workmen.

LONDON, March 8.—A great number of Spartacans were taken prisoner in the fighting in the center of Berlin Friday and will be sentenced to death, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen.

The fighting in Berlin ended at noon Friday, the dispatch adds, and government troops now occupy all public buildings and squares and a number of factories.

AMSTERDAM, March 8.—The majority Socialists have withdrawn from the strike committee in Berlin, according to a telegram filed there Friday afternoon, and it was considered doubtful at that time whether the trades unions would support the strike further. At the meeting Friday of the Berlin workmen's council, the independent Socialists and communists proposed three resolutions—extension of the strike to the gas, electric and water works, the executive committee of the workmen to take over the command of all the troops in Berlin, and negotiations with the government to be broken off.

The first resolution was carried by only a small majority, after which the majority Socialists left the meeting. Later, the majority Socialists held a meeting and decided to end the strike immediately and to call on the workers to resist terrorism.

BERLIN, Friday, March 7, 6 p.m.—The general strike in Berlin will be called off tonight. The labor federation at a meeting early this evening recommended that the workmen return to work Saturday.

The recommendation to return to work was carried by a vote of forty to five, inasmuch as the government had granted the major part of the political demands and chiefly because the strike was threatening the health and safety of the city. The resolution was to be considered tonight by a joint soldiers and workmen's council of Berlin. It was expected that the council would give it prompt endorsement.

COPENHAGEN, Friday, March 7.—German government troops have captured the police headquarters at Berlin and have completely cleared Alexandriaplatz of strikers, according to a Berlin dispatch.

Fighting has ceased in the center of the city, but continues in the Moabit section. The government troops suffered slight losses and captured many prisoners. To relieve the garrison of the police headquarters the government troops turned their heavy artillery against the houses near by and three shells hit a house which was used as insurgent headquarters, scattering the occupants in all directions.

Gas was used effectively in the attack on the strikers, according to the German Gazette of Berlin.

WEIMAR, Friday, March 7.—Social Democrats, who began a consultation with the German Cabinet yesterday relative to the Berlin strike and what concessions and guarantees could be offered the strikers, left for Berlin this morning. The conference is reported to have been satisfactory.

The terms which were decided upon will be laid before the strikers at Berlin this afternoon and are said to provide for recognition of the soldiers' and workmen's councils by the new constitution. This is looked upon as a most radical step. It is known that the Entente Allies do not favor it.

LONDON, Friday, March 7.—Describing the fighting in Berlin on Thursday night a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen says that during the whole night there were sounds of heavy detonations of cannon and explosives in the district where fighting was taking place. Flame throwers and trench weapons of all kinds were employed in the struggle, which was particularly violent around the police headquarters, which the Spartacans made desperate efforts to capture. Late in the evening government troops under Gen. Von Luttwitz, reported to number 50,000, entered Berlin and surrounded a great part of the center of the city, it is said.

At a stormy meeting held on Thursday evening the Soldiers' and Workmen's Council decided to extend the strike to the electric power plants and gas and water works, it is reported.

BERLIN, Thursday, March 6.—Police headquarters was besieged up till 3 o'clock this afternoon by Republican Guards and marines. The garrison kept within the building and the besiegers did not make any direct assaults. At times there was sharp firing, in which machine guns and mine throwers were used. The casualties were light.

The guards and marines seemed to have no united leadership.

OVER BILLION STILL AVAILABLE FOR ALLIES.

TREASURY REPORTS $1,158,000,000 CAN BE USED AS CREDITS IN EUROPE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Future credits to Allies now are limited to $1,158,000,000, the unused portion of the $10,000,000,000 appropriation, according to a report issued today by the Treasury. Until peace is declared this balance can be loaned to Allies for any war purposes, but thereafter for a year and a half credits may be extended only to enable Allies to purchase American property in Europe, or elsewhere, and to finance Allies' purchases of wheat, the price of which has been guaranteed by the United States government.

The War Department's liquidating commission, now in Europe, is expected to report soon the approximate value of railroad material, army equipment and other property which the United States will have for sale in Europe. This report will shed some light on the volume of post-war credits which may be expected of this government. France and Belgium will be the biggest borrows for these purposes since they are expected to acquire most of the railroad rolling stock, warehouses and other property offered for sale by the United States.

Since Congress failed to approve the Treasury's recommendations that it be permitted to use the unexpended portion of authorized credits as post-war loans to Allies to finance exports from this country, this function will be limited to the War Finance Corporation which has an appropriation of a billion dollars available for advances to exporters.

Eleven Allies are now debtors to the United States. Credits have been established amounting to $8,841,657,000, but $410,930,000 of this sum, although subject to draft, has not yet been paid out of the Treasury. Great Britain borrowed nearly as much as all other Allies combined.

By nations, credits established, and the balances still subject to draft, are as follows:

	Credits.	Balances.
Great Britain	$4,124,481,000	$ 72,481,000
France	2,517,477,000	90,000,000
Italy	1,405,000,000	10,000,000
Belgium	338,145,000	60,300,000
Russia	325,000,000	137,270,000
Greece	39,554,000
Czecho-Slovakia	35,000,000	20,900,000
Serbia	27,000,000	10,000,000
Cuba	15,000,000	5,000,000
Rumania	10,000,000
Liberia	5,000,000	4,988,000

OSBORNE SEES LEAGUE DOOM UNLESS CHANGED.

CONGRESSMAN SAYS MONROE DOCTRINE, SOVEREIGNTY MUST BE MAINTAINED.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, March 8.—Special provisions, which will leave unhampered the institutions of the United States, particularly the Monroe Doctrine, and which will prevent this nation losing full authority over its army, navy and immigration limitations, are alterations in the League of Nations, proposed by Congressman Henry Z. Osborne of Los Angeles, who is visiting here at the home of his son, Clarence B. Osborne. Mr. Osborne is en route to his home from Washington.

"I was a member of the League to Enforce Peace long before this war involved us and I am strongly in favor of perfecting some sort of league which will prevent, as far as possible, all wars," said Mr. Osborne, "but I do not want to see the United States enter any league, in which it has only one vote out of nine without some special provisions which will protect our national interest.

"I strongly believe that the proposed league, under a constitution such as it now has will never gain the sanction of either the Senate or the House," said Mr. Osborne. "I never have heard either a Democrat or a Republican in Senate or House speaking enthusiastically in favor of the league."

Mr. Osborne blames the administration for the failure of Congress to pass important legislation in the session just closed. He argues that the administration failed to present a programme for readjustment and thereby left Congress without any basis to work on. The obstruction which developed in the Senate in the last hours he characterized as the refusal to forego the right of discussion.

Congressman Osborne also promises some extensive investigation by the next Congress into alleged failures and shortcomings of the present administration, chief of which is the aircraft conduct.

THROOP WINS FROM OCCIDENTAL.

In one of the most closely-contested track meets seen in a long time, Throop College defeated Occidental by one point yesterday afternoon on Patterson Field; the final score being 66-65. Neither of the teams was in good condition, having trained for only two weeks, but each event was fought to the finish. Occidental started in a businesslike way to grab all the first places, but before many minutes had passed, she found herself losing out in the field events.

Payne of Throop, proved to be high man among the Engineers, as he took four first places. His work in the hurdle events was especially good, for, though the time was not particularly fast, he showed good promise of better things. De Silva and Mintle were the other Throop performers of merit on the track, while Simmons exerted himself strenuously and well in the field events.

FULLERTON NOW GRID CHAMPION

Defeats Coronado for the Southland Honors.

Fifty-Yard Forward Pass Featured the Game.

Victors to Challenge for the State Title.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FULLERTON, March 8.—Fullerton Union High won the Southern California gridiron championship this afternoon when it took Coronado High into camp by the score of 18 to 0. From start to finish Fullerton showed superiority on the field, though the punting and tackling were about even.

The feature of the game was a 50-yard pass from Hawkins of Fullerton, to Goodwin. Three times Stogsdill failed to kick goal, no excuse, other than the wind, is made, as he is ordinarily good at the trick. Meiser for Fullerton was the most spectacular player, while the work of Suggett of Coronado, who was with the team that played at Pasadena on New Year's Day, stood out above all others of the team.

Fullerton had another touchdown within its grasp but a fumble within a foot of the line gave Coronado a kick at the ball and the game ended with Fullerton within about fifty yards of the Coronado line. Lineup:

Coronado—Young, L.E.; Meza, L.T.; Gilbert, L.G.; Lukins, C.; Welch, R.G.; Young, R.T.; Rittoff, R.E.; Jessop, Q.B.; Suggett, L.H.; Thompson, R.H.; Ellis, F.B.

Fullerton—Goodwin, R.E.; Meiser, R.T.; Osburn, R.G.; Kuchel, C.; Hartranft, L.G.; Gale, L.T.; Hitebring, L.E.; Travis, Q.B.; A. Hawkins, R.H.; Stogsdill, L.H.; J. Hawkins, F.B.

Fullerton will challenge Bakersfield to decide the championship of the State.

McLOUGHLIN TOOK PART IN DOUBLES.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

RIVERSIDE, March 8.—Maurice McLoughlin, world's champion tennis star, made his initial appearance of the season here this afternoon, playing in doubles with Frank Barker, Los Angeles city champion, against Frank Winne, Southern California champion, and Simpson Sinsabaugh.

The latter took the first match that had the 2000 fans on their feet, the score being 11-9. McLoughlin and Barker then won two in a row, 6-2, 6-2.

The March Field singles and doubles finals were played off as a curtain raiser to the big tournament.

Williams and Emory won doubles, 6-2 and 6-3, while the singles trophy was won by Brody, the Brown University star, who beat Chapman, the Northwest champion, 6-4, 6-1.

In the woman's doubles, another big exhibition match, Mrs. Bruce, Miss Eleanor Tennent beat Mrs. Widdowson and Miss Florence Sutton, 4-6, 7-5 and 7-5.

MANUAL ARTS WINS FIRST TRACK MEET.

TROUNCES PASADENA OUTFIT TO THE MELODY OF 70 TO 28.

Manual Arts High School won its first track meet of the season yesterday afternoon by trouncing Pasadena High on the latter's field by a score of 70 to 28. The Crown City runners offered very little competition for the star Toiler cinder path men, but the set-to proved that the local boys are to be seriously considered this year despite rumors that the Artisans were woefully weak.

Yesterday's meet brought to light a new speed star at the Toiler institution. The "find" is named Redman, and judging from his performances against Pasadena, he is due to fill the shoes of Charlie Paddock, erstwhile sprinting star who formerly attended Pasadena High. The youthful runner who is but a sophomore, romped away with the century and furlong events in exceptional time. He was clocked at 10 1-5s. in the former and 24s. flat in the latter. He also ran the first lap of the relay, which was captured by Manual.

FIVE IRISHMEN ARE ROBBED IN A NIGHT.

MISFORTUNES MOSTLY START AT VERNON, VICTIMS TELL THE POLICE.

Five Irishmen fell victims last night to highwaymen and pickpockets, according to reports to Lieut. Roberds at the detective bureau. In each case the misfortune started in Vernon, the victims said.

The first to make a report was J. J. Fitzpatrick of 1759 Phillips way, who stated that he met three strangers in a Vernon saloon and when one of them suggested a ride in his automobile he went along. The ride extended all the way from Vernon to Blue Bird Ranch in Eagle Rock, where the strangers turned on Fitzpatrick, and, after beating him severely, extracted $30 and a watch from his pocket. A suggestion was then made to throw him off a bridge, but Fitzpatrick's pleadings finally ended in their throwing him from the auto.

Frank McCaughy of the Golden Rule Hotel reported that some friends he met in a Vernon saloon last night kindly assisted him on a street car and a few minutes later he discovered a wallet containing $130 was missing from his hip pocket.

O. C. Harford, also of the Golden Rule Hotel, told Lieut. Roberds that after meeting friends in a cafe last night he discovered that a pocketbook containing $16 and some valuable papers were missing from his pockets.

BOY IS RUN DOWN; DRIVER ARRESTED.

MAN ACCUSED OF SPEEDING IN DRUNKEN CONDITION IS CAUGHT AT FULLERTON.

Charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated and also with having fled after having run over and seriously injuring John Johnson, 15 years of age, of No. 602 Indiana street, at Stephenson avenue and Indiana street late yesterday afternoon, a man giving the name of George Young, a salesman of this city, was arrested by City Marshal Myers as he drove his automobile into Fullerton. Young was locked in the County Jail.

According to deputy sheriffs who investigated the case and who brought about the arrest of the automobile driver by telephoning all near-by cities to be on the lookout for his machine, Young at the time of the accident was driving at about 50 miles an hour. At the crossing of Indiana street and Stephenson avenue he lost control of his machine and, after running across the curbing, struck the Johnson boy, who had just started across the street.

At the County Hospital, where the injured boy was taken for treatment, he is said to be in a serious condition, suffering a possible fracture of the skull as well as many lacerations about the head, face and body.

BUY HARBOR BANK.

Los Angeles Men Acquire Savings Institution There.

This announcement was made yesterday by Ernest N. Torchia, a local attorney with offices in the International Bank Building.

Mr. Torchia denied that he was representing the Bank of Italy, as had been reported, and said that Chicago and Los Angeles capitalists plan to start an entirely new Italian-American bank in this city with a harbor branch. If the deal for the purchase of the First National at San Pedro is not concluded, the First National at Wilmington may be purchased or a new national bank started, it is said.

CLUB WOMEN'S SUIT IS ENDED.

Famous Babcock-Middlecoff Litigation is Over.

Transferred to Stockton, it is Now Off Calendar.

Caused Many Quarrels; Grand Jury Took it Up.

The cause of many thrills and of much quarreling between prominent Los Angeles and Southern California club women, and of bitter charges and counter-charges made from the witness stand against one another, the $150,000 libel suit filed by Mrs. Eleanor Babcock against Mrs. Eliza F. H. Middlecoff and Mrs. Mary Gridley Braly has been dismissed in the courts of Stockton, according to word received yesterday by E. T. Scherer and George F. McNoble, attorneys for the defendants.

The libel charge and damage suit, which had as its base a letter alleged to have been written by Mrs. Middlecoff to a Mrs. Wright of this city, said to have been a warning against admitting Mrs. Babcock to the local Ebell Club, was brought in this city first in Superior Judge Jackson's court, over a year ago. It was later referred to the grand jury, and then a change of venue was asked for and granted, and the case when dismissed was pending in the courst at Stockton, the home of Mrs. Middlecoff.

Alleged love letters of various club women, plots and counterplots, the burglary of Mrs. Babcock's Glendale home, when she declared she was chloroformed and her personal papers searched, and many other features involving many persons, entered into the case. Charges that she had been called a "cheat" and a woman of "poor reputation," were made by Mrs. Babcock. A package of ribbon-tied love letters, alleged to have been purchased by Mrs. Babcock from a mining man and said to have been written by a prominent Los Angeles club woman, were also introduced.

The letter upon which the suit was based alleged that Mrs. Babcock had failed to take up her part of a note which she signed jointly with Mrs. Middlecoff, and also that she did not pay some outstanding debts in Stockton. The first complaint filed by Mrs. Babcock was dismissed and a second complaint naming Mrs. Braly as well as Mrs. Middlecoff was filed by Mrs. Babcock's attorneys, W. J. Ford and Henry G. Bodkin. The case was then removed to Stockton.

During the hearing in this city, Judge Jackson declared that while many reputable club women had been called as witnesses "some one is committing perjury." As the case went on, contradictory evidence was brought out in such quantity that Judge Jackson directed the District Attorney to send a deputy to the hearing.

According to Attorney W. J. Ford, Henry G. Bodkin, also acting for Mrs. Babcock, was present in Stockton when the case came up for hearing, and asked that it be dismissed.

Mrs. Babcock at the time of filing the suit was a member of the Friday Morning Club, Regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and was well known in local social circles. Mrs. Eliza F. H. Middlecoff at one time was a member of the Ebell Club here and at the time of the hearing was a member of the same club in Stockton. Mrs. Mary Gridley Braly, also named in the second complaint, was well known in local society and a member of a number of women's clubs.

FLEET CORPORATION INSPECTOR RESIGNS.

T. W. RANSOM WILL RETURN TO SAN FRANCISCO; CAPT. PILLSBURY MAY QUIT ALSO.

T. W. Ransom, chief inspector here for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, with offices in the Title Insurance Building, has tendered his resignation and will resume his own offices in San Francisco shortly after April 1. Announcement of his resignation and its acceptance by Capt. A. F. Pillsbury, district manager for the southern district, was made yesterday.

A report that Capt. Pillsbury has also resigned and will sever his connections with the fleet corporation about the same time, could not be verified last night. Capt. Pillsbury, who, like Mr. Ransom, was a marine expert and engineer in San Francisco before entering government service, is in the northern city.

Mr. Ransom, declared last night that he feels the emergency that brought most of the marine men to the assistance of the fleet corporation no longer exists.

"As soon as I wind up my affairs here, I intend to resume my practice as a consulting engineer in my offices at the Merchants' Exchange Building in San Francisco," he said. "I took the matter up with Capt. Pillsbury in January, and was asked to remain here until April."

It is believed that Roy C. Hackley, assistant to the chief inspector, may take over the vacancy. Mr. Hackley has been in close touch with the work of the Los Angeles district.

FACT AND COMMENT.

A returned soldier of the A.E.F., ...t. Arthur Taylor of Calexico, ...w service in France with the ...ry engineers and who is now an ...gineer for the Imperial Valley ...gation district, writes interestingly in a letter to The Times, of a ...se of highway development ...that should unquestionably ...given greater consideration in California. The subject of his ...servations is highway tree-planting, a work that takes high importance in Europe, but which, unfortunately, has been too much ...lected in this, the region noted above all others in America for its ...d roadways.

"During the months I spent in France," writes Capt. Taylor, "I was ...great deal of the time on highway construction work and found my...constantly comparing French ...American roads. While it is ...that our concrete roads are superior in quality to the French ...-bound macadam; in general, the comparison is against us in regard to roadside beautification. ...rarely finds a road in France ...which is not bordered with uniformly planted shade trees, while with ...the border consists of the debris ...by the contractor.

"The road border trees of France ...three purposes, and it is a ...calculation to figure that ...purposes make them ...ally profitable. In the first ..., the trees beautify the roads ...such an extent that the highways ...France are delightful for motor ...and famous the world over ...this account. Secondly, their ...is a protection to the road ...that it helps prevent disintegration. In the third place, (and this ...consideration not at all insignificant) when the trees grow large ...enough to permit thinning out, they ...cut for timber and fuel wood, ...a considerable revenue. ...the war it was not uncommon to see every other tree on large ...of main highways cut for ...for military uses.

"I was told by French engineers ...in planning new roads, the cost ...planting trees is as much figured ...in estimates as are any of the ...of building materials ...planting is an integral part of ...road-building programme in ...wonderful country.

"The same idea could be applied ...our own highway construction ...reasons, both esthetic and ...practical, for tree planting are ap...in California as well as in .... Regardless of the material ...the shade and shelter of ...would be a benefit to our .... If of concrete, the shade ...would equalize the temperature ...day and night and thus the expansion and contraction ...causes slow disintegration ... If of oil bound macadam ...surface, shelter from the di...of the sun afforded by ...would prevent softening and ...wearing away of the surface. ...to say, the revenue that ...eventually be derived through ...thinning out of the highway ...would come in handy. And ...shut your eyes for a minute ...picture our highways bordered ...with beautiful shade trees! How ...more delightful motoring ...would be and with what greater ...the traveler would sing of ...the beauties of California's highways."

...Taking Up.

...Times has more than once ...attention to the barren ap...of some of the finest ...of highway built by the ...and the various counties in .... In a recent article a ...told of efforts being made in ...looking to the beautification of highways built by the com...at large. One of the ...brought out was the easily ...noticeable difference in the wear...capacity of existing highways ...exposed constantly to the ...rays of the sun and those that ...a little shade. "Next time ...riding," said the writer ...Lord) "notice if some of ...smoothest road you find is not ...shaded by trees." Capt. Taylor's personal observations in France afford additional valuable light on the subject.

From an aesthetic point of view, the tree-lined highway is unquestionably worth the added cost required for planting purposes. The most popular drives in Southern California are those out through the foothill districts where private owners, with an eye to beauty, have in years past set out rows of bordering trees along county roadways. It would probably be hard to find in France or anywhere else two more beautiful stretches of road than the tree-lined Sherman way in the San Fernando Valley and the famous Himalayan pine-bordered avenue that runs through the center of Altadena. Both show what could be done along hundreds of miles of California highways if the planting of trees along roadways were to be seriously undertaken. There is a tree for about every soil and every kind of climate and even desert roadways could be beautified if trees adapted to dry conditions were given the proper kind of start and a modicum of attention when grown. California highways could be made the most beautiful as well as the best constructed in the world if Californians would but say the word.

Here, perhaps, is another feasible public undertaking that could be launched in time to help provide work for unemployed soldiers. It is certainly worth taking up from this as well as other points of view.

BIG BRICK OUTPUT.

Million-dollar Advertising Campaign Planned by American Association.

One million dollars will be spent by the American Face Brick Association in national advertising during the next three years, according to Howard Frost, president of the Los Angeles Pressed Brick Company, who says that this was one of the important projects of the association held up by the war.

"At a recent meeting in Chicago," says Mr. Frost, "face brick manufacturers representing total shipments of 411,000,000 face brick during 1916 signed the association's articles of agreement. The total annual production of face brick in the United States is estimated at approximately 700,000,000. It is expected that the association will soon be increased by at least another 100,000,000 annual production."

In the past few winters there has been a pressing need for such a hotel. It is understood that the proposed hotel will be built at the southern end of Central avenue, about four miles from the city, where it will have a rugged mountain background and a view of the cultivated Salt River Valley. The improvements would include a group of cottages and an eighteen-hole golf course.

CITY AND COUNTY CENTER SUGGESTED.

ADAPTATION OF OLD-TIME PLAN IS TO BE PRESENTED.

Among the several plans proposed for a civic center for Los Angeles is one which has been prepared by H. C. Lichtenberger on behalf of the Temple Block Civic Center League for submission to the civic center commission appointed by Mayor Woodman, and of which William Mulholland is chairman. H. C. Lichtenberger, head of the probate department of Los Angeles county, is president of the Temple Block Civic Center League, Louis Roeder being secretary. A committee appointed by the league to present the merits of the plan to the official body includes P. F. Schumacher, Evelyn L. Stoddard, Joseph Mesmer, John Lopizich, Frank Bryson, Madeline Etchemendy and J. B. Amestoy.

Roughly, the plan contemplates the acquisition by the city and county of additional ground in the neighborhood of the Courthouse and the Temple Block, north of First street, as a site for future public buildings. Mr. Lichtenberger explains that he is looking ahead to the time when city and county governments can be consolidated and the buildings of both conveniently grouped. His idea is to include in a civic center site all the ground between Spring and Main from First street north to the Temple Block, the property from the International Bank Building at Temple and Spring south to Franklin between Spring and New High, and the land between New High and Broadway from the Hall of Records to Franklin, which he suggests should be renamed Court street. Buildings for city, county and State would be erected on the ground secured.

Explaining the features of the Temple Block League plan, which is illustrated by the sketch on this page, prepared by a local architect, Mr. Lichtenberger said yesterday:

"The principal features to be proposed by our league are, first, low cost; second, desirability of location; third, possibilities for city and county consolidation; fourth, artistic arrangement of buildings. If the State of California will unite with the city and county, all of the governmental buildings will be grouped in one center, making a most convenient arrangement for taxpayers and those persons doing business in any of the city, county or State departments. It is pointed out that the cost of the land and improvements thereon will be much less than a location of similar area in any other part of the city which would be adaptable to the purpose.

"The assessed value of all the land included in this plan is $479,040, and that of the buildings is $191,700, or a total of $670,740. This is exclusive of the International Bank Building. Should this property be added, it could be used as it is with slight alterations on its south face.

"It is contemplated to widen Spring street and Court street to 100 feet. The property owned by the Philips estate and formerly occupied by the Hamburger Department Store, would be set aside for the California State building. A small park between the State building and the International Bank Building would be the connecting link between the present Courthouse and the New City Hall."

OAK KNOLL LIBRARY.

Myron Hunt, architect, has completed plans for a large library building to be erected on the estate of H. E. Huntington at Oak Knoll. The main building will be 160 by 200 feet, with three wings each about 150 feet deep. The construction will be reinforced concrete and brick. Bids will not be taken until the return of Mr. Huntington from New York early this summer.

MOST CHARMING PART OF WILSHIRE.

Elegant white cement 10-room home of taste and beauty, perfect in every detail. Must be sold for $15,000.

The choice selected hardwoods used in the interior would cost today THREE times. The elegant massive tiled baths at least TWICE what was paid when this home was recently built, the labor has also DOUBLED, yet for a quick sale the price is less than cost of production two years ago—far less than you could duplicate it at today.
The vaulted living-room in genuine hand-rubbed TOBASCO MAHOGANY, the rich dining-room and cosy breakfast-room, the clever den in solid paneled CIRCASSIAN WALNUT, are each of them masterpieces. There's a model kitchen, maid's room and bath, cement basement and unit system GAS FURNACE with electric control.
Above are TWO commodious TILED BATHS with a fine shower in one, FOUR big airy bedrooms and a large SLEEPING PORCH all inclosed, also a fine pergola open porch. DOUBLE garage and all other complete appointments of a gentleman's home, including attractive lawn, flowers and shrubbery. Ask for MR. BOLGIANO.

A WONDER SITE
Overlooking THE WORLD—
A REAL BARGAIN OF BARGAINS
CUT FROM $9200
TO ONLY $2200.

For quick sale, $7000 DISCOUNT on a $9200 sale! No matter how it may sound—WE CAN DELIVER. Everyone doesn't care for the "up-in-the-air stuff," others do. And for one who wants a home, high up, and overlooking the rest of the world, this is truly a "wonder home site." High above the North Hollywood-Laurel Canyon District, with an uninterrupted view from every angle, as far as the eye can reach, it leaves nothing to be desired for the seeker of this class of property. It's all level—"once you're there." It overlooks hundreds of fine homes built upon less sightly sites, a third the size, yet which cost several times the price we ask for
THIS BLOCK OF TEN (10) LOTS
CUT FROM $9200 to ONLY $2200—just $220 a lot, each a perfect home site in itself, and suitable for homes of ANY PRICE. This is part of a big tract taken over under mortgage foreclosure, and being sold REGARDLESS OF FORMER PRICES OR VALUES. There is many a $10,000 building site in this district that CANNOT COMPARE with this, considered the finest block in all this big tract. We have several other blocks intact on this same crest, but this particular site is the cream of it all. The others were originally priced from $2000 to $7250, and we have CUT AND DISCOUNTED THEM in the same proportion as the "ninety-two-to-twenty-two-hundred."
We believe, that on this class of property, in this district, THESE SACRIFICE PRICES of ours will NEVER be duplicated. If interested, you cannot afford to delay. Personal interview necessary.

Coachella Valley.

FOR SALE—

POMONA, Cal.
March 6, 1919.

DEAR TOM:

I wish to tell you about my trip and investment in Coachella Valley. I went with Mr. J. S. Webb, 420 Brockman Bldg., who has been active in developing this interesting territory for sixteen years. It is astonishing how many people in Los Angeles talk with authority about a section they don't know anything about. Uninformed people talked to me so much they almost discouraged me from going.

When I reached the Coachella Valley I had the most agreeable surprise of my life. It is beautiful. The sun shines almost all the time. The valley is almost surrounded by snow-capped mountains. The climate is so perfect there are a number of millionaires wintering in this section.

I saw thousands of acres of productive soil. Mr. McPheters grew sixty thousand nine hundred and fifty pounds of Bermuda onions on one acre one year, without the use of fertilizer.

On good soil an eight-year-old date garden will produce you three and a half tons of confection dates per acre per year. Bread dates will do more. You can produce these dates ready to pack for forty dollars a ton. They are bringing fourteen hundred dollars a ton now.

You propagate a date garden from seed or offshoots. The offshoots are bringing ten dollars apiece now, and when the results of recent discoveries in the date business are known the demand will increase rapidly, so will the price.

I saw a young garden of less than three acres from which they sold last week five thousand dollars worth of offshoots. The prospects are fine for an excellent date crop this fall on this three acres.

I bought forty acres and enough offshoots to plant five acres. If I attend to my offshoots, in four years from now my garden will be profitable. Then the five acres will take care of myself and family in luxury for over a century.

It used to take two to three years to root the offshoots, and they saved from 25 to 30 per cent. Today they root them in 120 days, and save 98 per cent.

While I am waiting for my dates I can make a good living growing cotton, beans, onions, etc., between the palms.

This is what I have been looking for, a healthy country to rear my children (they have fine schools in the valley,) and a sure income for my old age. I have done better than I hoped for. My date garden will bring a handsome income for generations.

The date business is fool proof. Frost does not hurt them, neglect does them no permanent injury, only delays the profitable crop.

There are only seventy thousand acres of land in America that is possible to mature these fine dates properly. I saw a twelve-year-old ten-acre garden which a short time ago was moved from another valley, where they would not mature their fruit properly. They are now moving a forty-acre 5-year-old date garden from another State to the Coachella Valley.

Tom, the date land is selling cheap and fast now. The present prices cannot remain long. There is a fine forty next to mine for sale. I hope you will be the fortunate one to get it.

Your friend,
JIM.

P. S. There are lots of quail and wild ducks in the valley. Some big horn sheep and deer are in the mountains. I am happy now because I can make a good living and have something for my old age.

You need a guide in Coachella Valley. See my friend, Mr. J. S. Webb, and tell him I sent you. He certainly knows the valley. You will find him at 420 Brockman Bldg.
JIM.

BUSINESS CHANCES—

WE ARE HAPPY THIS WEEK BECAUSE WE were able to make three other people happy, and incidentally make some money for ourselves. We advertised last Sunday that we had several clients with money for investments, and asked for good business propositions to submit to them. We received a great many, and among those were three sound, clean business propositions that we had no trouble in selling to our clients. We are of the opinion that it will pay us to give the public an illustration of what took place with one of these men. He had a good little business, or, in other words, the making of a big business, but was handicapped for sufficient capital to go ahead with it. He has been trying for over a year to get someone with some money in with him. He met us on Friday morning, presented his proposition, and before night, I had the man for him with the money in escrow. How many other similar men are there that I can be of assistance to? I am at your service; will treat any and all matters strictly confidential, but, for heaven's sake, don't come in and take up my time with promotions and pipe dreams. The only kind of business propositions that I will work on are those that are in operation, which need capital and assistance combined. RATTRAY, 1008 Title Insurance Building.

WE MANUFACTURE A CARBURETOR FOR FORD cars which is guaranteed to give double the mileage over any other carburetor ever constructed regardless of name, make or price.

Reliable, energetic men who can guarantee sales and carry stock of $500 to $2000, depending on demand, can secure exclusive territory and will easily net $10,000 this year. No special experience necessary.

Will also furnish carburetors for other cars in about sixty days.

BRITISH COAL MINERS' DEMANDS COME HIGH.

[BY A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Feb. 3.—It is calculated that $200,000,000 will be added to the annual expense of the collieries of Great Britain and $1 a ton to the cost of coal to the consumer if the miners are granted the higher pay, shorter hours and modern methods which they demand and if they do not produce more coal under those conditions.

Although the miners in America are fewer, it is pointed out, the production there is enormously greater, owing to better working conditions, modern machinery and modern mine equipment. Sympathy with the demands of the miners in their demands is somewhat withheld on the ground that they were given preference over others in demobilization. Mine owners declare that because of this the workmen should place the supply of coal on a satisfactory basis before raising questions of hours and wages.

TAX QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Q. Should cash dividends received on stock of corporations during 1918 from earnings made in 1917 and previous years be entered on page 1 of form 1040 under item 12, together with dividends received in stock, or is this intended only for stock dividends? If the cash dividends should also be entered there, then under Ka, page 2, should only dividends earned and paid in 1918 be entered? F. E. S.

A. Page 1, form 1040, item 12, should include stock dividends only.

Q. A married man, living with wife and no other dependents, has salary of $7500, dividends from corporation stocks $9889.25 and wife's similar dividends $625, out of which he pays real estate taxes of $379.47 and interest on money borrowed on income stocks of $5808.02, and interest on money borrowed to buy stocks of $3000, and $350 given to charity. How much income tax should he pay?

A. Since the expenses in above case are greater than items of income for normal tax, no normal tax would be due. The gross income, including dividends, is $17,389.25. The gross expenses $10,437.48, leaving a total net income of $6951.76. Since this is in excess of $5000, a tax would be due on amount between $5000 and $6000 at 1 per cent., or $10, and on amount between $6000 and $8000, $951.76, at 2 per cent., or $10.04, a total tax of $29.04. The dividends received by wife are not included in the above case in computing the surtax of the husband.

Q. My net income after deducting taxes, expenses, etc., is $2560, and I am married, have two children and father as dependents. I also have dividends from stocks of $1456. On what do I pay tax? 2. A partnership exists for first four months of 1918 with profits of $700. Shall this be included in return? P. P.

A. Under above statement no normal or surtax would be due, since for normal tax purposes you would be entitled (if children under 18 and father incapable by reason of physical or mental capacity to support himself) to a specific exemption of a total of $2600. Your gross, including dividends, is less than $5000, hence no surtax. However, return must be filed in your case, even though no tax shown to be due.

Q. On form 1040, if item 25 is $8000, 26 is $2000, and 27 is $6000, what is 28 and 29? If amount of item 30 is $5000, what is item 31? E. A. S.

A. Line 28, $4000 at 6 per cent., $240. Line 29, $2000 at 12 per cent., $240.

Q. Is one whose income does not exceed his exemptions required to make a return? J. E. L. L.

A. If income of a single person, a married person not living with wife or husband or a head of a family is $1000 or more, return must be filed, even though exemptions are greater than the income. Also if income of a married person, living with wife or husband, amounts to $2000 or more, return must be filed, even though exemptions may be greater than income.

Q. Salary $6000, interest on mortgage $180, on Liberty Bonds $200, dividends $4000; total $10,380, out of which may I make exemption of $1650 court judgment under the head of losses? Do I report on blank 1040 or on blank for more than $5000, and to collector at Los Angeles, which is to be my future home? J. C. L.

A. If the court judgment is a business loss it is a proper deduction. Report on blank form 1040. If this is now your residence, report to Collector at Los Angeles.

FINANCIAL REVIEW.

Banking Interests to Meet All Railroad Emergencies.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 8.—Developments of the week, with one important exception—the failure of Congress to pass the general deficiency bill, involving funds necessary for maintenance of the railroads—were of a character to further the upward movement in the stock market, daily transactions again ranging from 750,000 to 1,000,000 shares.

The rapidity with which transportations rallied from their comparative moderate setback gave rise to belief that means will be provided by private banking interests, with the approval of the War Finance Corporation, to meet all emergencies.

Aside from dividend reductions made by several of the prominent copper producing companies which clearly were anticipated in the recent declines of those issues, industrial news mainly was encouraging.

Efforts to stabilize the market for steel and iron and the optimistic views of leaders of that industry infused strength to almost the whole list of equipments and allied shares.

Profit-taking again was evident in certain specialties, such as motors and their subsidiaries, also the oils, but those issues did only a small part of their recent material gains. On the average, the more active industrials and kindred industries were at highest levels of the year. Shipping made belated advance on reports that negotiations have been resumed with the government for the sale of mercantile tonnage halted by the attitude of the British authorities.

UNITED EASTERN

At the annual meeting, March 4th, it was made known that this company's ore reserves are larger today than at any time in its history, it being estimated that they had in excess of six millions of dollars of ore blocked out without taking into consideration the tonnage blocked out in the original Big Jim property. The stock is a good investment at present prices.

BIG JIM CON. NELLIE

These companies are actively developing their properties, and important results can be expected before long. Present quotations are low.

GOLD DUST ADAMS LUCKY BOY GOLD ORE

These companies are planning early resumption of work and their stocks will sell higher.

It is our opinion that the Oatman speculative issues will show big profits inside the next sixty days' time if bought at present market quotations.

GOLF TOURNEY COMES TO CLOSE.

The invitation golf tournament that has been going on at the Altadena Country Club was brought to a successful close yesterday afternoon. There were two events and more than 100 golfers participated.

The best gross prize went to Elmer Ralphs and Leo Youngsworth with 3 down to par. Both men were at the top of their game and pulled many sensational shots.

J. L. Mather and L. Pattee broke even with par in the best net event. The shooting of Mather at times bordered on the sensational, while the brand of golf put up by most of the players was really high class. The course was in good condition and the tournament, just like all Altadena club affairs, was most successful.

WRIGLEY NEGOTIATES FOR THIRD STEAMER.

COTTAGERS ON CATALINA CAN BUY SITES; AVALON LOTS TO BE SOLD.

William Wrigley, Jr., who recently purchased the controlling interest in Santa Catalina Island, has opened negotiations for another steamer which, if bought, will make three boats in the Avalon-San Pedro service.

Mr. Wrigley also said that for the first time cottagers are now being given the privilege of purchasing the lots on which their cottages stand. Sites have heretofore been leased from year to year. After March 15 the general public will be given the opportunity to buy lots in the heart of Avalon. In this way Mr. Wrigley plans to establish a colony of summer homes.

Mr. Wrigley will take a party of fifty to the island today for over Sunday, including a number of prominent eastern visitors as well as members of the Blankenhorn-Hunter organization of Los Angeles and Pasadena.

No hitch has developed in the negotiations between Mr. Wrigley and D. M. Linnard for the taking over by Mr. Linnard's California Hotel Company of the Hotel St. Catherine, and it is expected that as soon as the inventories can be made and the papers drawn up they will be signed.

The golf course on the island has been put in first-class shape and the clubhouse is now being remodeled.

STATE UNIVERSITY ALUMNI BANQUET.

WELCOME HOME TO BE GIVEN SATURDAY FOR RETURNED SERVICE MEN.

As a celebration for men returned from service, the University of California Alumni Association will hold its annual banquet on March 22 at the Jonathan Club. It will be on the eve of charter day, which commemorates the founding of the State University fifty-one years ago. Particularly it will be a welcome home for the alumni of the south.

Col. George E. Edwards of the class of '73, for years associated with the university, will come from San Francisco to attend the dinner and deliver a lecture on "The University Then and Now." Col. Edwards has a series of pictures of the campus and buildings of the early days and as they now are and with these will illustrate his lecture.

Maj. Walter Tuller of this city, just back from overseas, will speak of his experiences over there and Ensign Ray Vandervoort, president of the 1918 class, will represent the California men in the navy.

Miss Nadine Crump of the University Extension Division will tell of the work being done in the extension classes and Dean Monroe E. Deutch will come down from the north to talk of the plans for the coming summer session. Clinton E. Miller will act as toastmaster and Everett L. Ball is chairman of the affair. Dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock and dancing will follow.

RUSSIANS ACTIVE IN FIGHT ON BOLSHEVIKI.

SLAV COMMITTEE IN PARIS POINTS TO MANY DEEDS OF GALLANTRY.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Feb. 5.—Members of the Russian committee in Paris deplore the tendency of some newspapers in the Allied countries to belittle the actual work of Russians in Russia to overthrow the soviet government headed by Lenine and Trotzky. Prince Lvoff and his associates on the committee point to the thousands of Russian officers and soldiers executed by soviet order as proof of the activity of Russians within Bolshevik territory against the soviet dictators.

In a conversation with a correspondent of the Associated Press, Dr. Boris A. Bakhmeteff, the Russian Minister to the United States, asserted that only a small part of the former Russian empire actually is under Bolshevik control, and that Russian troops predominate in the army that has driven the red forces out of Siberia and are threatening soviety authority from North and South Russia.

Boris Savinkoff, Minister of War under the Kerensky regime, who recently arrived in Paris, is typical of many Russian leaders who have been in Russia striving for the restoration of a more sane order. Savinkoff, like many other fearless opponents of the Bolsheviki, has been working constantly in Bolshevik territory for the last year. He planned the capture of Yaroslav last July, a movement which threatened the overthrow of the Moscow government for a time, and was put down by the Bolsheviki at great cost of life and supplies.

Although the Bolsheviki put a high price on Savinkoff's head, he managed to escape them through various disguises and subterfuges and left Russia by way of Siberia, coming from Vladivostok directly to France by sea. His activities extended into nearly every section of Russia, and he had many narrow escapes. Of all the prominent social revolutionists who have been pitted against the Bolshevik regime, Savinkoff is said to be the most feared by Lenine and Trotzky. He figured prominently as one of the most dreaded terrorists under the imperial regime.

Marie Spiridonova and scores of other members of anti-Bolshevik factions have done heroic work within the last nine months, which resulted in insurrections against the Bolsheviki, so the members of the Russian committee say, but the Bolsheviki have controlled the Russian news so thoroughly that the outside world has known only of the [illegible] ments which assumed big [illegible] tions in districts within [illegible] reach of foreign newspapers.

COTTON CONTRACT STATEMENT ISSUED.

OLD-STYLE TRADING IS RESTRICTED TO ASSIGNMENT OF RIGHTS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, March 8.—The following resolution was adopted at a special meeting of the Board of Managers at the New York Cotton Exchange this morning:

"Trading in old-style contracts shall be deemed to be only the assignment of rights and assumption of obligations arising therefrom."

There was a firmer tone in the New York cotton market early today owing to the reports of a gradual improvement in the goods markets and small spot offerings from the South. Trading was active, but again consisted largely of liquidation of old-style accounts. The new-style contracts appeared to be attracting a little fresh buying, but there was a good deal of selling by spot people who were covering old short hedges, and not much change in the relation of the two.

Brokers reported a broadening interest in the new-style contracts, and the market showed continued steadiness. The close was within a few points of the best, with the tone very steady at a net advance of 52@72 points on the old and 35@60 points on the new-style months.

CITRUS REVIEW FOR WEEK.

[OFFICE OF THE FRUIT WORLD.]

The market on California navels is in good shape, the only drawback at this time being the tie-up at New York caused by the strike of the marine workers which has made it impossible to bring cars of fruit over from the railroad yards in New Jersey. As a result, no auction sales of oranges or lemons have been held in New York for the past three days. Coming at a time when market conditions are in the best of shape this complete tie-up of the largest market is causing no end of annoyance and means heavier diversion of cars to other markets.

F.o.b. quotations are on a basis of $4.50 with considerable activity reported.

Seedlings are beginning to move in liberal quantities although a number of the heaviest seedling districts have a considerable quantity of navels that demand attention at this time. F.o.b. quotations on seedlings range around $4.25. A block of six cars were reported sold this week at $3.50 net to the packer.

Valencias are being quoted for shipment as early as March 15 on the basis of $4.15 cash. Cash brokers report some inquiry for Valencias for shipment in April. The early inquiry is attributed to the desirable size run on Valencias, the crop promising to run heavy to medium sizes.

LEMONS.

The market on California lemons is in very fair shape. The general f.o.b. average is around $3 with very best stock at $3.50. All markets are kept well supplied with California stock and the situation looks promising for a heavy volume of business with the opening of the spring speculative demand in the next few weeks.

There are but 19,000 boxes of foreign lemons available for sale within the next thirty days as against 108,000 boxes last season for the corresponding period.

The California crop promises to run fully 10,000 cars as predicted in the Fruit World early in the season. Probably 2000 cars of lemons were ruined by the cold.

ALLEN'S COMMENT.

Chicago and Kansas City live-stock market reports indicate that no choice or prime cattle are received and very few droves that will even grade good. The same condition exists in this city, common and medium cattle form the bulk of receipts. The market for beef cattle is fully steady and the demand good.

Hogs continue steady with No. 1 grade in most favor.

Spring lambs hold strong, other lambs barely steady.

Yearlings and wethers firm and mutton weak.

CORN AND OATS DROP ON CHICAGO EXCHANGE

SELLING BY LONGS AND COMMISSION HOUSES DRIVES GRAIN MARKET DOWN.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 8.—Lower prices were made for all grains today. At no time were values as high as the previous day's close. Profit taking was in order after the recent big advance, and while the inside figures were not maintained, the evening up at the last found March corn 1c and distant months 2@2⅝c lower, the latter on July. Oats lost 1½@2c, the latter on May. In Chicago, Corn in the southwestern markets is off 1@2⅝c, and oats ⅝@1⅛c. Minneapolis oats were 1⅛c and Winnipeg 2⅛c lower, although the latter had only twenty-two cars.

Higher prices were made for everything during the week, and while the top prices were not held on grains, gains were: 5⅝@7⅛c on corn, 2¼@2⅝c on oats, 2.00@2.05 on pork, 97½@1.02½ on lard, and 1.05@1.07½ on short ribs.

Local longs and commission houses took the selling side of corn on a large scale, as the result of the bearish showing made by the government report on farm reserves, and with scattered liquidation prices dropped 4@4½c on the active deliveries. Trade was of immense proportions, but toward the last there was persistent buying by strong local professionals and other commissions, and a rally of more than 2c followed, with March 1.39, May 1.32⅝ and July 1.26⅝ at the close.

Oats showed relatively more weakness than corn when the price level is considered, but, like that grain, received support when most needed, and the close was on a rally of ½@1⅛c from the bottom, with March at 59⅝, May at 61⅛ and July at 61¼. The government report and heavy selling by longs were the main depressing influences.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF LOCAL MEAT TRADE.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

[United States Department of Agriculture.]

There has been quite a noticeable decrease in the total kill of all local slaughters, yet the supply of dressed meats has been adequate. The unaccountable decrease in the demand for all classes excepting veal resulted in a rather dull market throughout the week.

Good steers and cows were in favor over all other grades of beef but only a small portion of the total beef offered was of this grade. Cows of all grades found an easy outlet and after retailers had marked their choice of them they turned to steers to complete their buying needs. Prime wholesale cuts from beef held firm at opening prices of $29 to $33 for steer loins and $20 to $31 for ribs. Rounds accumulated daily and were offered for $22 down to as low as even $18, when necessary to make the sale. Rattlers were hard to sell at $15.50 to $16.50, and some sales were made as low as $15.

The quality of the light supply of veal was not as good as last week, but prices were just as high. Most all coolers had $24 for a top price and $20 for the bottom, which included heavy and rough sides.

Retailers report a very poor demand for cuts from pork and this is reflected in the poor demand experienced by the wholesaler. Prices have not declined for either live or dressed hogs. Unsold stocks can be frozen for future sale and this is being done to a certain extent.

The first spring lambs of the season were offered Thursday. Their quality was the best this market has had for many seasons. Other lambs were dull and draggy at all times. The quality of offerings was below normal and the liberal supply with no increase in the demand was the reason. The majority of sales were made at prices below $27.

No great difficulty was experienced in marketing the yearlings and good wethers, but ewes were very hard to sell. As 70 per cent. of the mutton supply consists of ewes, their weakness had a bad effect on the entire mutton market.

All beef and veal made a good clearance on a firm basis. Pork and lambs eventually found an outlet with the aid of freezer space. Mutton stocks will not all be sold. The beef market is closing strong.

SIX THOUSAND TIMES THE NIGHT CLERK SAID:
"Sorry, Full Up Tonight"

Not for one night, but week after week, month after month, San Pedro, in the guise of the night clerk, has told six thousand workers in her yards, her docks, her factories, that there was no room for them. Month after month, every night at quitting time, a veritable flood of workers has poured out of San Pedro, because housing accommodations are utterly insufficient to meet the needs of the new industrial development.

That is the situation that the HARBOR HOUSING CORPORATION of Los Angeles seeks to remedy. Here is their plan:

On their own property, located at the corner of Beacon and Santa Cruz streets in San Pedro, midway between the Los Angeles Shipbuilding Yards and the business district, this company has now under construction a clubhouse and living-rooms for employees of the various industries in San Pedro, that will give accommodation to 250 persons at rentals of from $3.00 to $4.50 per week.

The rooms will be clean, attractive, modern, with heat, hot and cold water in each. In the central administration building will be the amusement hall, reading and writing-room, billiard tables, news stand and soda and candy booths. It will give the tenants the advantage of a high-class club in addition to comfortable living quarters at reasonable rental. The buildings sit in their own large plot of ground, 300x330 feet, a veritable park with grass and shrubs, tennis courts, outdoor handball courts, quoits court and lots of room to move around, to live, to breathe and be a man.

It will be an investment in good citizenship through good housing conditions, and the thorough practicality of such an investment has been proven scores of times in such instances as the experience of the National Cash Register Company, "Port Sunlight" in England, and many others.

On the rental basis mentioned, the property should return a net income on the investment of more than 17 per cent.

But will the rooms rent, you ask.

Yes. Beyond the shadow of a doubt. Because they will offer housing conditions and attractions far beyond anything ever offered in a workingman's hotel in the west. Look how workmen flock where housing conditions are the best. Look at the efforts the biggest corporations in America are making today to improve the housing conditions of their workers. Philanthropy? No. Plain Business. Dollars and cents. A smaller labor turnover, and a better and more loyal force.

There will always be a waiting list for the accommodations that the Harbor Housing Corporation will be able to offer. They will be unique in their attractions. For years to come, San Pedro will be crowded with workers, the greatest lumber port in the world, a great shipbuilding center, a port of call for the ships of the world's trade, the sole harbor for the Great Southwest, the ocean outlet for our oil industry. To deny the future of San Pedro is to deny the future of the Great Southwest.

These accommodations for workingmen are planned and built by "forward-looking men" Men who have seen what the new day is going to bring to the man who works with his hands. They are going to supply the sort of workingman's hotel that should have been built years ago, and the hotel that the workingmen of today will keep filled from the day its doors open.

THE HARBOR HOUSING CORPORATION is incorporated under the laws of California. It has a capital stock of $300,000, consisting of 300,000 shares of stock of a par value of $1 per share. The president of the Corporation is Vernon Goodwin, vice-president of the Alexandria Hotel Company of Los Angeles, a hotel man of long experience. Ray Mitchell, president of the Marine Hardware Company of San Pedro, is vice-president, and L. L. Elliott of Elliott & Horne Company, Bonds, is secretary. These officials, together with Leroy Edwards of Hunsaker, Britt & Edwards; C. L. Cleveland, president of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce; E. D. Seward, City Clerk of San Pedro, and G. R. Stillson, constitute the directorate.

There is not one share of promotion stock. Every investor will be on the same plane from the smallest to the largest. The land was bought, paid for and turned in to the company before a share of stock was offered for sale, and is worth every cent of the amount at which it is offered. In fact, the people from whom the land was purchased took stock in the company for full payment.

The enterprise has the hearty recommendation of the Chamber of Commerce of San Pedro, the Board of Harbor Commissioners of Los Angeles, and of prominent bankers and business men of Los Angeles, whose letters are on file at our office for your inspection.

If YOU want to join with these men in this enterprise, there is a small amount of stock for sale. We will be glad to go into the plans of the company with you in detail at our offices.

THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Another good week for Los Angeles with scarcely a cloud on the business or financial sky. This statement could hardly be demonstrated because nearly every individual thinks he has serious problems, and he has, but in the large the community interests are above par.

This interpretation is possible from a general survey embracing such high spots as have already been discussed in detail, but upon which our prosperity and business solvency is dependable. Notably the bank clearings tell the story, a trifle sketchily, it is true, because bank clearings may, and frequently do, include a number of things. Nevertheless it would be a financial and mathematical impossibility to roll up a six day total of $40,580,541.50 without there being back of such a volume of business a very genuine pressure of legitimate circulation of funds.

Los Angeles is without very many great corporate interests whose liquidation tends to increase clearings. The money which passes through the banks of this city, represents in very large measure the trade of the city, together with its new blood, investments, and progressive development. Pessimism in the face of a showing such as our banks made last week is quite out of place.

There is little diminution in the tide of tourist travel. The Ides of March spell discomfort and bad weather in most of the North American States and the footsteps of the pilgrim turn naturally toward the sunshine. The railroads are having all they can do to haul him, and the hotels are utilizing all available space and some that was never before considered available in an effort to afford comfortable housing.

The hotel problem is one that is arresting the attention of capital, and the success of the Linnard "string" is inducing inquiry along similar lines that may eventuate in material additions to the much needed accomodations of the city. It is noted that a greater percentage of the visitors this season are spending a larger per capita per diem than ever before, and this widely diffused distribution is adding millions to the assets of the community.

In retail circles the camplaint is not with the volume of business which is unprecedentedly heavy, but in maintaining stocks to a minimum demanded by the class of the trade. Buyers, however, are gathering greater courage as the season advances, and there is appreciably less of the hand-to-mouth purchasing which has been one of the most serious drawbacks to a complete resumption of our status quto ante bellum. Prices remain too high. Even the dealers themselves admit as much, and the public is sure of it. A stabilization of the market and the establishment of a minimum purchasing level will do much to help this situation, and it is towards this goal that the present trend is directed. There has been no relief in food prices, and unpleasent as the admission must be, there is none in immediate prospect.

On the stock exchange the first four days of the week produced a great amount of business, it may prove to be a record. Friday and Saturday this slowed down somewhat, but on the whole the tone was excellent, and in spite of the unhappy condition in which Congress left a number of very important matters, the viewpoint of those who buy and sell speculative stocks is satisfactorily optimistic. The general bond market remained strong in the face of the approaching loan, and there is so far little evidence that the requirements of the government will seriously interfere with this market.

The collection of the income and excess profit tax is at its height, and large sums are being withdrawn to meet the government's requirements in this regard. The collector of internal revenue is much pleased with the hearty, unselfish and patriotic response which the public is giving to his warnings, and the number of violators of the revenue law promises to be encouragingly small. Many are making the entire payment at this time, although they may defer three quarters of it. This is another indication of a healthy, local financial condition.

Locally the business of buying and selling Liberty Bonds has fallen off until on some days it is almost negligible. The exact records are not available, but it is quite likely that Los Angeles is almost at the top of a list of cities motorious for light barter and trade of these securities. The business of discounting the bonds, and of attempting to depreciate them is gradually fading away under adverse publicity and criticism, and those who retain them have apparently come to the conclusion that it is not the part of good business to sell gold dollars for 93 cents. The price of these bonds is still below par, and undoubtedly will remain so for some time, but that in no way affects the intrinsic value of the bond, which financiers confidentially believe will go well above the par mark after the war financing is over.

The general market yesterday was rather inactive, but the transactions recorded were at firm prices. The mining stocks were especially strong. In volume Adams Mining was the leader, 19,000 shares going over the board during the hour of trading at a price that opened at 8¾ cents and advanced steadily to 9½ with the closing quotation at 9¾. Six thousand Big Jim Consolidated was recorded at 12¾ and 13 cents. Gold Ore (12,00 was at 7¾ opening to 7⅛ closing. Gold Dust (2000) at 14½ cents. Two thousand Los Angeles Investment were traded at 58½ cents. Other sales were Mt. Diablo (800) 1.43. Nellie Mining, (1200) 14¾ and 15 cents. Sunnyside (10,000) at 8 cents. Tom Reed opened at 1.80 at which figure 1000 shares were traded in. Later it sold off to 1.77. The closing bid was 1.78 with 1.78½ asked. United Eastern weakened a little near the close, selling from its initial price of 4.95 back to 4.92½. Yellow Pine continued the slump which started Friday upon receipt of news of a fire at the hoist. At the close 85 cents was bid with none offered. Oils were steady to higher. General Petroleum sold at 141.75; Union up to 118.62½ and Mascot up to 1.70 closing at 1.67½ bid.

In the country at large the business conditions have, on the whole, changed for the better during the week, chiefly in a growing display of confidence. Enterprise is still hesitant, but it is hesitating more hestitatingly than at any time since are armistice was signed. Staple goods are being rapidly assimilated and the working of natural laws will soon require a more general resumption, and probably at a lower price level with gyroscope attachment to enable the craft to steer its way through the squalls with even keel.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 8.—The brief session of the stock market today was characterized by extraordinary activity and further bullish enthusiasm which lifted many issues to top levels of the year, with here and there some actual new high records.

Among the influences which gave fresh stimulus to the advance was the report that the administration had ordered another postponement in the pending anti-trust litigation. Indication that the railroads would soon be provided with funds was another hopeful factor.

There was a noticeable increase of outside interest in the market which concentrated largely in steels, equipments and shippings, rails failing to fulfill their early promise of strength.

United States Steel contributed almost one-fifth to the day's business at an extreme advance of 1½ points to 97, but affiliated stocks, particularly Midvale, Bethlehem, Crucible and Lackawanna Steels and Baldwin Locomotive, gained 2 to 5 points.

Marine preferred yielded part of its 3-point rise, but other shippings, including American International, Atlantic Gulf and United Fruit, were less susceptible to realizing. Sugars, fertilizers, coppers and utilities helped to swell the advance, but motors, oils and tobaccos were irregular. Sales amounted to 700,000 shares.

Last week's large actual loan expansion of clearinghouse banks was materially reduced today, excess reserves showing a further moderate gain.

Liberty Bonds held steady, other domestic issues were firm and foreign flotations made slight gains. Total sales (par value) aggregated $6,350,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Final prices on Liberty Bonds today were 3½s, 98.64. First 4s, 94.40; second 4s, 93.70. First 4¼s, 94.62; second 4¼s, 94.02; third 4¼s, 95.32; fourth 4¼s, 94.04.

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS FOR STOCKS, BONDS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CHICAGO, March 8.—Local stocks closed strong, with trading of comparatively large volume in the half-day session. Offerings were rapidly absorbed, resulting in prices ruling generally higher. LUCKY BOY

Unusual market activity in good Oatman stocks. A long era of pressing demand for gold production assures safety and attractiveness in buying all good gold stocks. In these Oatman issues are popular leaders.

Lucky Boy Strong

on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, and is steadily gaining. Sales yesterday were at 10c per share, which is more than double that of an even four weeks period, or a net gain of 5¼c per share.

Adams Rapidly Advances

Adams has advanced in price by bounds. Rising from a low of only a few cents, Adams would seem to be only started on its upward climb. We believe Adams will easily reach a price around 25c per share before ore bodies are reached and blocked out. Buy Adams while the price is low, now around ten cents.

REX OIL

This company's entrance into the Burkburnett, Texas, field, has apparently doubled the speculative value of this popular monthly dividend payer. We predict the result of the several drilling operations in this wonderful field will greatly increase the company's earnings while the steady demand for the stock all last week strongly reflects the popularity which these new acquisitions have added. Selling around 16¼@16½, the monthly dividend returns a very satisfactory yield, while the speculative possibilities—we believe—surpass any other local security in the same price and dividend class.

OATMAN STOCKS

The revival of interest in the Oatman Camp has been strongly reflected on the local Exchange, resulting in a market for many stocks heretofore very inactive, some of which in our opinion should be sold, that funds may be placed in the more active issues. Owners of marketable Oatman's are frequently afforded the opportunity to utilize their stocks with us as collateral for the purchase of additional shares. Consult us regarding your Oatman operations.

Time to Buy and Sell

Traders in all classes of securities should, at this particular time, keep thoroughly conversant with the condition of all securities in which they are interested, as many selling, as well as buying, opportunities exist. Our Stock Market Digest is published in an endeavor to point out such opportunities as they appear to us, and to furnish MARKET FACTS as they actually exist, for the guidance of traders in the more active securities. Write or call for current issue.

The Principal Facts About the Santa Monica Race at a Glance.

This map, by Charles Hamilton Owens of The Times' staff, tells how to get to the race from Los Angeles; where the cars will run, how the course differs from that of previous years, the location of the grand stand and various other facts that will assist you in getting to the course on Saturday and seeing it from an advantageous position.

PRACTICE WILL BEGIN TOMORROW.

First After-the-War Road Race to Take Place Over Santa Monica Course Next Saturday; De Palma Arrives for Event; Other Drivers Due Today.

BY WILLIAM M. HENRY.

Ralph de Palma, who in the last month has broken every world's automobile record from the kilometer to twenty miles, arrives this afternoon to appear at Santa Monica next Saturday. His Packard racer came by express yesterday.

Cliff Durant, Eddie Pullen and Earl Cooper will likewise come into town today. W. W. Brown of Kansas City, Roscoe Sarles, one of the most sensational finds in road racing history, Omar Toft, Eddie Hearne, Joe Thomas, Lewis LeCocq and a whole flock of other speed demons are already here.

It begins to look as though the first after-the-war road race which takes place on the matchless Santa Monica course next Saturday afternoon might be an even greater success than the first after-the-war auto show and the first after-the-war speedway race, both of which were staged right here in Southern California.

Tomorrow morning the sharp bark of the racing motors will resound at Santa Monica as the fast speed buggies are trundled on the course for their first morning's practice. From 9 until 11 o'clock every day until Friday the fast racers will roar from the Soldiers Home to Eighth street and back again, attempting to become familiar with the new turns. Friday the workmen smooth out the wrinkles and at 1 o'clock on Saturday the fast field will start on what promises to be one of the greatest races in the history of Santa Monica's famous course.

The Santa Monica road race course on which the race will be run this year is about a mile shorter than in previous events and is different in a number of ways. The race, by special permission of the A.A.A. will be run under track rules rather than road racing rules and machines will pass to the right rather than to the left.

The reason for this suecial ruling is that on Eighth street, where the grand stand and the pits are located, it was decided to build the stands in such a way that the sun instead of being in eyes of the spectators would be at their backs. This put the stand on the outside of the course and the pits on the inside so that cars will slow down on the inside of the course to stop and pass on the outside.

In lopping off the extra mile between Eighth street and the Ocean Front, the race committee has added immeasurably to the difficulty of the course and in proportion to the interest in the race. The turns at Eighth and San Vicente and Eighth and Wilshire are both a great deal more difficult to negotiate than the old right angle turn at Wilshire and the Ocean Front.

The bad turns, the shortened course and the fact that no one car will be so fast as to make the others look slow by comparison, mean that this race will be far more thrilling than the last Grand Prize and Vanderbilt events in which the Peugeots of Resta and Aitken were so superior to all the other mounts that the interest in the race was killed.

The cars will pass the stands more frequently, they will be more evenly matched, a number of drivers and new cars will compete and everything that goes to make for thrills will be there. The additional feature of Ralph de Palma in a speed trial with the fastest car in the world will give the crowd a chance to gasp and may provide us with a new boulevard record for one mile straightaway.

There is a bare possibility that De Palma may enter the race with his big 905-inch Packard, but it is

DOUG REFEREE OF BIG EVENT.

Douglas Fairbanks will be the referee of the great Santa Monica road race to be held Saturday under the auspices of the Motor Car Dealers' Association. This statement was given out last night by Chairman A. M. Young of the Race Committee. In a spirit of cooperation Fairbanks has gladly accepted the honor, and, as the many moving-picture machines record the event, "Doug" will be seen in a new role.

Henry Ford's Announcement Throws Detroit into a Fit.

EXCITEMENT IS INTENSE.

Stockholders Refuse to be Interviewed.

Nobody Knows Just What to Think of It.

Telegrams to Ford on Train are Unanswered.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DETROIT (Mich) March 7.—To say that Detroit was startled by the news from Los Angeles to the effect that Henry Ford had announced that he would withdraw from active participation in the present plant at Highland Park and organize a new company to sell a car for $350 or less, is expressing it mildly. At the Ford Motor Company offices the report was received with unfeigned surprise. Officials declined to be quoted, but insisted that it was something of which they had never heard. Even E. N. Liebold, Mr. Ford's confidential secretary, said he had no knowledge of such a movement. Officials who were approached, while they refused to talk, were plainly puzzled.

To the 30,000 or more employees at the main plant, and the many thousands in the various assembling plants throughout the country, the announcement was fraught with significance. It threatened their very economic existence. If Mr. Ford should retire from the great Highland Park plant, what effect will it have on the fortunes of the workers? Would it mean the end of the $6 per day minimum wage, the abolition of an eight-hour day, or other of Mr. Ford's hobbies, which vitally affect the living conditions of more than 300,000 persons?

At the eighteenth annual show of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association, oratory on the merits of the cars was shelved and Mr. Ford's announcement was discussed with deep interest.

Efforts to induce John F. Dodge, or his brother, Horace, or Mayor James S. Cousens, stockholders in the Ford company, to discuss the matter were futile. None would talk until he learned more definitely just what Ford intends to do. Telegrams sent to Mr. Ford, who is en route home, asking him to verify or refute the Los Angeles interview remained unanswered, and everything is up in the air until the motor magnate reaches Detroit Sunday or Monday.

Dispatches from Akron relate that the report that Harvey H. Firestone would be associated with Ford in the new enterprise was greeted with surprise by officials of the big tire company. They also refuse to comment on the report declaring that they were not aware of Mr. Firestone's plans, but, in view of the fact that Mr. Firestone conferred with Mr. Ford before the announcement, some credence is given to the report of the Akron man's connection with the project.

Henry Ford has furnished many thrills to his fellow-townsmen in the past, but his latest announcement has eclipsed all. Leading Detroit business men confessed that they were utterly flabbergasted. It is hinted that an effort will be made to effect a compromise between Mr. Ford and those stockholders with whom he has differed. Some were inclined to think that the matter could be amicably adjusted, but those close to the automobile king were dubious. They declare that Mr. Ford's fighting Irish blood is aroused, and they know from experience that he cannot be swayed.

The eighteenth annual automobile show of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association closed Saturday. It was the most successful show in the history of the association, both in the amount of business transacted and in attendance.

If it did nothing else, the Detroit show convinced both dealer and buyer that cars will be at a premium before this summer comes. War has asked people to cut pleasures and serve. The war is over, generally speaking, and once more the mediums of pleasure and profit take the center of the stage.

This is the year that the early bird will get the choicest worms in the fresh sod of the automobile market, for as a result of reconstruction problems and the summary halt given to motor car building, automobile factories cannot produce as they have in normal times and will in the future.

More than 115,000 attended the show during the seven days.

SUPPLIES HALF OF ALL MOTORS.

ORGANIZATION MAKES AS MANY CARS AS ALL OTHERS COMBINED.

More than half of all the automobiles running on American roads are Ford cars, the Los Angeles Ford dealers state. This means that while all the other motor car factories combined are producing one motor car, the Ford organization alone in the same length of time turns out a completed car. This could not be so if the Ford car had not proven its worth by all the tests that time and the greatest number and variety of uses and abuses can impose. It is manifest that Ford cars have delivered satisfaction to their owners in every line of endeavor.

In the matter of after-service for the purchaser, the Ford Motor Company has built up an unequalled organization for this purpose in the persons of their authorized dealers. There are more than 12,000 Ford dealers who are required under their contracts with the company to carry a complete assortment of Ford repair parts.

PIANIST IS LATE CONVERT.

Josef Hofmann Becomes a Booster for California's Advantages.

Josef Hofmann, probably the greatest pianist the world has ever known, is one of the latest converts to California roads and California motoring. During his recent visit to Los Angeles, at which time he played two concerts, he found time to make a trip to Santa Barbara and return in a 1919 Buick little six, and since this trip he has become an enthusiastic booster for our roads, climate and Buicks.

Hofmann is accompanied on his trip to the Pacific Coast by Granville Ward; the Steinway Company's special representative, who is custodian of the wonderful piano upon which Hofmann gives his concerts.

Hofmann's playing has charmed and enthralled millions of Americans, but it is doubtful whether one in a thousand of his audience who have watched his fingers, a blur over the keyboard of his Steinway, coax forth those exquisite tones that none but Hofmann have discovered in a piano, know that these same hands have fourteen years of practical machinist's experience, and that he is capable of doing complicated lathe work.

Genius can be practical, but it is from the fabric of dreams that genius builds best. Herbert Kaufman says of the dreamer, "The belted wheel, the trail of steel the churning screw, are shuttles in the loom on which they weave their magic tapestries." The trail of steel plays an important part in the life of Hofmann, for the master musician is an inventor as well. He has invented a shock absorber that promises to bring comfort to the whole world of motion. Developed in Europe, where Hofmann received the greater part of his mechanical education, it has not yet reached this country, but its success there assures the device a wide popularity in this country. It has already been applied to automobiles, airplanes and even stretchers, for the humanitarian possibilities of the shock absorber have strongly appealed to Hofmann.

Hofmann is an expert in pneumatics. One of the principles behind his shock absorber is the cushion-like qualities of air when properly regulated. "Since the earliest civilization, mankind has marveled at the wonders that the four winds would perform," he says. "But the unrestrained antics of Aeolus have given way to the ultra practical devices of our modern civilization. How wonderful is the work of the pneumatic drill, which made possible the speed with which America built ships in the great emergency. And yet more wonderful still, in its range of artistic expression, is the Duo Art reproducing piano, which is undoubtedly the highest development in the science of pneumatics. This Duo Art piano, with its tiny pneumatic fingers, is bringing joy to thousands of homes that would listen again and again to the interpretations of the great concert pianists. It is a fascinating experience to me to listen to my own interpretations re-born under the spell of these magic pneumatic fingers. With pneumatics a great force in the manufacturing world, with the same principles applied to the artistic reproduction of the work of our modern concert pianists, and with perhaps new comfort brought to the traveling world through my shock absorber, who can say that my faith in the possibilities of the science of pneumatics is unfounded?" At this point, Hofmann's face lighted up with that rare smile of his that has kept him young and unspoiled under the strain of thousands of hours of study and concentration.

"Your California is beautiful," Hofmann continued. "Your roads, too, are wonderful. The trip I just made from Los Angeles to Santa Barbara is an inspiration. Much of my traveling at this time of year is through the drab and white of winter's mud and snow. And because I have driven automobiles myself for the past twenty years, I enjoyed especially the performance of the valve-in-head Buick that carried me on my trip."

John C. Monning, of the George J. Birkel Company, himself a warm personal friend of Hofmann, as well as an authority on pianos, says that if the Steinway piano which Hofmann is using was equipped with a speedometer it would put many of the old-time mileage devourers to shame, for the famous piano is now in its fifth season, and has traveled more than 150,000 miles. This is undoubtedly a world's record, as most artists use a piano but a single season, and rarely carry a piano on its second season.

EVERY QUALITY IS PUT TO TEST.

SNOW, SLUSH AND MUD ENCOUNTERED ON THE VALLEY ROUTE.

How he encountered rain, snow, slush and mud while driving in his Chalmers roadster over the valley route between San Francisco and Los Angeles, was last week told by Thomas White, manager of the Pacific department of the Sanborn Map Company, to L. M. Rash, sales manager of the Chalmers retail department of the Greer-Robbins Company, State Chalmers distributors.

"On the southbound trip I put to the test about every quality that a motor car has," said White. "Driving was done under difficulties, as there was heavy rain during a part of the trip, and we encountered snow, slush and mud. The stretch of road on the Ridge route was in awful condition.

"It required eight hours to negotiate the distance between Bakersfield and Los Angeles and between these two places I passed seven cars that were hard and fast in the mud. It was the hardest kind of going but my Chalmers carried me through successfully and the last day we drove a trifle over 300 miles."

HERE TO DISCUSS SELLING PLANS.

TIRE COMPANY PRESIDENT SAYS WAVE OF PROSPERITY COMING WEST.

Here from Springfield, O., to look over the automobile tire situation and discuss selling plans of the year with Manager N. Bershon of the Bershon Tire Company, President Henry E. Durr, of the Victor Rubber Company, pays a tribute to Southern California when he enthusiastically says:

"The motoring public, as well as the tire dealer, should certainly be appreciative of the climatic and road conditions that make possible such uninterrupted use of the automobile. So far as the business outlook is concerned, it will take sixty days or more, before the wave of prosperity now being experienced in the East will make itself felt out here—but it's coming.

LARGE SHIPMENT ARRIVES IN CITY.

One of the largest shipments of Heinze-Springfield starters for Ford cars ever received in this State, arrived last week from the factory for the California Sales Company, according to one of its officials, who further said that the consignment had been divided between the Los Angeles and the San Francisco houses of the company. The Heinze-Springfield starter is a "built-in system, it is said, that does not lessen engine power. It is also two-unit invisible system, with no cut-out points to stick, it is asserted.

EFFICIENT SYSTEM OF DISTRIBUTION.

The Harry A. Miller Manufacturing Company has built up such an efficient system of distribution that Miller carburetors are now distributed in practically every State by appointed agents, according to Harry A. Miller, who recently returned to Los Angeles after a stay of eight months in New York and Detroit, where he was in charge of the manufacturing of a great deal of war material for the government.

Upon completion of the contract upon which the company is now working making aluminum castings for the aeronautical service, the remainder of the machinery which is now in use in the old plant will be moved to the new one at the corner of Seventeenth and South Los Angeles street, where the city sales department and service station is now located.

Moreland's Progressive Policy

For eight years we have built a good truck.

During that time we have pioneered many of the sweeping changes in truck construction.

When we first advertised our product as a Distillate Truck, the wiseacres said it couldn't be done. Notice how the word "Distillate" has crept into sales arguments.

The worm drive as a Moreland feature was another hare-brained idea, yet over 60% of the motor trucks made today are worm drive trucks.

Our use of larger and more powerful motors was first scoffed at. Now you can get, for an extra price, the same size motors, in so-called competitive trucks, that we provide as standard equipment.

They, the deans of the motor-truck business, ridiculed our four-speed-forward transmissions, amidship, a few years ago. Now look over the specification sheets and see where the trend of transmission design is running.

Radius rods proved another mirth-provoking Moreland innovation. Yet the advocates of the Hotchkiss Drive on motor trucks are being forced to change design to that which is now universally known to be right.

Steel wheels also kept our friends busy—but the steel wheel is here to stay. It is better for western truck owners than any wood wheel ever made.

Now that we have adopted the Standard Military Class "B" Truck Motor for our four-ton and five-ton units, we again hold the center of the stage as the prize changers of design—criticised extensively by those makers who have not profited by developments and praised by the owners who have discarded antiques for modern haulage equipment.

This, then, is our Progressive Policy—"Anything proved better for western use than now incorporated in Moreland trucks will be placed in production at the first opportunity."

Rest assured of this—no changes will be made unless they will increase the value of the Moreland truck to the user.

The Moreland Distillate Motor Truck is built for the strenuous work of the West. In the most unfavorable territory it registers the same high efficiency as under ideal conditions.

—and the service subject

How many times can you recall having seen a MACK truck out of service on the road? We do not say this never has happened, but do you remember an instance?

We know the occurrence is exceptionally rare, so seldom, in fact, that had you seen it there would have been something to fix it in your memory.

Now what does this mean to you as a truck user? Just this—the dependability of MACK trucks is an established fact. The excellence of MACK performance is so uniform that any deviation for any cause has become the unusual.

Put a MACK truck on the job and it will stay on the job, day in and day out, with lower reliability than any other truck. If you doubt MACK longevity ask to see the records of any owner. We don't cite a few examples—you can take your own pick.

The increasing sales and popularity of MACK trucks are accounted for by the constant satisfaction they render an owner.

Here is what one MACK owner said the other day:

"If all intending buyers of trucks knew as much about MACK trucks as the owners know there would be mighty few trucks of other makes sold."

NEW FIRM AND A NEW LINE.

Upsetting a policy of many years' standing, the Studebaker Corporation last week turned over its retail sales to R. D. Maxwell and Paul G. Hoffman, who will continue doing business at the old stand, at 1047 South Grand, under the firm name of Maxwell & Hoffman. The Studebaker Corporation is one of the largest in the world, and this change of policy at a time when the new Studebaker line is selling so well is a distinct tribute to the new distributors.

The Los Angeles territory is one of the most coveted in the country, and a number of big offers have been made for it, but the Studebaker Corporation has steadfastly refused to give up the factory branch. Both Maxwell and Hoffman, however, are old hands with this make of car and both have occupied the position of manager of the Los Angeles branch, and the corporation felt that the retail sales would be in capable hands.

Maxwell & Hoffman will use the Studebaker Building salesroom for the distribution of the line, and at the same time the Studebaker wholesale branch will remain in its present quarters on the upper floors. Earl R. Carpenter will remain as manager of the wholesale branch, which distributes throughout this territory. Carpenter has been one of the most efficient officials ever placed here by the Studebaker. For years he was connected with the corporation at San Francisco. Then he was called to Kansas City, where he had amazing success in making the Studebaker one of the most successful cars in that territory. Yearning to get back to the Pacific Coast, he asked for the vacancy. He came here several months ago and has been a forceful factor in the successful introduction of the new Studebaker line.

With the Studebaker and Maxwell & Hoffman interests working in such close relations, it is certain that the arrangement will be of great benefit to Studebaker owners and prospective buyers. J. H. Osinga, who has been retail manager of sales at the branch, is in charge of the sales force for the new firm. Other familiar faces are seen in the Maxwell & Hoffman organization John L. Harrigan and Owen J. Hessell, who long have been identified with the Studebaker, are stockholders in the new company.

"Bob" Maxwell is coming back to Los Angeles after an absence of little over two years, in which time he became one of the most important distributors in the South. But even while away from Los Angeles, Maxwell remained at heart an Angeleno, repeatedly refusing to sell his home property. When Maxwell went South he met the usual prejudice against "Yankees," but his square dealing methods soon won him a high place in the esteem of the Alabama motorists, and in returning here he is giving up one of the largest and most lucrative distributorships in the State.

Maxwell has an unusually wide acquaintance, not only in the motor industry, but among the owners as well. Long before he took up the selling of automobiles he was connected with the tire business. Many Pacific Coast dealers remember when Maxwell was one of the stars of the Morgan & Wright sales forces. Later he became the western sales manager for a large Detroit automobile plant.

In May, 1913, he became retail sales manager of the Studebaker branch here. When L. J. Ollier departed for the East to become sales manager of the Studebaker factory, and incidentally the largest national figure ever sent out of Los Angeles into the automobile high councils, Maxwell was made branch manager. He served in this capacity until December, 1916, when the Alabama opportunity arose. Now he's back, and here, he declares, he will always remain.

Hoffman comes directly back to Los Angeles from eighteen months' military service, in which time, with his characteristic ability to get to the top, he arose from the ranks of a private in field artillery to a first lieutenancy. His work, which placed him in charge of operation and maintenance of 500 motor vehicles, equipped him with valuable information which can be applied to the care of autos in civilian work.

Hoffman was the youngest man to ever attain the high position of branch manager in the Studebaker Corporation. But his rise was based wholly upon his efficiency. In October, 1911, he began selling Studebakers. And it is recalled by those who know that he won every national sales contest held by the Studebaker. This ability to sell cars resulted in his being made retail sales manager of the branch, in July, 1915. In the same month, two years later, he moved upstairs into the office of the branch manager, having reached the highest position in the Studebaker organization in this territory.

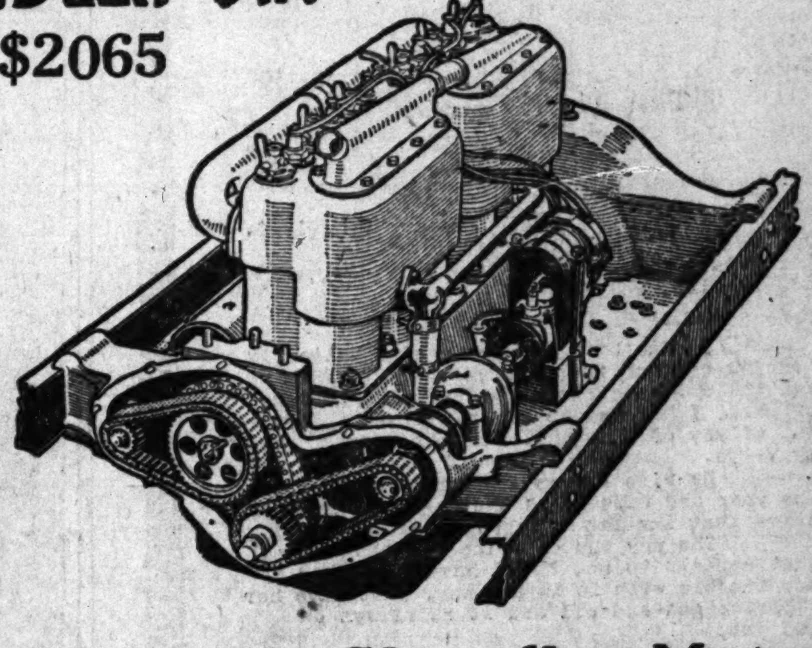
CHANDLER SIX
$2065



This is the Chandler Motor Famous for Its Excellence

CHANDLER owners, and men generally who know automobiles, talk about the Chandler motor for its marvelous performance and endurance.

It is exclusively the Chandler motor, of Chandler design and Chandler manufacture in Chandler shops. The only automobile hood you can find it under is the Chandler hood. It is not a stock motor. No other car has it.

And this is the greatest of six-cylinder motors.

The Chandler motor, with refinements and improvements from time to time but without radical change at any time, is now in its sixth year.

Lift the hood of a Chandler car and see that motor. Even from the outside you know it is good. Manufacturers wouldn't build and mount a motor with such care if it weren't an extraordinary motor inside.

Cylinders cast in threes, valves in the side, all working parts easily accessible.

Heavy, perfectly-balanced crank shaft, running in unusually large bearings.

Silent chain drive for generator, magneto and cam shafts, three chains running in constant oil spray.

Bosch Magneto for sure ignition.

Mounted on solid cast aluminum base extending solidly from frame to frame, giving perfect rigidity and saving the motor from the rack and stress of the roadway.

The power so economically produced by the Chandler motor is carried back to the rear wheels with loss by friction brought to its minimum through accuracy of workmanship and the use of annular ball bearings.

Chandler motor and chassis design are typical of the highest priced construction, yet Chandler is moderately priced. It offers greater value than other cars give you for hundreds more. You can absolutely prove this to your own satisfaction if you will come and study the Chandler car.

"Easiest car to drive"

Brentwood Film Corporation
[illegible] Fountain Avenue
Los Angeles

January 9th, 1919.

Mr. Harry A. Lord,
Lord Motor Car Co.
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Sir:—

I have been the owner of a Velie Six touring car for the past year and a half, and while I have owned several other makes of cars, I have never had the genuine pleasure out of any of them that I have had from my Velie.

My wife drives the car every day in the year and says it is the easiest car to drive that she has ever operated.

The way the car rides is the thing that appeals to me, but I have never had any trouble with it in any way, just give her a little gas and oil and it is always on the job.

My next new car will be a Velie Six
Yours very truly,
Brentwood Film Corporation.

The Velie Six is lower in price than any other Light Six of comparative specifications. SCRIPPS-BOOTH

Undoubtedly you have seen the new Scripps-Booth cars—their appearance is such that they never fail to attract attention, but did you ever have the pleasure of riding in one?

Have you ever felt the responsiveness of the valve-in-head-powered Scripps-Booth? Have you ever enjoyed a ride on the highway where there is a chance to "open her up" or been driven through the crowded traffic zone at a snail's pace and observed the infrequency with which gears must be shifted?

If you pride yourself on your motor wisdom but never have ridden in the Scripps-Booth, your education is not as complete as you may think it is. In order that you may make it complete, extend us the opportunity of demonstrating the Scripps-Booth car to you.

For the business man who prefers a small, light car in which to meet his professional duties and for the woman driver who dislikes to "fight" a heavy car into control, we suggest a roadster model in either the four or six-cylinder type. The six-cylinder, five-passenger touring model is in a class above par for customary family usage at a minimum of operating expense.

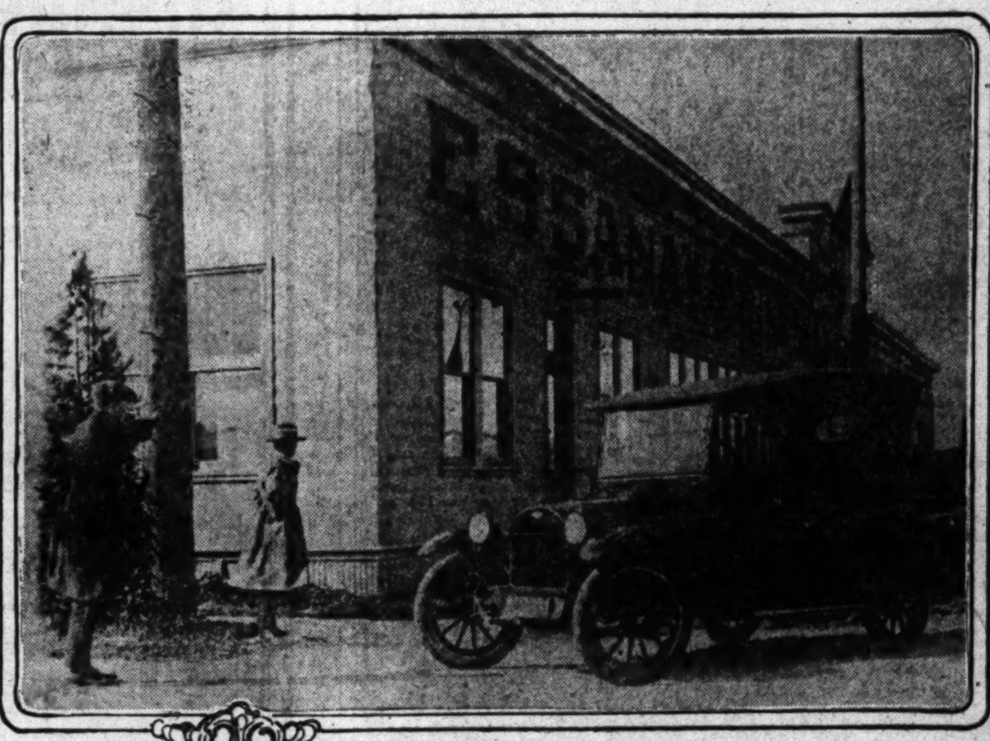
Pictures' Birthplace Now Garage



Rudely Disturbing the Distinguished Shade of Bronco Billy.

While Al Waddell was cruising through the State in a Chevrolet 490 recently he happened to stop at Niles and there discovered that the old moving-picture studio in which Bronco Billy Anderson made his first Essanay western pictures has now been turned into a hustling, bustling garage.

FROM CELLULOID TO GAS.

The smell of gasoline is soon to perfume the once busy Essanay Film Manufacturing Company's plant at Niles, Cal. The building, which has stood idle since before the war, is to be turned into a garage.

What has become of the once famous "Broncho Billy," no one seems to know; but the old building on the highway in Niles has stood as a monument to the fame of the erstwhile movie champion. Now, even the old building is to be turned into a home for motor cars, trucks and tractors, leaving Mr. Anderson's fame to the memory of old-timers in Niles, who will tell of the days when "Broncho Billy" was the king of the village and when Charlie Chaplin was a resident of the little city.

Like the old-timers in the "Ghost Cities" of Nevada, made famous by Charles E. Van Loan, the old residents of Niles, have entertained hopes of seeing the picture plant come back. As long as the plant stood idle they seemed to feel that some bright morning "Broncho Billy" would motor out, followed by a few autoloads of beautiful picture actresses and a troop of horsemen, to reopen the plant.

Even if the sign is removed from the old plant and replaced by tin signs advertising oils, tires and shock absorbers, the old-timers in Niles will remain loyal to "Broncho Billy" and claim him for all time as their town "champ."

BIG PLANT NEARLY READY.

"The huge $1,500,000 concrete and steel plant built for the Saxon Motor Car Company will soon be ready for occupancy, according to A. S. French of the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company, local agents for the new Saxon six.

"Just as the plant was nearing completion the United States was plunged into war. The government, casting about for warehouses big enough to hold the trappings of a nation at war, took over the new Saxon plant for the duration of hostilities. It became a supply depot for a vast treasure in military stores. Aircraft engines, war trucks, officers, cars, filled the big building, and soldiers were on guard day and night.

"With cuts in automobile manufacture dictated by the government, all plants found their facilities ample for building the passenger car schedules permitted by the government. Under normal circumstances the Saxon company would have suffered hardship in being unable to enjoy the increased manufacturing facilities afforded by its new plant. But curtailment dictated by Uncle Sam made possible the taking on of more war contracts. The Saxon company was awarded contracts for building the government standard one-ton truck known as style AA. The company is still engaged in turning out these trucks along with its regular passenger car manufacture.

"As the government is able to divert its war materials into civilian uses its great military warehouses will be empty. The new Saxon plant will then be available as the ultra-modern home of the Saxon six.

"Recent demands for Saxon six motor cars have been so insistent that it has almost been in excess of the available supply. This sturdy six-cylinder car is enjoying a constantly increasing popularity."

FORMERLY FEATURED EXPENSIVE TRUCKS.

"When the Ford truck was first announced, many persons were surprised when they found it was to be equipped with worm-gear final drive," said W. D. Dunham, West Seventh-street Ford dealer, last week. "The worm-gear drive had hitherto been a feature found only on the highest-priced trucks. To people really familiar with Ford policy, the choice occasioned no surprise. Where the efficiency of the car is concerned, Ford has never compromised in the matter of cost.

UNUSUAL SALES POLICY DESCRIBED.

SOLE WORK OF FORCE TURNED TO THE EDUCATION OF DEALERS.

"An interesting article in the current issue of Printer's Ink describes the unusual sales policy of the Willard Storage Battery Company," said A. J. Tobey of the Western Auto Electric Company last week. "The Willard factory maintains a traveling sales force of something like seventy-five men. Two years ago these men were told to turn in their order books, and under no circumstances to take any more orders.

"Their sole job from that time on has been to help the Willard dealer, and to educate him in the Willard way of doing business. The executives of the Willard company decided that the dealer who was thoroughly familiar with their policies and faithfully carried them out in his business would need no soliciting for orders. The orders would take care of themselves if the dealer took the proper care of his cutomers. The Willard free service system has been the outgrowth of this broad policy. We have from 200 to 300 car owners call daily to have their batteries tested."

RECENT PLAN OF TAXI SERVICE.

One of the recent plans made by the Los Angeles Athletic Club Taxi Service was to standardize on Miller cord tires. This question of tires is one of the hardest to contend with in the taxi service on account of the many starts and stops that taxis are compelled to make while moving around traffic.

The decision to standardize on Miller tires was only made after using many different makes of tires on their cars, and they found that the Miller tire equipment was rendering them the greatest service.

"We're Off,"

Says President Fred L. Baker of the Automobile Club of Southern California in starting the campaign for 30,000 members.

Thirty thousand members for the Automobile Club of Southern California by 1920 is the new slogan of that organization announced yesterday by President Fred L. Baker to officials and directors.

This is the most remarkable aim yet established in this country for any motoring organization, and, according to club officials here, it has not been duplicated in Great Britain or France.

The Southern California organization is known as a service club, not a social body, and as such, and with the attainment of a membership of 30,000, it will be the largest of its kind in the world. Already it is several times larger than any in the United States.

There are now 17,532 members in the organization, according to President Baker's annual report just issued, and in order to make possible the completion of extensive signposting improvements, and to carry on additional public service to motorists, this number is to be brought up to the record-breaking total of 30,000.

Squeaking Brakes

can often be avoided by washing surface of brake lining (glazed by oil and dirt) with kerosene or gasoline. Generally, however, "squeaking" is due to poor lining or lining attached with rivets that are not countersunk.

Insist that Raybestos brake lining be properly applied to your car—with copper or brass rivets correctly countersunk. Then you may demand twelve months of quiet, efficient wear if yours is a passenger car or truck up to 2 tons, and proportionate service on heavier trucks.

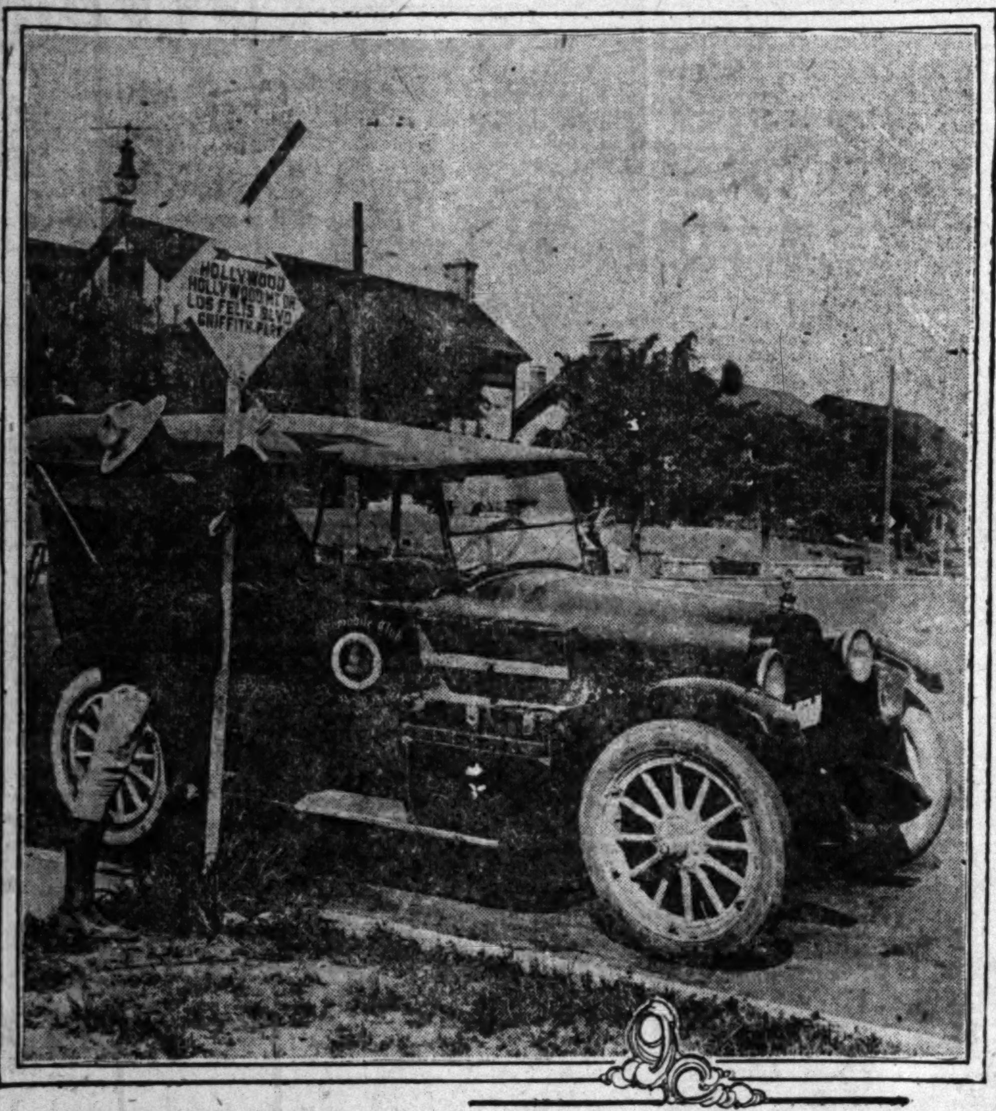
It is poor policy to guess at what oil to use in an engine.



This Machine Helps to Keep You from Getting Lost.

This is a Nash six used by the sign-posting department of the Automobile Club of Southern California in seeing to it that our highways are so marked that a "wayfaring man, though a fool, may not lose his way."

But even here our difficulties do not end, for it is often advisable to use a different grade of oil in summer than in winter. In warm weather a heavier bodied oil is better, because the heat of the weather tends to thin the lubricant, while in cold weather exactly the opposite effect is observed. The cold tends to thicken the oil, so that a heavy bodied lubricant may become almost like molasses. Also it frequently happens that as a car grows old in service, its parts wear in until the clearness between the moving parts is considerably greater than when it was built and a heavier oil is needed for efficient lubrication.

So when sooting plugs, excessive carbon deposits and the other evidence of oil pumping are observed, the car owner should first make sure that he is using the right quantity and quality of lubricant before he proceeds further. But if all these items are checked up and found to be correctly handled, the next things open to suspicion are the pistons and piston rings.

It often happens that piston rings that are not fitted properly allow oil to work past them into the combustion chamber. If a ring does not fit properly in its groove or is stuck so that it does not spring out against the cylinder wall, of course oil will be pumped. It frequently happens that oil containing grit and othe foreign matter is forced up and under the piston rings in such a way that the rings do not seat properly.

The fitting of piston rings is a very delicate job and must be most accurately and carefully carried out The rings must fit in the grooves so that there is not more than .001 of an inch up and down clearance, that is to say just enough to keep the ring from sticking. The ring must be lapped to size. The car owner should not attempt to do this without first watching some experienced hand carry out the job.

In regard to the special makes and types of rings that are now offered as curealls for lubricating troubles. Many of these are undoubtedly excellent, but not unless they are accurately and carefully fitted, just as with ordinary rings. The car owner who buys a set of these patent rings, puts them in any old way and thinks his troubles are over, will find that he has another guess coming.

In chronic cases of oil pumping it may be found that the cylinder itself is to blame. In the course of service the cylinder is quite likely to be worn slightly oval, out of round in other words. When this has occurred oil pumping is inevitable. The only way to cure the trouble when it arises from this cause is to have the cylinder rebored and fitted with oversize pistons. Firms specializing in this work will be found in every city. One piece of advice in this connection, is never to have a single cylinder rebored and repistoned, even if examination proves that only one is out of round. Have the whole set rebored and fitted with the same sized pistons. This is the only way to maintain the balanced operation of the engine. Sometimes cylinder blocks will take two reborings without endangering the strength of the structure.

In some cases it is possible to eliminate oil pumping troubles by drilling a series of 1-16 inch holes in the skirt of the piston. These holes must be spaced at equal distances around the skirt and under the lowest groove. In some instances a scraper ring will have to be added for real effectiveness. With this series of holes, the excess oil is permitted to drain back into the crankcase, instead of working its way past the rings into the combustion chamber.

One other danger there is to be guarded against and that is a scored cylinder wall. Gouges in the cylinder wall naturally permit the oil to work through them into the combustion chamber. The only method of curing this is to take the cylinder to some concern specializing in welding and have the trenches in the metal filled in.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Barney Oldfield: Will you kindly advise me as to what kind of paint is best to use on the top of my machine. I have a Buick light six that has a mohair covering and as it is somewhat faded I thought perhaps there was some kind of paint I could put on myself.

What makes my motor choke when I slow up to go around a corner? The motor has been running O.K. all summer, but since the cold weather has grown colder the motor gives me slight trouble, now if I slow down to go around a corner and then give gas with foot accelerator, motor don't pick up as quick as it should but seems to choke. If I ease up slightly with foot and give the motor time it will pick up slowly and goes O.K.

Do you think my carburetor needs adjusting or do you think it might be poor gas?

W. S. N.

I wouldn't use an ordinary paint, but a top dressing of some sort. Go to any accessory dealer and ask for a good top dressing.

It don't choke because you turn, but because you suddenly close the throttle and the mixture doesn't happen to be right. It is not rich enough for pick-up. When you open the throttle suddenly it requires a rich mixture and your adjustment don't give that mixture. Poor gasoline aggravates the case.

Barney Oldfield: I have driven my car about 10,000 miles, but have always had a great deal of trouble particularly with the transmission and the universal joint. Have also had two broken bevel ring gears in the differential. The engine has never given me any trouble whatever.

In looking over my bills, I have been astonished to learn how much it has cost me to operate this car.

Would you advise in view of the trouble I have had and the great expense, to sell this car or trade it in and if so do you care to recommend a car that will stand the hard service of our poor roads?

C. W. A.

In view of the trouble you have had I would advise one of three things:

1. Have a new make of transmission and rear axle installed.
2. Trade the car in for a new one.
3. Sell the car.

Of the three No. 2 is the best proposition, I believe.

• • •

Barney Oldfield: I have an Overland touring car, model 85-4. There is a knock somewhere and it seems to be in the engine. When the engine is first started, the knock is very light, but when the engine is hot, the knock becomes louder. If the clutch is pushed in slightly, the knock becomes lighter. I have had it to a garage and they said that it needed a new push-rod. Would you please tell me how to locate the knock?

J. C. D.

It is quite likely that push-rod noise has developed, but the fact that you can alter the loudness of the knock by clutch operation leads me to believe there is crankshaft end play which is the cause of the knock. This will mean new main bearings.

• • •

Barney Oldfield: I have a 1917 Dodge now run 8000 miles. Lately have had trouble shifting gears, when I release the clutch, the gears still revolve and will not mesh without a lot of grinding noise. Is there any remedy for this?

O. J., JR.

Rasping of gears may be caused by:

A spinning clutch.

Transmission shafts out of line.

Poor shifting.

In the first place try accelerating the engine slightly just as you make the shift. If that won't help then blame the clutch, which is dragging.

Rubber Magnate Sees Big Industrial Future on Its Way.

TIRE MAKER BOOSTS US.

Sees a Wonderful Future Industrially for Southern California.

The latest large-caliber business man to join the winter colony in Southern California is H. S. Firestone, head of the big tire and rubber company which bears his name, and one of the greatest boosters this section of the country ever had. Mr. Firestone is here on what he expects to make a fairly lengthy vacation, and is occupying the former home of R. A. Rowan on Hillside drive, Pasadena.

NOT FIRST TRIP.

In 1906 Mr. Firestone made his first trip to Southern California, taking in Los Angeles as part of a tour of the West, on which he slept eighteen nights in a sleeping car. At that time the firm of Leavitt & Bill represented his firm in Los Angeles, but he selected this city to be the site of one of his branch houses, one of the first and certainly the finest on the Coast.

Right now Mr. Firestone is not here to rest particularly, but rather to make a thorough study of the commercial possibilities of this section of the country with a view to extending his business interests here, perhaps to the extent of establishing a branch factory. He sees a wonderful future for the Pacific Coast in the matter of trade, and predicts great industrial growth in Los Angeles.

BROTHER HERE.

As a further evidence of his exalted opinion of Los Angeles, he points to the fact that he has chosen this local branch to be placed under the direct management of his brother, E. S. Firestone, chiefly because this city is the finest from a residential standpoint of any in which there are branches.

Mr. Firestone stays that it is the intention of his firm to establish closer relations with the people of Southern California. He wants to know them better and wants them to know his firm better. His belief is that the prospects for the automobile industry are greater than ever before, and particularly in Southern California.

Rubber, according to Mr. Firestone, is to be one of the chief industries of the United States in the very near future. As most of the rubber plantations of the world are in the Orient, Mr. Firestone maintains that the logical course of this branch of commerce is through Pacific ports. England is a strong contender for the rubber traffic, and many large eastern concerns in this country now buy through London markets, but in time, it is his belief, nearly all of it will pass through western channels.

His company has established large warehouses and rubber colonies at Singapore, at which place all the rubber used in his factories is gathered and graded by experts, thus affording the advantage of receiving uniform grades at the factories and preventing the manufacture of faulty tires. The growth of the rubber industry on the Coast will naturally be followed by the establishment of large factories, as the accessibility of the Coast cities to the rubber plantations will be a great inducement to tire manufacturers to locate here.

SOME HISTORY.

The Firestone firm was organized in 1900, and the first factory was erected in Akron, O., in 1901. An old foundry in the city was purchased at a cost of $4700 and the plant installed therein. At that time the office force consisted of three and the factory force consisted of fifteen. At present there are between fourteen and fifteen thousand employees of the firm, the business of which was $75,000,000 last year.

H. S. Firestone, Southern California Booster.

The head of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company is here for a stay and has given The Times readers some interesting facts about his business and about the future of Southern California.

"But," said Mr. Firestone, "what is even more important than the development of a business is community welfare. One of my first considerations has always been the welfare of employees. Honesty of purpose and loyalty of interests must be instilled into the employees of a company if it is to make any success. Without co-operation from employees, no concern can ultimately succeed."

HELPS WORKMEN.

The regard and respect of employees must be obtained, is the view of Mr. Firestone, and their welfare looked after in a thorough and systematic manner. With this end in view, he founded Firestone Park, a thriving community, which is part of the city of Akron. This place at present contains over 800 homes, has a library, paved streets and sidewalks, sewage system, electric lights and one of the finest school buildings in the State of Ohio. This school, of which the head of the great tire concern is justly proud, embraces a school for manual training, school of domestic science and an outdoor clinic for anaemic persons.

The greatest benefits of all derived by the employees of his firm are from the stock-holding plan, wherein every employee is enabled to purchase shares, the amount determined by length of service, and holds same during the time he is with the firm. If such shareholders shall at any time leave the firm, their interest and part of the accrued value will be paid.

HOUSING PROBLEM.

The housing problem is one of the most serious that confronts the employer today. To meet this problem he has started a $10,000,000 community company in Akron, $3,000,000 to be raised by his and the other two leading firms of the city and the balance by smaller concerns. In this way homes will be provided for all of the residents, who, by the payment of a small deposit and a nominal sum for rent, will, in the course of less than fifteen years, own their own homes.

His firm also insures all employees, no premiums being charged. The amount of the insurance depends entirely upon length of service, and those who have been employees for fifteen years or more are insured for the sum of $1000.

A special feature maintained by the company is a large auditorium, with a seating capacity of more than 2000. Last year at a meeting of the stockholders of the company, which includes practically every employee, the spacious building was nearly filled. Still another feature is a bank which is liberally patronized by the entire community. This institution now has savings accounts with 23,462 people and has deposits aggregating $1,917,000. A large delegation of bankers from Chicago and Cleveland were invited to the opening of the bank and to meet the bankers of Akron. At a dinner tendered at that time there were 350 Akron financiers present.

BIG CLUBHOUSE.

The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company also maintains a hospital, dental and medical clinics, where examinations are made free of all charge and nominal charges are made for continued practice. At Firestone Park, among many other institutions is a clubhouse for employees fitted with every modern appliance and convenience. There is also a strong organization of the Y.W.C.A. Every year the heads of all departments of the firm are taken on an excursion to Mr. Firestone's farm in Columbiana county.

It is Mr. Firestone's belief that small things are after all what count the most in life. No man, no matter what power he might have gained or what glory is his, should ever forget the simpler things of this world and the fact that every man's life is just as important to him as are the lives of those with great power. They should also not be forgetful of the fact that those with power have an enormous responsibility in looking after the interests and welfare of those who might not be so fortunate. It has always been his endeavor to live up to this standard in dealing with his employees and judging from the appreciation that they are constantly showing, he believes that he has been successful.

BIG FUTURE.

Mr. Firestone believes that the automobile industry is only in its infancy and that shipping by trucks will be the favorite means of future transportation. In fact he can see nothing but a very, very great future for the automobile industry and the increase in rubber production will be especially beneficial to the Pacific Coast. Rubber, he believes, will be cheaper, as will be automobiles, just as soon as things are adjusted to a peace basis. Another reason why California should be especially benefited is on account of the magnificent road system of the State, which is bound to cause the automobile business to flourish.

Mr. Firestone calls attention to the development of Akron, O., the capital of the rubber industry. When his factory was established in 1900, the city had a population of 42,000, in 1910 it had 70,000 people and today it has a population of 160,000, with a suburban population of 20,000.

"The automobile has done almost as much to develop the country as have the railroads," concluded Mr. Firestone, "and if the industry continues to grow as it has in the past, the result will be greater than can be dreamed of at present."

CHOSEN AS MOST TYPICAL.

Probably because of the massiveness of the appearance of the Bulldog Mack truck, as the A. C. models have become known, apparently it has been selected by artists and illustrators as most typical of the meaning of motor transport, and for this reason is being prominently featured throughout the country in all sorts of publications. The compliment is one that is appreciated by the International Motor Company, builders of Mack trucks, and a collection of literature and art work in which their truck is used as the embodiment of power and utility is being made.

One of the leading publishers of the country, who specializes on problems of business and financial management, recently compiled an extensive a treatise on the subject, "The Motor Truck as an Aid to Business Profits." Full-page advertisements of this book have been printed in almost all the principal newspapers of the country. The treatise makes a feature of the right and wrong ways to operate trucks, and to illustrate the full-page advertisement there is a drawing of a Bulldog Mack truck across the top.

When Mack trucks were engaged in the arduous work of transporting the steel and supplies for the construction of the Carnegie Istitute's new observatory on the summit of Mt. Wilson, the undertaking was spoken of locally as marking an epoch in motor truck efficiency. That no truer words ever were said in relation to the truck subject has been evidenced repeatedly since then and now in this full-page advertisement, in addition to the principal illustration, there is a picture showing the three and one-half-ton Mack with a loan of ten tons, on the Mt. Wilson trail.

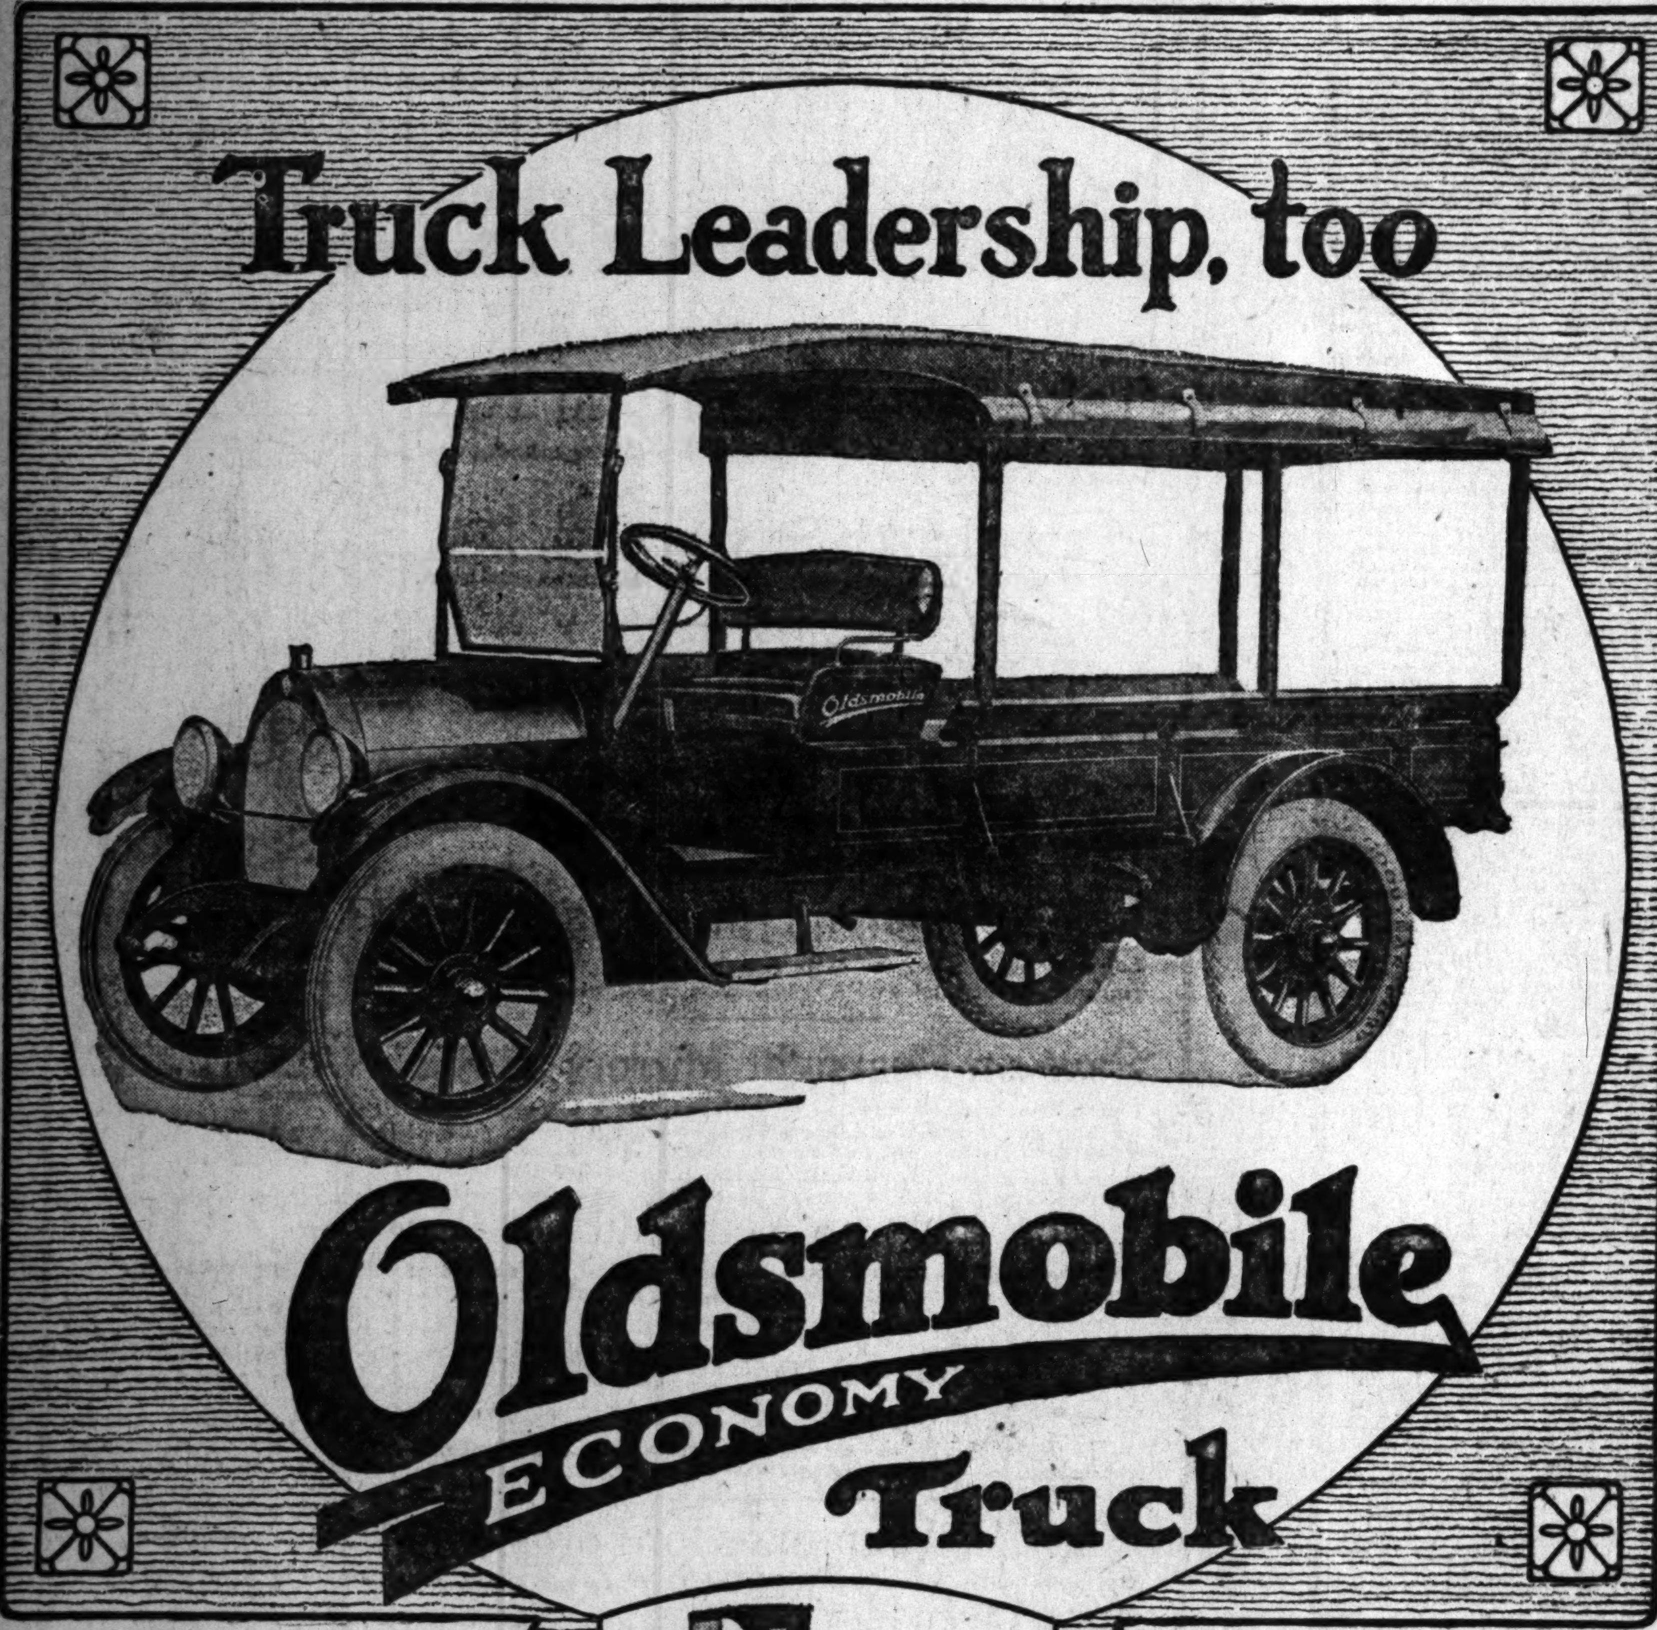
It is indorsements such as these that count most, in the opinion of J. A. Stoner, manager of the International Mack Corporation, western representatives for Mack trucks. "They are voluntary, entirely unsolicited, and show that the public is recognizing Macks as typical of the best in considering motor truck performance," Mr. Stoner said.

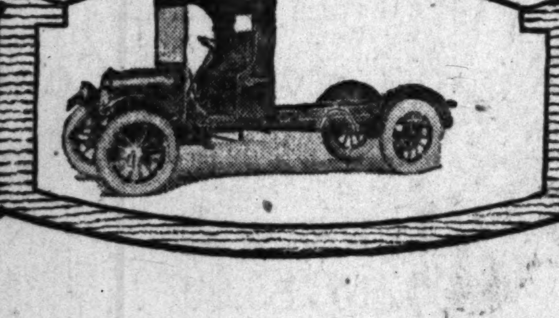
SLEIGHS REPLACE AUTOS IN CANADA.

"Sleighs and not automobiles are the means of conveyance here at this time of the year. The thermometer registered 29 deg. below zero, and, oh, boy, how I did long for Los Angeles," writes Fred Eisner, sales manager of the Damon Specialty Company, manufacturer of Nonolio polishes for automobiles, from Calgary, Can. Although the auto and accessory business is quiet in that part of the world at this time of the year, he states that dealers there believe this year will prove a record-breaker and unless car production is far greater than it has been that it will be impossible for all who want cars to get them.

GEAR RATIO CHANGES.

When it is desired to get more speed into an old car, one of the operations necessary is to change the gear ratio of the rear axle. Racing cars use less than three-to-one reduction, and this change can be made in the ordinary stock model by fitting a new differential ring gear and driving pinion, which can be obtained from the maker of the car.





Power, speed, economy of operation—that's what this truck means in any business or on any farm—certain delivery, saving, profit.

Every feature is a tried and tested success. Note these important advantages:

Chassis with instrument board, windshield, cowl and fenders; no seat . . . $1250
With steel cab and sills, ready for mounting stake, stock rack, grain dump or box body $1295
With handsome, strongly ironed and braced express body, ready for action . . $1350

SURVEY SHOWS BIG PROSPECTS.

Present Year Should be the Greatest in History.

Auto First Consideration in Rural Families.

Accounts for Unprecedentedly Heavy Sales.

Automobile manufacturers and dealers throughout the United States face the prospects of the biggest year in the history of the industry during 1919, if a careful survey of agricultural and industrial conditions of the nation are any indication of what is coming.

Business men generally and motorists in particular will find much of interest in the following interview given a big eastern financial paper by Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Company, whose product is distributed in Southern California by S. F. Seager & Co. A letter containing the interview was received yesterday by Robert S. Weaver, vice-president of the distributing firm here. It reads:

"There are many people occupying positions of responsibility in America today who indicate in their conversation a lack of appreciation of the following fundamental facts:

"The foundation of prosperity rests in agriculture, transportation and the purchasing power of the masses.

"The farmers of the United States not only are more prosperous today than ever before in the history of the country, but they are guaranteed by the government a very good price for all they can produce during the present year.

"The farmers are good spenders, contrary to a popular impression that they buy only moderate priced goods.

"There are 6,000,000 of them in America and in practically every home today the topic of discussion is, 'What shall we buy for father, mother, son and daughter?'

"The automobile fortunately receives first consideration in nearly every rural family when prosperity comes. This accounts for the unprecedentedly heavy sales right off the floor at all the automobile shows held this year. My impression of the New York and Chicago shows was a repetition of the impression gained during the automobile shows in 1910, when the real big boom of the automobile business began. This last show was my thirteenth automobile show and I never saw such crowds and so many ready buyers.

"The second fundemental is that of transportation. The necessity for carrying labor, materials and the finished product to market.

"The world markets are rapidly opening up to American commerce and American automobile production, and since the first of the year we have received inquiries from practically every country in the world. They all want automobiles and want them quickly. Price does not seem to be a consideration.

"The third fundemental of prosperity is the purchasing power of the masses. True, there are many people who, before we entered the war paid less taxes than tehy do now. Money, in great quantities, has passed from the hands of the few into the hands of the many.

"It is my candid belief that the next ten years will not only see a tremendous movement toward greater co-operation between the men who merely have money and the men who work with their hands, but as a result of that co-operation a tremendous increase in production and profits not only to the men who have money, but to the men who work with their hands.

"Is it not peculiar that any one should not be able to see the money making possibilities and intelligent profit sharing?"

RIDGE ROUTE TO BE CLOSED.

The Ridge route between Los Angeles and Bakersfield will be closed on March 17, and will remain closed until the paving is entirely completed, which will probably be late in the fall. In the meantime, F. H. Joyner, County Highway Commissioner, has assured officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California, that the Bouquet Canyon route will be put in the best of condition for the heavy traffic that is certain to travel over it.

Modern Lightness—With Stability

THERE is much to be said for the closed car bodies that set the first high standards of coach building applied to motor cars.

Peerless leadership in Closed Car construction was established in the early days of the industry.

There is much to be said for newer methods—where they work real improvement.

The Peerless Closed Cars of today embody those fundamental principles developed by the old master coach builders, combined with all that constitutes genuine improvement in modern methods.

The result—modern lightness with stability.

Mounted on the famous Peerless Eight chassis, with its two separate and distinct ranges of power, the Peerless Closed Cars of today maintain their leadership.

In substantial comfort they are not to be surpassed.

In operation they give the most distinctive performance yet attained by motor cars.

The "loafing" range offers the acme of soft, smooth, efficient, economical application of power.

The "sporting" range releases an abundance of power for emergencies and speed which few cars now possess.

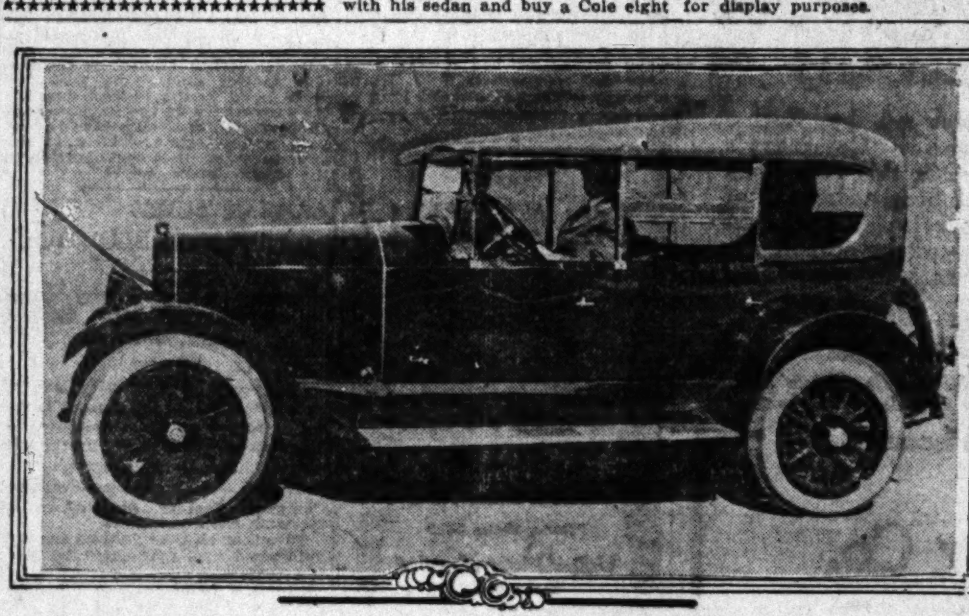
SOMETHING NEW IN TOPS.

When E. Van Etten, one of New York's prominent railroad men and a former official of the New York Central line, left his home city last fall, he drove to the Pacific Coast in a Cole eight sedan. A friend had chided him about his age and to the effect he did not have the nerve to tackle a cross-country trip. The journey was made. The understanding was Mr. Van Etten would remain but a short time in Southern California.

Like many other eastern visitors, Mr. Van Etten became a convert to Southern California and decided to remain indefinitely. At the Los Angeles Country Club, where he is located, he saw a number of cars equipped with tops of unusual design. They were something not seen in New York, metropolis of the country though it may be. He became infatuated with the top, and, in order to get a car similarly equipped, decided to part with his sedan and buy a Cole eight touring car on which to put a top made after his own ideas.

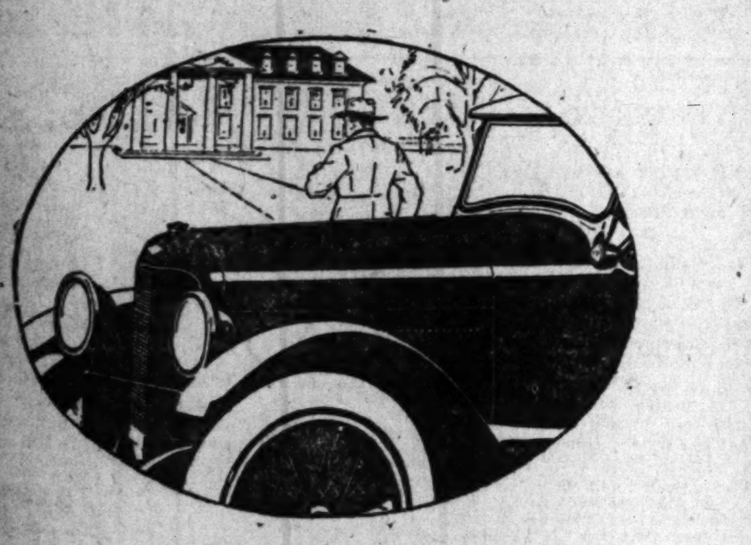
Together with James L. Irving, the Cole representative here, a color scheme and design for the car and top were worked out that the owner declares "will knock 'em dead" back in Father Knickerbocker's town. The body of the car is cinnamon brown. The top of the hood is black, the two-tone combination being remarkably pretty. The wheels are brown with black felloes. The top is the very latest in style and but slightly lighter in color than the body. It is trimmed in nickel-plated fittings and has adjustable curtains.

When the car was at the top shop it attracted so much attention that the builder had to put it in a room to itself so that the workmen would not be interfered with. Mr. Van Etten has consented to let the car stay at the Irving Motor Car Company's establishment at Eleventh and Flower streets for a few days for display purposes.



So Loud that It Nearly Made Him Deaf to Look at It.

An eastern visitor had a decidedly different top put on his Cole eight and it attracted so much attention while in the shop that it had to be put in a special room to keep the workmen from being interfered with by the curious throng. The car is on exhibition for a few days this week at the showrooms of the Irving Motor Car Company.



PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

THE best proof of the popularity of Paige Cars is the shortage of Paige Cars. We mean that literally—a shortage of New Paiges and Used Paiges.

We have never had enough Paige Sixes—either the New Series five-passenger Linwood or the New Series seven-passenger Essex—to satisfy the world-wide demand. That shortage today is more acute than ever.

The explanation for that lies fairly and squarely in Paige Worth. Paige Owners find that Paige Quality pays in Economy and long Service precisely as Paige Beauty pays in Satisfaction. Low up-keep, absence of repair-bills, continuous running, are the foundation upon which Paige Supremacy has been built.

Campaign Started to Keep Jaywalkers from Sure Fate.

TENDENCY TO WALK IN SLEEP.

May be Produced by California Sunshine.

Motorists Have Complaint Against Jay-Walking.

Will be Matter for Investigation by Club.

There are so many motorists who have a standing complaint registered against "jay-walking" as a developing profession among pedestrians in this part of the State that officials of the Automobile Club of Southern California are considering action in order to bring the public to see that hundreds of motor car accidents originate in the carelessness of the man on foot just as well as by the man in the car.

Whether or not it is the abundant sunshine of Southern California that produces a certain tendency for people to walk in their sleep in broad daylight, meandering negligently across streets anywhere their foot happens to slip off a curb instead of waiting until they get to a prescribed crossing, or whether they don't know any better, will be matter for investiagtion, and Automobile Club officials, according to Secretary S. L. Mitchell, are going to sift the thing to the bottom.

"Jay-walking" is an unpleasant term carrying the idea that anyone who oozes out into a street or a highway without looking to the right or left is a "jay"—or in the words of the cartoonist, a "boob," and a "rube." In walking from place to place, either in the cities or the country, he takes on the characteristics of a "boob" and conducts himself as one, point out the automobile owners most annoyed.

The species, it is said, may be male or female, young or old, well dressed or not. Appearances are deceptive. It is even true that a car owner himself, when on foot, may be a "jay-walker," declare club executives, possibly unconsciously following the example set by those who are not accustomed to driving automobiles.

The "jay-walker" has some of the characteristics of the "shimmy dance," it is pointed out, in that those practicing it have little regard for the safety or feelings of others. One of the largest dancing academies in Los Angeles is considering popularizing the "jay walk" as a new step, if the police will permit, on account of there being so little foot movement and a general dreamy atmosphere as of moonlight.

PROTECT THE BATTERIES.

While the storage battery is generally immune to freezing, because of the acid in the electrolyte, when a battery is nearly discharged it will freeze at about zero, so that the owner of a battery which he suspects is pretty well run down should take the precaution of protecting it with a blanket or heavy robe when the thermometer shows signs of going down.

PURCHASES TWENTY TRUCKS.

Word was received last week by Ruddle & Mennillo, Southern California and Arizona distributors for Fageol trucks and tractors, of the purchase of twenty Fageol trucks by the Consumers' Ice Company of San Francisco, one of the largest ice manufacturing concerns in the West. In talking of the addition of these twenty trucks to the present Consumers' Ice Company's fleet, Richard G. Sneath, manager of the transportation department, said: "In 1908, George R. Sneath, president of the Consumers' Ice Company, rebuilt a touring car of early vintage into a gasoline delivery wagon. Several trucks of various makes were added to our delivery department. After careful investigation based on experience this company purchased in July 23, 1917, a Fageol two-and-one-half-ton truck. This truck was fitted with a body to carry twenty blocks of ice, each weighing 300 pounds. Measuring up to our standard of efficiency, six other Fageols were added at varying periods.

"These six trucks duplicated the first with the exception that twenty-two-block bodies were used, making it possible to carry a pay load of 6600 pounds, or 1600 pounds above the rated capacity of the truck. We have found that our first Fageol truck has operated over 20,000 miles, practically without repairs, and its tires are not yet half worn out.

"The Consumers' Ice Company has so arranged its plant that motor trucks can be used without undue loss of time. The garage is directly opposite the loading platform, which is the exact height of the floor of the truck bodies. The ice is delivered to the platform by a gravity chute, which enables quick loading. The trucks then run through the repair shop before weighing out. The location of the repair shop between the loading platform and the scales eliminates waste of time in this operation. Mechanics are on duty to check missing spark plugs or make minor adjustments at this time.

"In checking in each driver reports on a form as to the condition of his truck. This is supplemented by a very complete monthly inspection, also on a form. Fuel and lubrication is supplied at night by a man who is trained for these duties, and an individual report of the amount of fuel and lubricant used, as well as undue wear, breaks or misadjustments, is checked.

"The trucks are kept clean by a washer, who washes each truck once a week, and are repainted once each season and revarnished once between each painting. Complete records are kept on each truck as to the cost of operation, distance traveled and tonnage. In this way costs per ton mile, per ton delivered or per day are readily available at all times. The records of the transportation department of the Consumers' Ice Company make possible better delivery methods for others; mistakes need not be repeated."

CONCERN EVERY OPERATOR

How can it be determined if there is the proper compression in the cylinders and how can the trouble be located are questions that concern every operator of a motor car. When the subject was presented to Ray Cosby, service superintendent for the H. C. McVey Company, Oakland car representatives, Mr. Cosby gave out some interesting information. Economy demands that the cylinder compression be kept up to normal, as low compression means loss of power and therefore greater fuel consumption.

According to Cosby, whether the compression is good or not may be determined by cranking the engine over slowly, noting whether the pressure in the cylinders holds or leaks out gradually, as determined by the resistance to the pull of the crank handle. For the beginner it is advisable to open all the compression caps but the one on the cylinder being tested, as a better indication is given under these circumstances.

Lack of compression is usually due to a leaky exhaust valve, and this in turn is caused by carbon on the valves or pit holes or both. If the condition is very bad the valve must be ground, but if only a small particle of carbon is causing the trouble the clearance between the valve stem and pushrod should be increased and the engine operated for two or three days in this way or until the carbon is pounded off.

A leaky valve might also be due to no clearance between valve stem and pushrod, this condition preventing the seating of the valves. Care should be taken in adjusting this clearance to see that it is not too small, otherwise the valve may not close properly, thus allowing a leak of more or less importance to start with, but what is worse, the leakage of hot gas burns the valve and seat so that regrinding is necessary soon.

HEAVY ROADS SHATTER TIRES.

OVERSIZE VARIETY SENT TO CALIFORNIA FOR GRUELING TESTS.

It is the heavy load over sharp, stony roadway that shatters tires as they climb to the rim of the world over in San Bernardino county, according to Max Greene, the general manager of the mountain auto line. Consequently there was considerable elation at the Los Angeles branch of the Miller Rubber Company of Akron when the word came that Max Greene had tried out the Miller uniform cords and found them perfectly adaptable for all requirements of this arduous grind.

Before the Miller company had announced to the public its plan for making so-called heavy duty pneumatics it had sent a supply of big oversize Miller cords out to California for the most grueling testing that enthusiastic Millerites could devise. Consequently, a set of these tires soon found themselves on the wheels of a 7000-pound car loaded with from ten to twenty persons who were going up and over the hills. The test lasted several months and when it was finished it was good news that was sent to J. O. Ward, manager of the Los Angeles branch.

SLOW PROCESS OF IMPROVEMENT.

MUCH IS INVOLVED IN WORKING OUT BETTERMENTS IN TIRES.

Ceaseless laboratory experimenting that must be confirmed by the tests of actual usage is the slow process by which improvement is made in tire construction. Few people realize the time, money and patience that is involved in working out betterments in tire building, according to F. H. Osler, Racine distributor.

"No less than 1118 separate tests and experiments were made by Racine chemists before the absorbing shock strip that is a new and important feature of the Racine multi-mile cord was perfected," said Osler, last week. "That was slightly more than two years ago, but no announcement was made. It was not until the mileage records came in from tires in actual service that the Racine designers were satisfied beyond a doubt that an important improvement had been effected. The mileage records collected by the Racine factory during the past two years have proved beyond question the importance of the improvement afforded by the absorbing shock strip, and experts acclaim it as one of science's greatest contributions to the pneumatic tire world."

CARE OF TUBES PREVENTS BLOWOUTS.

PATCHES SHOULD BE WELL VULCANIZED AND THE STEM SECURE.

"Take care of your tubes and the tires will usually take care of themselves so far as the elimination of blowouts is concerned," is the advice of Louis Lichtenberger, president of Lichtenberger-Ferguson Company, factory distributors of Norwalk tires and tubes.

"See that all tube patches are well vulcanized and that the tube stem is secure, and most important of all make it a habit to use the finest grade of tubes," he says. "The higher-priced tubes cost only a fraction of the cost of a new [illegible] of the same size, but no matter how good a tire you select if a poor tube is used the blowouts will invariably weaken the casing, and oftentimes a good casing is utterly ruined because of the action of the tube."

AUTO CONTROL IS IN THE BRAKES.

HAVE IMPORTANT BEARING ON SAFETY OF LIVES AND PROPERTY.

Mr. Fred Collins, factory salesman of the Raybestos company, Bridgeport, Ct., on the Pacific Coast, discussing the important bearing dependable automobile brakes have on the safety of lives and property, makes note of the following:

"Every car owner who has seen army trucks and officers' cars even in home city or cantonment use must marvel at the apparently reckless, though actually well controlled manner in which these vehicles are driven. In the army, as well as in modern business, time is a vital factor, but the actual accomplishment of the mission is the real object. So the government supplies swift motor cars and huge, powerful trucks. Realizing that safety depends entirely on the complete control of these machines and that this control is centered finally and conclusively in the brakes, government specifications require that the lining of these vital members shall be Raybestos or equal."

PRICE ADVANCED AFTER USAGE.

MOTOR CAR SELLS FOR $25 MORE IN 1918 THAN IT DID IN 1915.

Fred Albertson, who sells Dodge cars about twice as fast as he can get them, is in receipt of a letter telling the peculiar story of Dodge car No. 101. John A. Butler of Kansas City tells the yarn, which is vouched for:

"In February, 1915, we showed our original demonstrator, No. 101, to 3000 people at our opening. The car was then sold, and in December of the same year was resold to the United States Stock Food Company.

"In January this company bought a new car, and we again took possession of No. 101 in trade. For some months we used this car to demonstrate the remarkable durability of the finish. We cleaned up the car, repainted the wheels, put on new fenders, and actually very few people knew it was a used car until we called their attention to the fact.

"Finally, in August, 1918, this car was sold for $850, just $25 more than its original price in 1915."

BREAKER POINT ADJUSTMENT.

Sometimes it becomes necessary to readjust the distance between the contact points of the breaker. The common error is that of setting these points too far apart; the proper distance is approximately one-fiftieth of an inch, and this may be taken as the standard. Incidentally the width of the spark gaps has a great influence on the functioning of the ignition system.

The Chemistry of Extra Mileage

Chemical research added miles of extra service to Racine Multi-Mile Cord Tires by the development of the Racine Absorbing Shock Strip.

The Racine Absorbing Shock Strip is an extra strip of blended rubber, of graduated resiliency, uniting the tough rubber of the tread to the rubberized cord fabric carcass of the tire. This perfect welding of tread and carcass through a scientifically constructed neutralized zone, means absorption of road shocks and elimination of danger of tread and carcass separation. That's the why of the added miles of service.

Extra Tested Value

Racine Multi-Mile Cord Tires are carefully Extra Tested through each stage in their construction. Proved Racine principle of multiple-strand construction is an assurance of greater tire mileage, greater riding comfort and greater economy in car operation.

Over all pavements and roads non-skid construction scientifically perfected in Racine Multi-Mile Cord Tires gives definite driving certainty.

Note this construction which the Racine Rubber Company's chemists developed—an extra strip of rubber scientifically compounded to eliminate danger of tread and carcass separation.

A Hot Spot Chalmers Knows Neither Altitude Nor Weather

ANYONE who has motored much knows how a change of altitude—even of 600 feet—affects the average car. And when the weather changes, even if you never leave your home town, what a terrible affair it is to get your motor "running right."

A Hot Spot Chalmers knows neither altitude nor weather. For the Hot Spot device is proof against both.

No matter what the day, no matter where you are on the map, the Hot Spot carburizes the gas into a "dry" vapor from which all the power is wrung with amazing ease.

It is throbless, frictionless power, and on a cold day the engine runs warm in an instant or on a hot day runs cold consistently.

For "pulverizing" gas nothing yet has equalled the Chalmers Hot Spot and for racing it into the cylinders (a trick that is highly important), nothing has ever been made to approach the Ram's-Horn.

Either one of these two magnificent devices are worth an hour of any man's time. Both of them provide you a mental feast on modern engineering that you'll long remember.

Come see them. They've made the Chalmers one of the few great cars of the world.

Sailing Through the Rain in Rapid Style.

This is the new Essex which made quite a sensational trip from Oakland to Los Angeles as part of a 1000-mile test.

NEW MODEL WILL CAUSE BIG STIR.

WELL-KNOWN FACTORY BUILDING ENTIRELY NEW TYPE OF CAR NOW.

The new Metz master six, the latest product of the big Metz factory, is the result of war-time experimentation, and every point that makes for reliability and comfort, as well as economy, has been carefully worked out and embodied in this new car. Unlike the Metz of the past, this new model will be gear driven, and will have a powerful six-cylinder motor. It is built of standard units in so far as possible. Experience has shown that specialists in building the individual units are able to produce such parts at lower prices and higher quality than the manufacturer with more general or limited facilities.

"The new Metz master six," says L. P. Jones of the Jones-Elsebush Auto Company, California, Arizona and Nevada distributors for the Metz, "is in every sense a motor car de luxe. Besides its standard unit construction, it has a specially-designed custom-built body and Pantasote top with plate glass in the rear curtain. As yet we have not received our first car, but the specifications are so strong and the price so moderate that we have already closed considerable territory, and much interest has been manifested locally, judging from the numerous calls we have by people who want to see the new car. Our first car is on the way by express, and as soon as it arrives we will have it on display in our salesroom, where he who comes may see."

DEMONSTRATES ITS WORTH.

"A thousand-mile opener" as the first event in the greatest programme of road accomplishment ever inaugurated by one motor car dealer in Southern California is the way Harold L. Arnold started the 1919 season, March 1st. "The motoring public wants performance," said Mr. Arnold, "and my boys will satisfying them with something mighty strenuous every week of the year."

"This 1000-mile test was conducted by Road Engineer O. K. Parker, with instructions to hunt the rough spots and see whether the Essex factory was right in saying they had made an unbreakable car. Parker's first trip was over the Ridge Route on high to Bakersfield in 4 hours and 10 minutes. That, of course, is only thirty miles an hour average, but to climb to 4213 feet elevation on high gear and negotiate Tejon Pass to Bakersfield in the present unpaved and rough condition of the ridge is some shaking up for the new Essex.

"The car made the trip without once showing the 'red' in the motometer and was such a splendid demonstration, the trip was continued to San Francisco, averaging thirty miles an hour all the way. Then just to show continued consistency, the Essex left Oakland last Sunday morning in a downpour of rain and made straight through to Los Angeles in 13 hours and 58 minutes. This is a continuous run of thirty miles an hour regardless of fog, rain, mud, mountain grades, and snow and slush on the Ridge Route all of which the Essex had to overcome on its way to Los Angeles.

"Parker reports that it rained in torrents 278 out of the 412 miles between Oakland and Los Angeles. A complete record was made of every mile of the trip and when the dealer's consistency run is made to San Francisco later in the spring, I freely predict the Essex will make another wonderful showing on gasoline, oil, tire mileage and consistency of operation, which will be an eye-opener to the motoring public."

CONTROL MANY FACTORIES.

"Probably no other car made in America has an organization behind it similar to that which backs the Lexington Minute-man Six," declared B. F. Shields, head of the local Lexington distributing agency which bears his name.

"The same financial interests which own the Lexington factory own and control no less than eleven large and successful other factories, each of which specializes upon the building of some automobile part. Lexington springs, for example, are made in a factory founded by the builder of the first steel springs for vehicles ever made. Wheels, bodies, axles, forgings, castings, etc., employed on the Lexington, are all made by companies affiliated under the same control as that of the car itself.

"This fact not only assures unusual financial stability behind the Lexington car, but gives Lexington engineers an unusual opportunity in working out the design of their car. Under this arrangement they, of course, had the fullest co-operation in working out every detail of the car from the builders of each particular part. The average automobile manufacturer is forced to alter his design frequently to meet the construction of the parts that he is able to purchase.

"The Lexington engineers were never hampered in this way in the building of their car. It has resulted in an unusual harmony of design and construction throughout the entire car that is a matter of frequent comment among those who inspect the Lexington."

"The working out of such a feature as the Moore multiple exhaust, which is an exclusive feature of the Lexington, was greatly facilitated by the manufacturing resources behind the car, and is an example of the benefits derived from such a powerful manufacturing organization as that which is responsible for the Lexington."

OIL SUPPLY IS LIMITED.

That at the present rate of consumption, the time is not far distant when the visible supply of crude oil will be exhausted, and that, in a great measure, the world must look to the supply to be extracted from shale rock, of which there is an almost inexhaustible supply in Colorado and Utah, was the important statement made last Tuesday by F. E. Moskovics, vice-president and general manager of the Nordyke & Marmon Company, at a luncheon given in his honor at the Los Angeles Athletic Club by Al G. Faulkner, State Marmon distributor.

"Geologists, who have the ground well mapped, place the visible supply of crude oil at about 14,000,000,000 barrels. When I say visible, I mean producing wells and fields that are subject to more development. One-third of this supply is located in the United States, another third in the Mexico field and the remaining third in other parts of the world. Right now this country is using annually in excess of production about 10,000,000 barrels, so one may almost count on his fingers when the total supply will be exhausted," he impressively stated.

"However, we need have no worry in regard to the fuel situation, for the Bureau of Mines, by thorough research work, has found a substitute for the crude that we now secure by drilling—and that is crude extracted from shale that is found in immense deposits in Colorado and Utah. So far, this cannot be extracted and placed on the market at retail at a figure less than 50 cents the gallon. The problem that faces the automotive engineer is the evolving of an engine that will make this new fuel propel a car two miles instead of one on the same amount of fuel. I may say that the leading lights in the engineering field are already at work on this problem.

"The problem is not one of carburetion—it is a matter of distribution of fuel in the cylinders, and the less the number of cylinders, the easier the task."

Two new models had appeared in England, said the Marmon official. One had a disappearing top and another had disappearing tires. He believed these were passing fancies and would soon go the way of fads. "Such ideas only increase the weight of a car, and weight that is not necessary is a thing the automobile manufacturer is learning is something to be avoided. It is for this reason that we employ aluminum so extensively in the manufacture of the Marmon."

In company with Al G. Faulkner, Moskovics left Tuesday night for San Francisco on a brief visit.

STANDARDIZE ON HIGH-GRADE TRUCK.

FIRMS WANT ASSURANCE OF CONSISTENT, EFFICIENT SERVICE.

One of the great lessons learned by large corporations is that the only efficient way to operate fleets of trucks is to standardize on some high quality truck which will render consistent and efficient service at all times. The decision was reached by corporations after spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to learn this fact.

Last week, the Union Oil Company received a shipment of five White trucks from the White Auto Company—which now gives them a total of 200 White trucks. The Union Oil Company purchased their first truck July, 1914 and have gradually added units until the fleet now numbers 200. This reorder plan of standardization on fleet equipment is based on cost and operative records which they carefully keep of their trucks.

TWENTY MONTHS WITHOUT REPAIRS.

A truly wonderful experience is that of the Los Angeles Paste Company, according to Mr. Conger, manager. He says in part. "We have operated our Olson unit for the past twenty months without any repairs whatever. Our business requires a speedy truck and one capable of carrying a ton load, both features we found embodied in the Olson unit to a remarkable degree. To say we are satisfied is a mild expression." The L. F. Krekeler Motors Company, Pacific Coast distributers for the Olson unit say this is not an unusual experience for Olson users.

BIGGEST MONTH OF SALES.

The best indication of an early shortage in quality motor cars is the heavy demand throughout the country. In California more high-priced cars are being sold than ever before, the month of February being the biggest month for retail sales in the history of the Don Lee Cadillac business in California. One hundred and eighteen Cadillac eights were sold at retail by the Don Lee branches and fifty-nine through the Cadillac dealers in other parts of the State.

Cadillac business for the twenty-five working days in February totaled $750,000. "Such a month's business is most gratifying to us," said Manager J. E. Brown of the Don Lee Los Angeles interests. "It is a proof of the prosperity of the State and the public's faith in our product.

"For several years the people have been denying themselves motor cars. The reason for this denial has passed and the overworked cars are being replaced by modern machines. The demand is overwhelmingly for touring cars. This type will always be the most popular car in California. It seats seven and with the modern equipment of side curtains can be easily inclosed for stormy weather.

"The great demand for Cadillacs we feel is a tribute to the car, which can be attributed to a certain extent to the action of the government in designating the Cadillac as the standard seven-passenger car of the United States Army. Many sales have been made to soldiers back from France. These men have seen the Cadillacs in action on the battlefields and are acting accordingly."

LIKENED UNTO MARCO POLO.

Likening every new car model sent from the salesroom floor to a modern Marco Polo, a living mechanism bent on adventures, and bound to have 'em, the stories of the cars sold by the Troy Motor Sales Company will make interesting reading when secured and compiled.

Just as Marco Polo went forth to see what he could find in the little-known realms of the East, so do new cars go out into the realms of the highways of today points out Chase Garfield, sales manager, and some of the stories brought back by them are worth recording.

One will roll away all bright and shiny in May, and come hurtling back next November, with its shiny sides scratched and strange marks on the radiator, telling mutely of a hand-to-hand struggle with mesquite and sagebrush, of desert sand and rocky hills—but with its proud Nash heart beating as strong as ever, and only wanting a "currying down" to be ready for another palpitating disappearance somewhere over the horizon.

"With the Nash service, the owners most always drive at once to our Eleventh and Figueroa-street headquarters when they return from trips, and then the appearance of the car speaks for itself," says Garfield. "We know what adventures it has had, and almost in what part of Southern California or the East it has toured.

"A car having had rough treatment fairly shouts the fact, while another modestly announces that it has done very well with its new master. They are always ready for more. One car comes in and tells of its adventures while sign-posting with the Automobile Club of Southern California, another of a trip to Omaha, and so it goes. We are going to save these stories, and some day we'll have a book worth reading."

THE RUNNING GEAR.

It has often been remarked that the average car owner knows too much about the motor and that this knowledge tends to make him forget and neglect the clutch, gear set and the rest of the power transmission system. Certain it is that universals, brakes, wheel bearings and many other not easily accessible parts are generally forgotten until something goes wrong with them. The owner does not wait for a bearing cap to fall off before he fills the crank case with oil, and similarly he should not wait until there is play in the universals before he gives it a supply of grease and graphite. It is difficult to keep the universals well lubricated, even when the housing is periodically filled. Similarly there will be no bucking due to end play in the propeller shaft assembly or clutch if the parts are properly lubricated and kept so from the start. Give a weekly oiling to the joints in the braking system from pedal to bands; repack the wheel bearings four or five times a year, after washing out the bearings with kerosene. Finally keep your eyes open for special lubricating hints and try them all, so the transmission system will run just as sweetly after continued use as the engine does.

TRAIL NEEDS ATTENTION.

Arizona's Apache Trail from Globe to Phoenix is a wonderful road from a scenic standpoint, but is sadly in need of a good deal of work to improve it, according to Claude A. Finley, well-known Canadian architect and Rotarian of Sault Ste. Marie, who was a visitor in Los Angeles last week. While in the city he called at the Los Angeles branch of the J. W. Leavitt Company to tell L. V. Starr of his Oldsmobile stage trip over the famous Arizona road.

"If Arizona passes the proposed road bond issue, certainly some of it should be spent on the Apache Trail," declared Finley. "Your impression of the road when you first start out from Globe is a decidedly favorable one, for it is a perfect concrete highway for a few miles between Globe and Miami. For the next hundred miles, however, it is anything but a boulevard.

"We made the trip by Wes Hill's stage line. Hill is using a fleet of six Oldsmobile eights, and I assure you that I have never seen anything like the service that those cars are called upon to undergo. They are loaded heavily with passengers and luggage, and the miles upon miles of steep grades and rough roads make the trip the severest that I have ever seen as a regular auto stage route. Hill formerly used a fleet of much heavier and more costly cars, but the Oldsmobile eights proved themselves better able to stand up under the punishment of the road.

"The Roosevelt Dam lacks forty or fifty feet of being full now, owing to the lack of rain during the past year. We were told, however, that the big dam holds sufficient water to supply the land it irrigates, although no rain fell, for three years, so there is not the slightest worry over the present stage of low water.

"The road from the dam down the Salt River Canyon was blasted from the solid rock of the mountain side for much of the way. From lack of repair, the road surfacing has largely disappeared, and the road is tough and rocky beyond description. The scenery from such points as Fish Creek grade is marvelous, but Arizona should, by all means, appropriate money to put the road in better shape."

USE THREE-FOURTHS OF ALL RUBBER.

The total cultivated rubber producing acreage of the world is now about 2,000,000, of which 1,600,000, or 80 per cent., is controlled by Great Britain. Yet the United States uses three-fourths of the world's output of crude rubber. The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Akron, O., owns its own rubber plantations in Sumatra, where 20,000 acres of former jungle land are now given over to rubber cultivation. This company uses about 10 per cent. of the world's supply—as much as the Central Powers used before the war.

AMONG THE FANS.

In the annual team match between the Boston versus New England players, which is always held on Washington's Birthday, the Boston players were victorious by the score of 109 to 89, and 53 draws.

Mr. Lannin then offered a $25 prize, which sixteen players competed for in a knockout tournament. This was won by H. Morrall. Each sitting was four games, and if the players were tied at that time, one of them eliminated by ballot. Kehoe, W. Townsend, Barnes, Lawson and Hanson were all eliminated in this manner.

In two special consolation matches, J. B. Hanson won from C. Lawson, 1 to 0 and 3 draws, and Sam Levine lost to W. Holden by the same score.

Simon S. Crum put on his usual exhibition of 3-8 cross simultaneous play against fifteen boards, winning fourteen and drawing the other game.

A letter from A. Jordan, which was written on his return trip from St. Petersburg, Fla., states that he has played 466 games on the trip, winning 386, and the rest drawn. He also states there is some talk of trying to arrange another Banks-Jordan match, to be played in St. Petersburg next winter.

J. R. Hanson won his subscription match from H. Morrall by the score of 8 to 0 and 11 draws.

CHESS.

R. A. Gurley sends the following report of the San Francisco Chess tournament:

Times Chess Editor: The chess contest of the Mechanics' Institute has come and gone and with its finality many sighs of relief, that were heart-penetrating, have ceased and regularity of respiration marks the hitherto agitated "masters" of the board. As an onlooker, we concluded we would not withstand the heart pangs witnessed even for the two beautiful medals, the awards of the highest merit. We are getting senile and do not seek heart palpitations at our age. The tally sheet showed several "possibilities" up to the eleventh hour, hence the restless nights and days of pang, clearly manifest and indelibly written on the phys of a few.

Bernardo Smith, a plain, quiet and ostentatious disciple of Chessdom, finally captured the cob, entitling him to another of the institute's artistic gold medals, emblematic of the game. This medal is given annually through the generosity of the board of governors of the Institute, together with a second medal not far inferior to the highest award. Our live and nimble secretary, John H. Wood, secretary over the whole ten stories of the Institute (that takes in the roof) is even alert for the good and welfare of his heterogeneous family, numbering over 4000, hailing from all quarters of the globe, and composed of the brains and deep thinkers of this cosmopolitan city. All kinds of language is here spoken, except the diatribes of the Hun, this having, apparently, ceased of late, and only the wholesome dialects indulged in. Of course that spoken by the "Native Sons and Daughters" stands paramount; so said. The "small and diminutive" sons and daughters of the old empire, the Domonion, Bay, Wolverine and other "insignificant nativities" count for naught—by some natives—gosh!

Without our amiable and progressive secretary and his new and persevering aide-de-camp, O. G. Jones, we fear that the chess, checker and card element of the Institute would be lulled into a lethargic sleep, as in the long and distant past. Those sad and vexatious days are now gone and we already feel the quickening pulse of these workers in the vineyard, who make a first-class running team worthy of the emulation of other club governors, who are so often nothing but a pack of drones—sleepy and lazy. It was of such to whom old King Solomon referred when he wrote: "Go to the ant thou sluggard, etc."

Let it be said en passant that success or nonsuccess of clubs, societies, associations, or otherwise, depends on the actions of the governing forces that control their affairs. The examples of the above truism is evident all over the land. Those which have a plethoric treasury fund, at all times, are those who cater to the demands of the members to a reasonable degree; while those who see their doors closed and the Sheriff's hammer heard, are invariably the result of the drones making up the boards, the governors, or trustees, or what not. Just a hint to the clubs that are on the "ragged edge of despair," that's all. Happily, our Institute has the right kind of timber in it—its foundation is well laid and the walls are of adamantine, that will withstand the thrills of the next earthquake. Its membership has now reached the 4500 mark and still augmenting. Our southern sister city might send a delegate here to learn the art of building up a large and successful association, composed of deep thinkers, readers, and adepts to all kinds of innocent games, to a profitable end. The chess and checker element can muster an army of 250 to 300 strong at any call of the bugle, but few cities being able to eclipse the record. Boston the notable exception.

We have digressed—let us to the chess contest: This "plain man of the people," Bernardo Smith, also won the trophy for the 1917 contest, and, like the present one, it was of such a close nature and so excruciatingly exacting up to the last ringing of the gong, that he and E. J. Clarke, a two-times winner of the trophy, were compelled to settle the final outcome over a midnight lamp in a little, diminutive restaurant, where friends of each repaired to witness the last gasps. The tourney had a time limit attached to it and this game "must be finished that night" to determine supremacy. Smith came under the wire by half a nose, Clarke bumping him hard at every stride and jump of his horses, elephants and royal queen, etc.

In 1918 contest waxed just as hot up to the last moment—when Smith finally heard the crier yelp, "Smith has won the contest." One could note the flush and suffusion on his cheeks disappearing, a more regular pulse, and his stride about the room had become actually normal. Heart palpitation had ceased, so the members mounted him on a pedestal for a speech, which he had previously prepared, which read: "Fellow members of the Kings and Queens Bench, Comrades of the Palantine Council," but Smith got no further—he was drowned in vociferous applause and he "squatted." Smith really had a fine oration to deliver on Evans gambits, Philador's Defense, "Smith's Grand Coups" and "The Way to Win at Chess," all of his own authorship, which was lost through the thunderous greeting he received. Too bad! George Hallwegen was the warrior back of the gun that distressed Smith far into his vitals. George went into the contest with a few billion "flu" germs sticking about his wasting anatomy—his record was but ordinary until he had dispensed with those in his brain and nobody gave him a serious thought in the early stages of the scrap.

Let it be said that Hallwegen is ever a dangerous and formidable foe to encounter at the chess table (he also is at other "games"—just "cross" him once, and watch results.) When he had shaken the "fluy" and "fluid" germs from out his cranium he made Smith so uncomfortable that the latter wondered if life is really worth the living. He beat Smith in the two contest game played—he skinned them all in the last days, and had it not been for his bad beginning the trophy would probably adorn the lapel of his coat soon. He has come in as second man in more contests of the Institute than any other member and his percentage of total winnings are as high as any, but there appears to be always a something why he doesn't crawl to the top round and secure the grand prix, instead of the second emblem. We predict he will do this at the next opportunity. At is was, he just nosed Bergman out of second place by a half point, and was beaten for first place by Smith just that same half point.

After the champion was proclaimed, he gave an exhibition of simultaneous play of 18 tables, composed of the best skill in the club. He won 13, lost 5. He recently played 24 tables, simultaneously, against the Musicians' Club, winning 23 and losing 1, a fine exposition of play on his part.

The chess element of the Institute (or the majority of them) will not concede that Smith is superior to Hallwegan in play—they state that George is beset by an evil star that loses its peerless light whenever a chess contest comes on. On the contrary, these prognosticators and wiseacres say: "Smith is filled with good luck, etc." From what I have observed, I think he is filled with excellent chess strategy, deep, subtle and aggressive, which cobs the gold. There is such a thing as luck, but it rarely runs to games of deep, crafty and consummate skill, except through inadvertence of the opposing player—the best skill is usually the winning card. From the appended score interested chessists can draw conclusions of the respective skill of players for past few years:

c—Smith and Hallwegan tied for third place—Smith, by some process unknown, captured the place, relegating Hallvegan to fourth.

d—Smith now wears full regimentals. Hallwegan not in this contest.

Maxwell
—a car of rare charm and—able

YOUR first impression of this present day Maxwell as it passes you on the street is one of decided beauty.

Your first ride in it, whether at the wheel or in the tonneau, tells you of its rare charm.

But after six months you find a new admiration for the Maxwell. You find it shuns the repair shop, that it runs and runs and runs and never stops running.

Then after a year is past you develop an enthusiasm for it that dictionary words don't seem to fully describe.

And then after you have had it for more than the average life of a motor car and you find it far better than even the Maxwell salesman said it was you search for the reason.

This is what you find:

For 5 years Maxwell cars have been built on the single chassis plan. To date 300,000 have been turned out on this plan. Each car better than the other. Each one better looking than the other.

There have been more than 1000 refinements in the Maxwell, but never once have the Maxwell executives swerved from the original program.

You conclude that reliability was designed "into" the car and built "into" it, and that a policy of 300,000-all-alike is the soundest kind of reason for writing your check for a present day Maxwell.

Some day you may be saying that about your battery.

Of course you'll believe it.

Yet your battery may have been getting nearer and nearer to the failing point every day on account of trouble that you could have headed off weeks ago if you had only known.

You may have let the water get low.

You may have used more current than has been replaced.

You may have let a connection work loose.

But whatever you did, the weakness would have been uncovered by an inspection and a simple hydrometer test.

If you haven't a hydrometer and have never inspected your battery or made a test, come in and let us explain.

It is significant that practically every buyer of Nelson cars is an automobile owner of long experience.

Some have owned cheaper cars, some have owned far more expensive cars in the past, but all of them have learned to appreciate the qualities of economy and comfort.

First Conference Track Event is Very Close.

MEET DECIDED BY FRACTION.

Pomona Wins Track Event by Third of Point.

Yount of Redlands Glittering Star of the Day.

Walks Away with Three Firsts and Three Seconds.

Just one-third of a point decided the first conference track meet of the season between Pomona College and Redlands University, the former squad being returned victorious. The ultimate score was, Pomona, 65 2-3; Redlands, 65 1-3.

The initial meet of the season was staged on the Sage Hens' cinder path at Claremont with the shot put event, which was won by Goodale of Pomona, deciding the contest.

"Wild" Bill Yount of Redlands University was the big star of the day. Yount walked away with three firsts and as many seconds and polished off his day's work by running the last lap of the relay, which went to the losing squad. On the whole the meet was very much of a success and the times of the sprints and distances in the weight-heaving events were more than passable. Kilby of Redlands was in old-time form and stepped off the 440-yard dash in the good time of 54 4-5 seconds. Chaney of Pomona also gave a good account of himself by winning the century and furlong in exceptionally fast time.

The results follow:

100-yard dash: Won by Chaney (P.,) Cook (R.) second, Kilby (R.) third. Time 10s. flat.

220-yard dash: Won by Chaney (P.,) Ford (R.) second, Cook (R.) third. Time 22s. flat.

440-yard run: Won by Kilby (R.,) Zackstrand (P.) second, Olmstead (P.) third. Time 54 4-5s.

880-yard run: Won by Tain (P.,) Loper (R.) second, Perry (P.) third. Time 2m. 6 4-5s.

Mile run: Won by Dewey (P.,) Humeston (P.) second, Bell (R.) third. Time 4m. 54s.

Two-mile run: Won by Humeston (P.,) Dewey (P.) second, Stewart (R.) third. Time 11m. 17 2-5s.

120 high hurdles: Won by Yount (R.,) Draper (R.) second, Crosswhite (P.) third. Time 16 2-5s.

Low hurdles: Won by Yount (R.,) Kilby (R.) second, Draper (R.) third. Time 26 1-5s.

Hammer throw: Won by Elliott (P.,) Dye (R.) second, Thompson (P.) third. Distance 113ft. 2in.

Discus throw: Won by Timkham (R.,) Elliott (P.) second, Yount (R.) third. Distance 104ft. 5in.

Shot put: Won by Goodale (P.,) Yount (R.) second, Rich (P.) third. Distance 38ft. 1in.

High jump: Won by Draper (R.,) Yount (R.) second, Clubb (P.,) Zenedrink (P.) tied for third. Hight 5ft. 7½in.

Pole vault: Reeves (P.,) Maynard (P.,) tied for first place; Cowell (R.) third. Height 10ft. 5½in.

SURPRISED AT NEWS REPORT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 8.—District Forester Coert du Bois has noted with surprise in every newspaper report of the Merced-El Portal highway meeting at Fresno last Friday that some enthusiast made, without authorization, an offer of $250,000 co-operative road funds from the United States forest service.

The district forester is quoted as saying that, while the Merced-El Portal highway would doubtless be of benefit to autoists throughout the State, the national forest section of the Federal Aid Act did not contemplate co-operation on projects of this type. Even had co-operation in such projects been contemplated, it would be impossible to find funds for the Merced-El Portal highway, since meritorious roads already on the forest service lists total in cost more than eight times the amount of Federal aid funds available.

FORMER MANAGER OF FITZ IS DEAD

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 8.—Martin Julian, who managed and seconded his brother-in-law, the late Bob Fitzsimmons, when he won the heavyweight championship from James J. Corbett at Carson City twenty-two years ago, died at his home in Brooklyn yesterday after a brief illness. Julian was connected with theatrical enterprises for over thirty years and was credited with being among the first persons to have had moving pictures taken of prize ring contests.

Earlier in the day Richards captured his fourth and semi-final round matches by defeating Andrew Morgan and A. D. Whiting, respectively.

MANY ANGELS SIGN CONTRACTS

Morley Hands the Joyful News to the Papers.

Deal with Boston for Pertica Seems to be Off.

Hodges has Souvenirs from No Man's League

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

The Los Angeles club landed beaucoup assorted talent yesterday, which is French for much.

If we are going to carry out the high ideals of President Wilson and Bill Lange and have a League of Nations, we might as well begin dashing a little foreign language over the sporting pages.

So many players were at the Angel headquarters to sign up that it looked like Wade Killefer was circulating a petition for a primary election when he passed out the contracts.

The men signing were:

Bill Petrica, pitcher, of last season's team; "Arizona" Scott, a pure, full-blooded Indian first baseman from Phoenix; "Red" Hodges, a catcher and outfielder from the South Atlantic League; Cooney Salazar, infielder, from the Submarine Base, and Fred Haney, outfielder, a local semi-pro.

Killefer, as manager of the club, signed the men. It was Jim Morley's business as business manager to announce the event to the newspapers, and he did so with neatness and dispatch. Jim is quick on the trigger when it comes to passing out the "info." Yesterday was his busiest day. He did more demimagnating than at any time since assuming the position with its responsibilities of passing out strong cigars, schedule scanning, etc.

He also made a little speech over the phone that listened good.

"The signing of Pertica means that the deal with Boston is off temporarily, at least," he said. "Failure of the Red Sox to offer us players which would strengthen the Angels is responsible for this. It isn't a question of money. We don't want to stand in Pertica's way, but if we let him go we must get something good in return. With us, it is the Angels and the Los Angeles fans first. Of course, if Boston comes through later with the men we want, we will let the boy go up.

"I regard Pertica as the most promising young pitcher that ever broke into the Coast League, and as you know, that statement covers a pretty long period. Personally, I think it would be better for him if he remained on the Coast another year." Fair enough.

Scott is no phoney Indian. And he is as large as he is genuine. He has the rich copper complexion of the regular red man and is guaranteed not to fade. His forefathers resided in this country before the Scandinavians came over and took it away from them the first time. Scott wasn't the last name of these forefathers. While the tribe was treading down the corridors of time the family name got accidentally torn off and was swallowed up in oblivion. Posterity then assumed the name of Scott, which didn't happen to be copywrighted.

Hodges only recently returned from France, where he served thirteen months. When not fighting he was catching for a team over there. He comes back with a number of medals and busted fingers, and as a result should be a popular idol. It is not every day in the week that the fans get to see a popular idol squatting on his haunches and picking the hot ones off the bat.

Not to be put in the shade when it comes to signing players on Saturday afternoon, Bill Essick secured the signature of Jess Buckles to a Tiger contract. Just at present Buckles hails from La Verne. Some years ago he had a tryout with the Tigers, and later played an engagement with the Cubs. Jess is large and rangy, with a lot of stuff, but, like most southpaws, is prone at times to be wild. However, Essick ought to be able to tame him with the aid of his piano.

Jazz music will be played to speed the Vernon pitchers up, and gospel hymns to give them hope and faith when they appear to be wobbling. Occasionally the congregation may be asked to arise and sing "Throw Out the Life Line."

Charley Reilly was observed out at the park purchasing a bunch of tickets from Sam Grant for the Matt Stanley benefit this afternoon.

Essick has arranged two preliminary games for the Tigers. These will be played at Vernon against Bill Goodman's crack club next Saturday and Sunday.

Pete Daley phoned Essick yesterday that he can no longer be counted a Tiger asset. The popular outfielder declares that he is through. Pete told me this ten days ago, and yesterday he appears to have made it official. He has gone into the grocery business. Daley, who made his start on the sandlots of Los Angeles, has been in the game a long time, but had not slowed up appreciably, and I am told that he played good ball last season.

Sam Stifel, one of our most rabid fans, is nursing a badly chewed finger. While Sam was angling in the Ventura River a large steelhead trout lunged out of the water and sunk its iron fangs into his finger. This was encouraging. Most men angle for hours without getting a bite. But Sam regarded it as the limit and quit.

The MAXWELL Will Break the World's Non-Stop Motor; "Sealed in High Gear," Twentyfour Hour, City Record

With its gears "sealed in high" a driver, his helper and one observer, at six o'clock Friday night, March 7, a Maxwell Stock Touring Car left Harold L. Arnold's Service Station at 1041 South Broadway.

This Maxwell will establish for Los Angeles a new World's Record in city driving on high gear.

Engineers know the greatest strain to which a motor car can be subjected, is to drive "sealed in high gear."—Nothing will so test the clutch, the transmission, drive shaft, differential, axles and motor—in short, every driving element of the car—as "sealed in high."

To start the load in high, even once, is a real accomplishment. To do so days and nights a thousand times, in traffic on Broadway, Spring, Seventh, and all through the most crowded streets of this crowded city, and carrying three men with extra gasoline, oil and supplies for the men's comfort, is a tremendous test by which the Maxwell will show the world the wonderful stamina, endurance and quality built into Maxwell Cars.

The drive is on—the Maxwell is after this record—watch it perform all through the city streets—watch the mileage grow each day until we have passed the world's present City Record now held by a Chicago car but destined to become nationally known as the "Maxwell-Los Angeles" twenty-four hour City Record "sealed in high gear."

Veterans of First Santa Monica Road Race Spin Yarns.

On the left we have Harris Hanshue with a new Anniversary Apperson eight which is the lineal descendant of the Apperson Jackrabbit in which he captured the first event ever held on the beach course. At the right is Ralph Hamlin, the man who picked out the Santa Monica course in 1909 and then stepped out and won the prize for the most consistent showing. He drove a six-cylinder, air-cooled Franklin, the daddy of the 1919 model, beside which he is standing.

SCENE OF MANY MOTOR BATTLES

Santa Monica Course Said to be Finest in World.

Records are Smashed at Almost Every Race.

Discovery Credited to Prominent Distributor.

Why the Santa Monica race course?

It is referred to often as the finest road course in the world and has been the scene of many stirring motor battles. Records go by the boards almost every time a race starts at Santa Monica.

The "discovery" of the course is attributable to Ralph Hamlin, distributor for Franklin and Scripps-Booth cars. Away back in 1909, the year of the first race, the Motor Car Dealers' Association of Los Angeles decided to put on some sort of a speed contest. The country was thrilled by the races on Long Island and over the Elgin course in Northern Indiana. The fever reached Los Angeles and a committee was named to promote such an event if a suitable course could be found.

Mr. Hamlin was a member of the committee to locate a course and he passed almost all of his spare time riding about the surrounding country. The other members of the committee did the same thing, with the result that two committeemen decided upon a route in San Fernando Valley. Mr. Hamlin did not like that proposed course. He said it was too long. He had seen the races at Elgin only a short time before and was impressed by the long delays between the passing time of the cars.

When the committee's report was presented advocating the San Fernando course, Mr. Hamlin objected to its adoption and asked for a few days of grace in which to look up a course he believed would be better, closer to the city, easier of access and shorter. He desired to submit a minority report. His request was granted and at the next meeting he appeared as an advocate of the Santa Monica course, which always previous to this year has been used, but for the coming event has been cut down slightly in length. The reason for reducing the course is to make the cars pass in front of the grand stand oftener. This is the same reason Mr. Hamlin presented in championing the original course.

Members of the Motor Car Dealers' Association were not satisfied by merely sponsoring a race in those days. They were anxious to compete. The contests were divided into events for light cars, heavy cars and free-for-all. Mr. Hamlin always was disposed to back up his faith in the Franklin car, for which he was representative even in those early days, as well as at the present time, and entered in the races.

Speed was not the sole determining factor, although to the winner went the choicest spoils, as the Chanslor & Lyon Company offered a cup for "consistent time." This was won by Mr. Hamlin in his Franklin and ever since has been retained as a part of his collection of trophies, which probably is the largest in the city possessed by any motor car dealers and earned by his own prowess at the wheel of the car he represents. The engraving on the cup reads as follows:

BIG HILL CLIMB OF STOCK CARS.

The San Bernardino Rim of the World hill climb will be held on April 24, according to announcement made yesterday by the San Bernardino Automobile Trades' Association under whose auspices the event will be held. The contest will be held over the Waterman Canyon grade and switchbacks, a course eight miles long with grades running all the way from 1 to 18 per cent. Plans at the present time are rather nebulous, but there will certainly be at least two events for California dealers and stock cars and in addition possibly a free-for-all. There will probably be a four-cylinder event and a six-cylinder and over event, but that is not definitely decided upon as yet. Entries will close April 21. The race will be conducted by a general committee, including Edward Reber, general chairman; Milton Standish, general secretary; Ross B. Deyoe, Contest Committee; Fred Lumbard, Rules Committee; Damon Cooley, Technical Committee, and Frank C. Bellman, Entertainment Committee.

VISITS SCENE OF VICTORY.

Winner of First Santa Monica Race is Retired.

Now Manager of Large Automobile Branch.

Looks Things Over with the Scrutiny of Yore.

Almost ever since that eventful day on which Harris Hanshue won the first Santa Monica race at an average speed of 64.5 miles an hour the triumph of the squat driver in his blue sweater bearing the insignia of Michigan University and his Apperson car has lived in the memory of the racing fans. The number of cylinders in racing cars has tripled and the champion Apperson of 1909 would be called a "truck" in modern speed parlance, but at that time 64.5 miles an hour for 202 miles was looked upon somewhat in the light of an eighth wonder of the world.

Harris M. Hanshue, winner of the original Santa Monica free-for-all, revisited the scene of his victory a few days ago. Today he is manager of the Los Angeles branch of Apperson Brothers' Automobile Company, and has retired from racing. He drove upon the recent occasion one of the new anniversary model cars made by the same firm that built his winner in 1909. With the same careful scrutiny that he would have shown in studying the course when he was to be among the competitors ten years ago, Hanshue looked things over.

The two turns (one at Eighth street and San Vicente boulevard and the other at Eighth and Nevada avenue, as he still thinks of Wilshire,) Hanshue said will be "bad" turns. At Eighth and San Vicente, a tree has been removed and a section of the curb taken out. This was done to widen the turn, which is a right angle. The Eighth and Wilshire turn also is a right angle and in making both of them it will be necessary for drivers to slow down to avert danger. There are street intersections on Eighth between San Vicente and Wilshire and there is a limit to the speed at which these can be crossed, because of the nature of repairs that have been made, in the opinion of the former road race expert.

But Hanshue anticipates the coming Santa Monica race will be the most interesting ever run there. The shorter course means cars will pass more frequently and it is to see the cars in action that the public patronizes races. Long waits between cars become irksome and although no records may be broken the contest is bound to be exciting and one well worth seeing. The experienced drivers of today know how to take right angle turns.

"In that first race, we had to go around the old eight-mile course twenty-four laps and it was not all paved and smooth as it is today," said Hanshue. "The most of Nevada avenue was merely a dirt road. The turn at the Soldiers' Home was soft gravel, and I used to shut off at the top of the grade and coast clear down around the turn. My car would do eighty miles an hour and there wasn't anything else in the race that could catch it. There was one car that we lapped every third circuit.

"Pit signals had not reached such a degree of perfection as they now are and the only way we had of knowing where we stood was by the way the crowd cheered. We got so much applause we knew we were leading or mighty close to it. We stationed a man over by the Soldiers' Home to indicate our position on a blackboard, but he misunderstood instructions and we never did locate him. But even the best arrangement would not have helped very much. The pits were not even on the course. In fact, they were a block away from the grand stand and if a car was in trouble it had to be driven on a back street to the pits or the mechanic had to hike in for assistance.

"One of the rules of the race was that only local drivers could compete. Some of the eastern factories sent out crack drivers for their cars, but they did not get to drive. Mention of that race would hardly be complete without calling attention to some of the other drivers. There was Bert Dingley, now coast representative for Nordyke and Marmon; Frank Siefert, now in business in Bakersfield; Murray Page, manager of the Chicago branch of the Locomobile; Frank Free, now service man for Ferguson & Keeler, distributers for the Apperson in the State of Arizona; Ralph Hamlin, who drove a Franklin and is the only one beside myself still associated with the make of car he drove then; Teddy Tetzlaff, in business here, and Bruno Seibel, who later rode with Oldfield in many races.

"The four-cylinder Apperson I drove pounded round and round the course with never a miss. We were doing what at that time was considered the impossible. It was not necessary to make a tire change. We stopped on the next to last lap to take on gasoline as a safety measure. We were about ten minutes ahead of the next car. There were no accidents, but one car collided with a palm tree at Ocean avenue and Nevada. The front gooseneck of the frame buried itself into the tree and had to be chopped out. The mark in the tree still can be seen.

"The people at those old-time races were wildly enthusiastic. They waved and cheered as each car passed. Of course, they knew personally all of the drivers and that made a big difference. It is the hope of the Dealers' Association that this coming race will succeed in arousing as much interest and enthusiasm as was the custom in the early days."

BRIDGE TO OPEN FOR TRAFFIC.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA BARBARA, March 8.—The State Highway bridge across Refugio Canyon, north of Goleta, will be open to traffic about April 1. The bridge will cost in the neighborhood of $20,000. The viaduct over Arroyo Hondo is progressing slowly, but it is expected the big structure will be completed before the summer auto traffic sets in. This bridge will eliminate a long loop and grade, descending into the arroyo, and will cost, in the neighborhood of $150,000. Reports from State highway work through this county indicate that the highway and bridges will be completed before summer.

SPEED KINGS TO PRACTICE.

a slim chance, as the car is far too fast for any road race course and is not equipped with brakes of sufficient power to slow the car down to take the turns. He will try the course this week and if he believes that he has a chance to make a credible showing, he will enter, otherwise he will put on an exhibition on the straightaways to show how the fastest car in the world looks when in action.

This year the entire course will be fenced in and all parking spaces and seats both inside and outside of the course will be for sale. There will be 700 soldiers and 300 police to guard the course and prevent the possibility of an accident. The tickets are on sale at the B. H. Dyas Company on West Seventh street and there has already been a terrific rush for the choice locations.

How fast the course is, nobody knows and nobody will know until the drivers have had two or three days in which to feel out the angles and get their cars properly tuned up. There are some who think that it is not as fast as the old course and there are a whole lot of others who think that it is faster. A few days of practice will tell.

Ford
THE UNIVERSAL CAR

There are more than 3,000,000 Ford cars in daily operation in America. This is a little better than half of all the motor cars in use in the country. There is a very potent and profitable reason in this why you should buy Ford cars for your business and for your personal use. It is a demonstrated fact that Ford cars have, in every line of human desire so far as motor cars are concerned, best satisfied their owners with the service given. They must be safe; they must be comfortable; they must be always reliable; they must be convenient and they must be economical, or they wouldn't be so tremendously popular with all classes of people. The big Ford Factory has not yet reached normal production, but the war is over, and it is getting back as fast as possible. We are getting a few cars in right along, and we will do the best possible to give you early delivery.

FINE country homes? We have 'em, second to none. Every year comes a few inquiries regarding sites for country homes, just few enough that the writer could hardly enter the real estate business as a specialist, but enough to know that newcomers are looking for country homes in the sunny Southland. Because of the personal nature of these inquiries they cannot be printed in this department and are answered by mail. But now comes one to which we can print an answer, evidently from a bona-fide resident hereabouts.

The letter asks: "As I believe you are as good a judge as anyone in the land, will you please state for the benefit of many readers what you consider the best country home site within a reasonable distance of Los Angeles?" In order to answer this question fairly we will have to select a place that is not for sale. If the writer had to choose while sitting here at the desk, one that would suit him, the choice would unhesitatingly be the W. A. Spinks place, above Duarte. We have many fine country home sites, but few that compare with this. Its elevation is considerable, its setting superb, and its views grand and extensive. It is believed Mr. Spinks does not object to the public driving through so long as they behave themselves. The writer knows that not all visitors do so.

A little further out, just this side of Glendora, lies the country home of the late Charles Silent, a fine natural site, well improved. As there is no easy way for the public to pass through, it is believed visitors are not allowed except by permission. Maj. J. B. Coulston, in ante-bellum days, told the writer that he had a place near Glendora, not yet improved: only a roadway built, that for natural beauty "beat 'em all." Not having visited it, as we were invited to do, we cannot pass judgment, but as the major's statements are generally accepted at par, we presume his site will make the others look like homesteads in the center of Death Valley. But let us harp a little of Glendora (and we haven't an acre or a friend in the place.) The town lies in the center of a great natural amphitheater of fine hillside and canyonside sites. We predict that in a few years Glendora will have to groom herself to keep pace with her surroundings.

We will ask the question: Where is the most beautiful part of Southern California? And we will partially answer it. Several years ago the writer was riding eastward from Los Angeles with H. E. Huntington, on a visit to his fine estate at San Marino. He said: "You have been here more years than I have, where is the most beautiful part of Southern California?" The writer answered: "We are nearly in the middle of it. It begins in La Canada Valley and reaches a few miles eastward from where we now are." Mr. Huntington answered: "Yes, on to Glendora. That foothill stretch is the finest piece of country in this world." Few know that this man of gigantic business affairs is an intense lover of nature. The world knows that he, with the aid of a staff of experts, is chasing rare and ancient books, but the writer has stood beside him on the heights at San Marino when he called attention to the golden rays of the setting sun as it tinted the hilltops and treetops and spoke of the deepening purple shadows cast by the hills and oak trees on his great estate. He stood for some minutes thus, "at the end of a perfect day," and as we turned to leave it he said: "I never get tired of that scene with its changes at the close of day, and I have looked at it many times." Surely such a person is competent to judge of the beauties presented by the various parts of our beloved Southland, and to this the writer adds his own opinion as before noted. "The foothill section of the San Gabriel Valley is the finest land the sun shines on." It is like Caesar and the north star. Others have their virtues, but there is only one "that unassailable holds its rank." And we can "a little show it."

Celletia Cruciata.

To those who love the curious in plant life is recommended the crucifix plant. Many call it a cactus; others, better posted, could easily mistake it for a spiny euphorbia. But when it flowers, and it flowers profusely, it is easily recognised by the elect as a member of the buckthorn family. It comes from Brazil and Uruguay, is hardy here, and loves light sandy soils. As a protective hedge against would-be trespassers it will live up to its name of crucifix plant. He who gets beyond the pale and becomes impaled on one of these may turn pale and also "bleed a pall."

Important Plant Families.

The grass family or Gramineae is of first importance to man for it contains all the grains or cereals, wheat, oats, barley, rice, etc., also the bamboos, which furnish man with food, clothes, tools and utensils of all kinds, and even dwelling houses. The crucifer family or Cruciferae gives us cabbage, cauliflower, turnip, mustard, radish, and a host of highly nitrogenous foods. The bean family or Leguminoseae furnishes us beans, peas, clover, alfalfa, the acacias, locust trees, the carob or St. John's bread, tamarind and other trees of great timber value, also gums and varnishes and much that is medicinal value, also perfumes, dyes, etc. All bear a true pod or legume containing beans (or peas.) On account of the great diversity of uses to which plants of this order are put it is of equal importance to man, with the grass or wheat family which contains no trees.

Hardiness of Plants.

In one of the Iceland geysers, where the water is hot enough to boil an egg in four minutes, a species of chard, an aquatic plant, grows in perfect health. A hot spring in the Island of Luzon with a temperature of 187 degrees has plants growing in it and also all around the edge. In the Island of Amsterdam there is a mud spring several degrees hotter than the boiling point in which a liverwort is growing. Many similar cases are known. As to hardiness to cold, the lichens upon which the reindeer of Lapland and other parts feed, grows a heavy forage crop where snow is almost perpetual, and depauperate, or dwarfed trees grow where it is fully as cold as it is anywhere on earth. Plants also grow in the darkest caves and mines and upon the floor of the ocean a thousand feet below the surface.

Life of Seeds.

Nearly a hundred years ago when some men in the State of Maine were digging a well, about forty miles from the ocean, they came across a strange layer of sand, with seeds in it, twenty feet below the surface. This was thrown to one side, the seeds grew and eventually the shrubs bore fruit, proving then to be the common beach plum. How long they had been there is a problem, but it is safe to predict a thousand years at least. There were plenty of witnesses to attest the truth of this record, though it was many years previous to the time that Maine became a prohibition State. Now they plant their plums down in the well on the end of a string so they may readily be pulled up when the owner becomes thirsty.

Tree Fuchsia.

Strange, is it not, that of the myriads who, before us passed the fuchsias through, in this country, not one has called them by their right name? The plant was named for one Fuchs, pronounced Fooks, and by no rule may we justify the license we take with the name. We might, however, change places with the c and the s, and we would have it.

But a fooksia by any other name would grow as well in Los Angeles, for all do as well as anywhere on earth even in their native country. The one we illustrate was growing in Los Angeles a dozen years ago, a sturdy small tree, though but a few years old. This is known as the lilac-flowered, or fuchsia arborescens; the latter name meaning tree-like. It flowers freely and is a good species for Southern California.

The Kaktus Kraze.

A quarter-century ago we were enjoying a periodic revival of the cactus craze and our illustration shows the writer in the midst of his spiny pets, on the nursery of Lyon and Cobbe, on what is now Sunset boulevard. The lands shown are now thickly covered with substantial residences, but at that time the Hollywood cars had not yet begun to pass over the old steam road back of the fence; the absence of trolley poles is quite noticeable. In spite of lack of transportation this garden was the mecca of all cactus fanciers and plants were shipped from here to all parts of the earth, for only the Americas have native cacti. Those shown in the immediate foreground are the rare "old man cactus," covered with long white hair-like spines. Thousands of cactus, of many species, grew in these beds.

Shrubs for Shade.

No shrub is better for full shade than the aucubas, the variegated form of which is known as gold-dust plant. The leaves burn badly under the heat of midsummer sun but the plants will live in the poorest of soils, thriving under trees whose surface roots would seem to use all available plant food. It is a very hardy plant and will do well in the most congested parts of cities. Few of the normal type, with green leaves, may be found, for the variegated forms are the more vigorous. They are rather common in local gardens yet we still have too few of them.

California Pitcher-plant.

In Northern California grows the finest pitcher-plant that is native to the Americas and we marvel that those with a water-garden or bog-garden do not grow it, since it is of easy culture. It grows well out-of-doors but must have a constant supply of moisture in a cool place since it inhabits mountain bogs. It, then, needs a spongy or boggy soil. This, one could get from the margin of any marsh or sluggish stream. It could be improved by mixing with chopped sphagnum moss. Though growing naturally in full sun, it is doubtful if this plant (Darlingtonia California) should be exposed to mid-day sun. Place it where the early morning sun may reach it and it will thrive. It is rare here, but like all good plants is not unusual in English gardens.

Brazilian Billbergias.

The Bill Bergia we introduce is a native of Brazil and one of the handsomest of a rather large family more or less prominent throughout the warmer parts of South America. He is first cousin to the luscious pineapple and all belong to a clan known as bromeliads, or natural order Bromeliaceae. The writer has one now in bloom that is known as Billbergia nutans. The plant strongly resembles a pineapple but from the center is thrown up a racemed spike of flowers on a red stem the size of a lead pencil out one to two feet high. From this red stem hang drooping tubular flowers with bright green petals margined with violet. Each cluster or raceme contains about eight flowers, both odd and showy. The plants are of easy growth, yet rare.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

Four World-beating American Dairy Cows.

BY G. E. GORDON.

TWO great cows have been in the limelight quite recently, and both of them fully deserve all the praise they are getting. Tilly Alcartra, the Holstein owned by A. W. Morris and Sons of Woodland, Cal., and the Jersey, Sophie's Agnes, owned by Ayerdale Farms of Rangor, Me., are the two cows referred to. Sophie nineteenth of Hood Farm, the grand-dam of Sophie's Agnes has also received an increased amount of publicity, due to her offsprings, creditable production as well as the fact that Tilly Alcartra is her strongest contender for long-distance honors.

Tilly Alcartra finished her sixth consecutive year's test on January 6, breaking the world's record for milk production. It was her biggest year, although she had twice before broken world's records. During the year's test she produced 33,424.8 pounds of milk and 1058.39 pounds of butter fat. Her milk record is more than 2000 pounds greater than that of any other Holstein cow for a year, while it exceeds the best year's record by a Guernsey by 9000 pounds and the best Jersey record by 12,000 pounds of milk. She averaged about ninety-one pounds of milk per day for the entire year, while her highest day's production was 119.8 pounds. Her year's production was actually sold wholesale for a total of $920, while, if it were figured at 15 cents per quart, which is close to the price the consumer has had to pay, would exceed $2500.

TILLY'S MENU CARD.

Tilly Alcartra showed marked economy of production in making this record. Although she consumed large amounts of roughage, she had only 6072 pounds of concentrates or an average of sixteen pounds per day for the year. As the concentrates made up the expensive part of the ration and the roughages are comparatively cheap, the record shows her wonderful efficiency. Her feed for the year consisted of: ground barley, ground oats, bran, soy bean meal, cottonseed meal and linseed meal as concentrates, besides great quantities of beets, of which she is very fond, beet pulp, ensilage, alfalfa hay and pasture for nine months of her test.

This feed record shows her ability to turn large amounts of roughage into milk, which is the real mark of economy in feeding the dairy cow. Tilly Alcartra's work is not demonstrated by the size nor economy of her latest world's record, btu to appreciate the significance of her real value, one must consider her work throughout her six lactation periods. Since she began milking as a two-year-old, she has constantly been under official or semi-official test. During her six lactation periods she has produced 156,776.1 pounds of milk or an average of 26,129.3 pounds per year, and a total of 4913.69 pounds of butter fat which makes a yearly average of 818.95 pounds of butter fat for the six years.

TWO GREAT JERSEYS.

Sophie's Agnes, a six-year-old Jersey, now owned by Ayerdale Farms, Bangor, Me., has just completed a yearly record of 1000.07 pounds of butter fat. This is the world's record for a Jersey and exceeds the former record of 999.1 pounds, held by Sophie Nineteenth, of Hood Farm, the grand-dam of the new record holder, by a little less than a pound. Thus we see that champions can be bred from champions. But this is not all, for the new champion also demonstrates what concentration and selection in breeding will do.

Sophie's Agnes holds another world's record, having been sold to her present owners by Hood Farms for the record price of $10,099. This was before she had finished her record and she was left at Hood Farm to complete it under the management of J. E. Dodge.

Hood Farm and its owner, C. I. Hood, have for some time been prominent as breeders of Jerseys. In 1904, some of the Hood Farm cows helped to make up the "St. Louis Exposition Jersey herd" which defeated all competition in the economic production of butter fat. Since that time Mr. Hood has consistently tested his herd and has succeeded in making many very enviable records.

During the year's test, Sophie's Agnes produced 16,212 pounds of milk and 1000.07 pounds of butter fat, the average percentage of butter fat being 6.17, which is exceptionally high.

Her feed was made up of wheat bran, corn meal, gluten feed, ground oats and Shumacher feed to a total of 6205 pounds, besides alfalfa hay, clover hay and beets.

The sire of Sophie's Agnes is Pogis 99th of Hood Farm. He has just qualified for an A.J.C.C. gold medal, and at nine years of age has thirty-five daughters in the Register of Merit with a total of forty-nine yearly records. He has six daughters, all under six years of age, with records of over 700 pounds of butter fat.

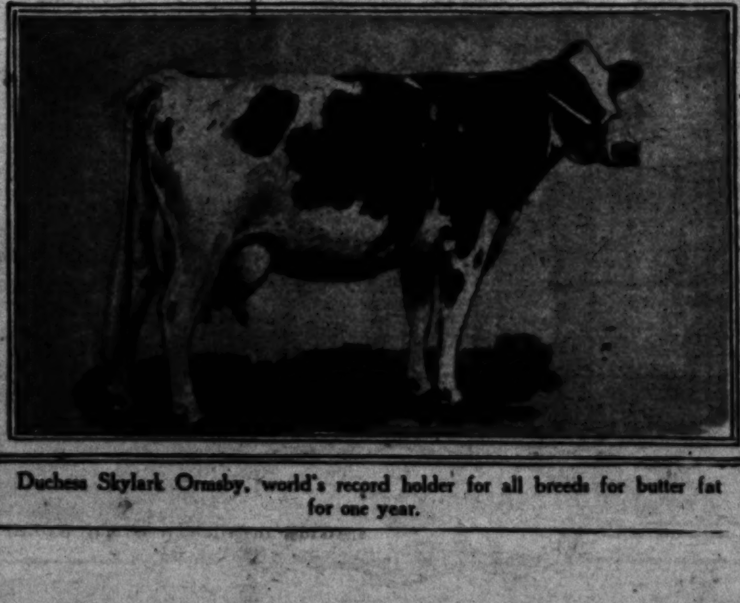
Pogis 99th, of Hood Farm, is the son of Sophie 19th of Hood Farm, probably the best known cow of the breed, if not of any breed. She held the former world's record of 999.1 pounds of butter fat and was, until Tilly Alcartra completed her recent test, the champion "long-distance" cow of any breed. She is herself a descendant of great individuals and shows that this great line of blood is breeding on, as she has done more than transmit equal qualities through her son. Some of her grand-daughters have better records than she did at the same age.

In seven year's work, Sophie 19th has produced 91,869 pounds of milk and 5280.4 pounds of butter fat. Her remarkable performance in production, and her persistence year after year, are what have made her famous.

Sophie's Agnes, the first Jersey to produce over 1000 pounds of butter fat in one year.

Sophie 19th of Hood Farm, former holder of the world's record for butter fat in one year and champion "long distance" cow. She is the grand-dam of the new world's record Jersey, Sophie's Agnes.

Tilly Alcartra, great California Holstein, holder world's record of 33,428.8 pounds milk in one year and new champion "long distance" cow in production of both milk and butter fat.



Duchess Skylark Ormsby, world's record holder for all breeds for butter fat for one year.

SOME COMPARISONS.

In making comparison between the three cows discussed, we find that on the yearly tests. Tilly Alcartra produced 33,424.8 pounds of milk and 1058.39 pounds of butter fat as against 16,212 pounds of milk and 1000.07 pounds of butter fat produced by Sophie's Agnes, giving Tilly Alcartra the advantage of more than twice as much milk and over fifty-eight pounds more butter fat. The remarkable thing about this is that Tilly Alcartra consumed only 6072 pounds of concentrates in making this record while Sophie's Agnes was fed 6205 pounds of concentrates, an excess of 123 pounds over Tilly Alcartra's ration. Tilly Alcartra, of course, consumed much more roughage than did Sophie's Agnes, but the concentrated feed is by far the most expensive and its use must be taken into careful consideration.

Tilly Alcartra achieved another victory over the Jerseys when she exceeded the long-distance records of Sopie 19th of Hood Farm. Sophie 19th has completed seven lactation periods while Tilly Alcartra has completed but six. During the seven years Sophie 19th has produced 91,869 pounds of milk and 5280.4 pounds of fat. During her first six lactation periods, which is the only fair basis of comparison with Tilly Alcartra's six periods, Sophie 19th produced 75,920.8 pounds of milk and 4432.6 pounds of butter fat as against 156,776.1 pounds of milk and 4913.68 pounds of butter fat for Tilly Alcartra. Thus we see that Tilly Alcartra produced more than twice as much milk and 481.08 pounds more of butter fat than did Sophie 19th in the same length of time, although Sophie 19th has 366.72 more pounds of butter fat to her credit at the present time than does Tilly Alcartra.

Another great cow that should be mentioned at this time is Duchess Skylark Ormsby, the Holstein cow that now holds the world's record for the production of butter fat for one year. She produced 1506.34 pounds of butter, which is equivalent to 1205.07 pounds of butter fat, from 27,761.07 pounds of milk, during the 365 days of her test. Her seven-day record is 34.35 pounds of butter from 588.1 pounds of milk.

These comparisons are not drawn to favor one cow or one breed over another, but merely to give a little further insight into the records of these wonderful cows. They are all great individuals and are deserving of a great deal of praise as they are winning their places in the "Bovine Halls of Fame."

RECORD SHIPMENTS.

Record-breaking receipts of cattle and hogs on the great markets are being readily absorbed, and prices remain generally firm, according to F. P. Allen, Los Angeles representative of the United States Bureau of Markets. This is due, in a large measure, he believes, to the influence of government buying for European relief.

In January, 1918, receipts of cattle were 297,400. Last month the figures were 420,648, with the prices nearly 20 per cent. greater than they were a year ago. Sheep receipts in January were 441,910. A year ago during the same month they were 289,333.

Chicago packers reported they were far ahead on pork orders and behind on filling on February 10. The hog receipts during January at the Chicago markets were 1,123,268; in January, 1918, they were 729,003. The bottom price on hogs the first week in February was $14.25 to $17. The week previous they were $11.75 to $15 per hundredweight.

It is believed that the "big three," the Food Administration, the packers and the swine producers, will again agree on maintenance of the price of $17.50 average for packers droves for the month of March. Export orders, which are increasing, are expected to stimulate the market after the buying for relief is over.

MORE SHEEP ON FARMS.

As a result of the sheep campaign begun by the University of California college of agriculture last fall, 2636 sheep were distributed in flocks of from ten to forty in nine counties. Many farmers not previously raising sheep bought animals. It is believed that at least 15,000 more sheep are on the farms of the State this year than last.

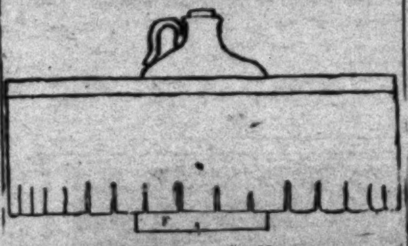
Rearing the Flocks of the Future.

HINTS ON GROWING CHICKS. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

LAST week we had a somewhat brief but none the less practical reference to the subject of artificial incubation; this week we will go a step further by discussing brooding and the rearing of chicks. It is almost a proverb, that the difficult period of a chicken's life are the first two or three months of its existence; indeed, it is pivotal, for in its successful solution depends the future prosperity of the business. Literally thousands of chicks perish annually for want of proper care, the major portion succumbing within the first six weeks after being born. It would be tedious to go into all the causes that lead to this sad condition of things; but primarily it is due to ignorance on the part of those who attempt to grow them, and especially is this true of the novice with his first hatch of day-olds from the professional hatchery. But for the fact that we have an annual crop of novices of considerable numerical strength, much of this loss might be avoided by the accumulation of knowledge and experience on the chick's requirements if it is ever to attain maturity. In spite of this, however, a few basic facts may be of some service even to one devoid of experience and knowledge in the lore and practice of poultry culture.

And right at the beginning let us again emphasize the importance of chicks being well born, for upon the stamina and vigor of the breeding birds will depend the prosperity of their offspring. If the ancestry is not right the chicks will naturally be more or less wrong, hence will dwindle even under good care. If the chicks are to give a good account of themselves as egg producers and breeders, it is all important that the parentage possess stamina and vigor. For this reason it is important that the youngsters that are to maintain flocks, be they large or small, must have the "stuff in 'em" to produce robust fowl.

Conceding that the chick has been well born, the next point is care and feeding. Ignorance on either point is sure to lead to negative results. Nature's way can here be observed to advantage. Chicks hatch at a temperature of 102 deg. Fahrenheit; when brooded by the hen, they are hovered nearly all the time for the first two or three days. Under artificial brooding these conditions are a pretty safe guide to follow. Buyers of young chicks should have brooding facilities provided to accommodate the number of chicks bargained for, warmed and regulated ready for their arrival. Care must be exercised to have the artificial hen catering correctly to the comfort of the babies. On this point a writer in The Feathered World well says that successful rearers never use a thermometer, but are guided by the chickens. If they are too cold they will give a miserable plaintive chirp; if too hot, will be restless and pant. The way they huddle together should show in a moment if anything is wrong. Chickens apparently always do well for the first week or ten days, then they began to droop; but the mischief has been done in the first few days, and remedies are of little use when the hatch has once gone wrong. Straw-chaff, wood chippings, hayseeds mixed with sand are good litters for chickens, but the material should not be allowed to get too dry; if it does, sprinkle occasionally with a little water; the litter should be about two inches deep.



A Home-made Hover.

Chicks should not be fed for about thirty-six hours after hatching. The yolk of the egg, which is absorbed by the chick, furnishes all the nourishment required during this time. At the start it is advisable to feed five times a day, dividing the day into equal periods and alternating a mash of soft feed, such as johnnycake, with a hard grain or scratch feed. Preparatory chick feeds (both mashes and grain mixtures) are now so widely used, and are to be so universally had of the supply houses, that home mixtures are almost obsolete. In all cases it is economy to use them. Soft feed should be given in troughs; the grain mixture in the litter. It is also well to remember that soft foods should be crumbly and not wet and sloppy. Care must also be exercised not to overfeed. Many recommend that the first feed be a mixture of bread crumbs with a hard boiled egg (one part egg to three parts bread crumbs;) rolled oats may be substituted for the bread crumbs. Sprinkle a little fine chicken grit on the feeding boards first. The first day the birds should be fed five times on the above food. The second day's feed should consist of egg and oats, with second and fifth meals of a good dry chick food. Then from this time to the third week they should have five feeds per day alternately of dry and soft feed, but always let the last feed be of dry chick food. After about three weeks the feeding can be reduced to three times per day. In the way of greenery any tender stuff such as chopped alfalfa, lettuce Swiss chard, etc., may be given daily, while granulated charcoal and fine grit should always be available. A constant supply of pure fresh water should be constantly before them in either shallow drinking vessels or small fountains, which should be so arranged as to prevent the chicks from getting into them.

In the rearing of chicks the one important things is to keep them "coming up" right along. This requires close application and keen observation. They must be physically comfortable, contented and occupied. Regularity in feeding is quite as important as the quality of food provided. Lice and mites must also be guarded against, particularly the head lice, which once lodged, unless exterminated, are apt to prove fatal. Examine the heads of the young birds, and if Mr. Louse is in evidence, grease the head with pure lard or sweet oil. Observe the birds closely for these pests; also be on the lookout for mites. Cleanliness is just as important as feeding. Overcrowding is another source of trouble to be guarded against. It is only by close attention to the needs of the growing youngsters that ultimate success is possible.

Eliminating Non-producers.

The importance of close culling is shown by a campaign just completed in Missouri under the direction of the Department of Agriculture, which resulted in a saving of $177,506 worth of grain by culling out the slacker hen in forty-five counties. The demonstrations were attended by 17,145 persons. A total of 7383 flocks were culled, representing 744,446 hens examined, which resulted in the elimination of 282,698 low-producing hens that otherwise would have been permitted to remain on the farms as consumers of grain. We wonder if all of our big poultry ranchers are alive to the importance of eliminating the light producers in their flocks?

Home-made Hover.

A simple home-made hover is easily had by taking a big stove jug that will hold boiling water and fitting upon the top of it as a collar a barrel head with a hole cut in the center big enough to let the shoulders of the jug hold up the barrel head. Tack some thick cloth around the edges of the barrel head deep enough to reach almost to the bottom of the jug, having slit the cloth up from the bottom a little way at intervals of two inches. This cloth fringe radiates the heat evenly with the barrel head, keeping the heat from going rapidly to the top of the box in which the hover is placed.

The writer has seen this hover in use by a family with day-old chicks. The caretaker had a covered run to push up to the hover box and in rainy, damp weather let them out through a small low door to this run, keeping them confined in the box during the night. In warm, dry weather they were let out upon the ground with a low wire net keeping them in a small corral. Of course the box containing the hover was watertight and the cover hinged so the jug could be easily lifted at night, the cool water thrown out and hot water put in. Only young chicks in cold weather need the water changed at night. In sunny days their run can be a new one each day. The covered run should have a floor and cloth on two sides to prevent drafts. Both the covered run and the hover box should be raised from the ground to avoid dampness.

Association Elects Officers.

At the annual meeting of the members of the Los Angeles Poultry Association the following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: H. S. G. McCartney, president; E. B. Martin, first vice-president; J. V. McConnell, second vice-president; W. H. Hocking, secretary and treasurer; John D. Mercer, auditor. Plans were formulated to make the next, the twenty-second annual show, larger and better than ever, and the dates were set for December 7 to 13, 1919. Judges W. S. Russell and W. M. Coats were again engaged, and negotiations are being made with a prominent eastern judge to assist them.

It is economical practice to mature and fatten fowls for early market, as usually the peak prices are paid for such pre-seasonal broilers and springers. Early hatching is a prerequisite for the production of market-topping cockerels. The early chicks are favored by a long, propitious growing season relatively free from dangers of disease and lice. They accomplish the most rapid gains and attain market conditions in record hens several weeks earlier, and gain the time.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION

Los Angeles Sunday Times

SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 9, 1919.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

America's Position.

TERRIBLY devastated or disorganized conditions in much of Europe and the long time that will elapse before normal conditions can be restored must be taken into consideration by the farmers of the United States in arriving at a basis of sound agricultural practice, says the United States Department of Agriculture in a circular, Crops and Live Stock Production in 1919, just issued from the office of the Secretary.

The world does not yet realize, it is stated, how stricken are the European countries and how long it will take them to recover to such an extent that they can make their former material contributions to the world's stock.

The European belligerents, exclusive of Turkey and the Balkan states, are estimated to have lost more than 7,000,000 men killed and more than 14,000,000 wounded, many of them permanently incapacitated, and a burden of great numbers of widows and orphans has been imposed. The destruction of property has been enormous. Industry has been disrupted. Over all of Central Europe there has been a tremendous social upheaval that will entail years of struggle before orderly processes are permanently restored. The war debt of all the belligerents will range from $175,000,000,000 to $200,000,000,000, a per capita debt running from $700 in Great Britain to $200 in Italy.

In comparison with this, it is pointed out, the United States has issued from the war untouched and unhampered and with its relative industrial, financial and social position stronger than it was five years ago. In view of these things the Department of Agriculture believes there is no need for alarm as to the ability of the United States to hold its due place in the trade of the world and especially as to the ability of agriculture to maintain its position.

The acreage of farm crops that will be planted in 1919 is problematical. The Department of Agriculture believes that, beyond doubt, the spirit of patriotism and general war conditions were responsible for the large acreage in 1918. The fact that the stability of prices for farm products will be more or less in doubt will influence the planting programme for 1919, it is thought.

It is pointed out, however, that the population of the United States has increased during the war, that European markets are opening up for American products, that a considerable demand from Europe for foodstuffs will continue for a year or more, and that, in view of these facts, American farms should maintain as high production as local economic conditions and sound individual farm practice will permit.

Plant a Garden.

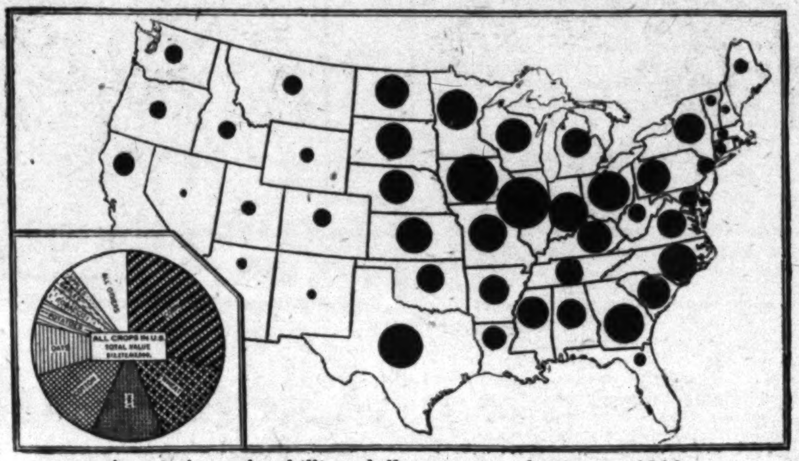
THERE are several good reasons why every family with a back yard or an adjoining vacant lot at its disposal should raise a garden. The patriotic reason still holds good notwithstanding that the war is over so far as the fighting is concerned. The civilian populations of the Allied nations in Europe did not become any the less hungry when peace was declared and these companions in arms must be helped with a food supply from our bounteous store until they have had an opportunity to get back on their own feet agriculturally. That means that the United States must continue to ship enormous quantities of nonperishable products overseas, and the more garden stuff raised in this country, the easier it will be for us to spare the meat and the grain for France, Italy, Belgium and England.

The home garden can be made an important factor in the reduction of food bills in the average family. They are worth all the more in this connection if the keeping of chickens or rabbits is combined with the vegetable raising. The true lover of nature will find a never-failing source of interest in bringing a successful garden into being. As a form of healthful exercise there is nothing to surpass digging in the earth with a spading fork or going after the weeds with a hoe. Seed men say this is going to be a great year for home gardening and it will be a grand good thing all around if it is.

Conserve Beet Seed.

THERE is a necessity for conserving the supply of sugar beet seed, according to advices from Washington. There appears to be a sufficient quantity for the planting of the 1919 crop, but the necessity for protecting the supply for 1920 is so great as to make imperative the strictest economy on the part of farmers in the sugar beet regions.

Thorough preparation of the seed bed is one of the essentials to conservation. This promotes uniform germination to such an extent that the old seeding rate of twenty pounds to the acre has been reduced, in many cases, to fifteen or even ten pounds, with good results.



America's twelve billion dollar crop production in 1918.

The black circles show the comparative value, on farms, of all crops produced last year by States. The large circle at the left compares the value of the crops.

Sounding Soldiers.

"HEY, there!" Do you want a home on the farm?

This is the unique title of a little booklet which the Secretary of the Interior, with the active co-operation of the war and navy departments, is sending to the various camps of the army, navy and marine corps throughout the country to ascertain the attitude of the men toward his plan for providing them with work and homes on reclaimed land.

The booklet is in the form of questions and answers which give a complete and concise description of the plan, and also has attached to it a post card questionnaire which the men are asked to fill out and mail to the department. Each man interested will be asked to state his name, home address, age, occupation before enlistment, whether he has ever worked on a farm, whether he is interested in the plan, what kind of farming he would like to follow, whether general, live stock, truck, or fruit, and whether he would be willing to take a job in his own State or anywhere in the United States if a job on one of these proposed reclamation projects is offered to him.

A tabulation of the replies will be presented to Congress in connection with Secretary Lane's request for an initial appropriation of $100,000,000 to begin construction on meritorious projects throughout the United States.

SALT RIVER ACREAGE.

It is reported by the University of Arizona that the Salt River project furnished water for 205,616 acres during the last growing season, the production of cotton, alfalfa, fruits and other crops being worth $18,000,000. It is estimated that over 75 per cent. of the water supplied to the farmers of the project was stored water from the Roosevelt dam.

COMMERCIAL FERTILIZERS AND THEIR USE IN CITRUS GROVES.

BY ROBERT W. HODGSON.

THERE is little need to tell citrus growers that their trees need fertilization. That fact has been recognized for years and is strikingly reflected in the hundreds of thousands of dollars annually expended by citrus orchardists for fertilizers of one kind or another. The Fruit Growers' Supply Company, a subsidiary organization of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, according to the last annual report, alone did a business of nearly $500,000 in fertilizers for exchange members in 1917-18, not to mention the many other concerns dealing in products of this nature. In nine cases out of ten, the citrus grower who is making a conspicuous success is the one who is consistently and adequately feeding his trees.

There is, however, considerable need for more exact information as to the relative values of the different classes of fertilizers for citrus trees as well as to the results to be obtained from the use of fertilizers of the same character but furnishing plant food elements from different sources. In a previous article the writer dealt with some of the difficulties which beset the path of the investigator seeking to unravel the intricate problems concerning the action of the fertilizers in the soil. While these inherent difficulties are many and baffling, nevertheless progress is being made all the while and we may reasonably expect that as time goes on our knowledge regarding this most important subject will be greatly extended, to the benefit not only of our trees, but of our purses as well. For there is not the slightest doubt but that in the imperfections of our knowledge as to their action in the soil as well as to lack of economical methods of handling and applying them, large amounts of fertilizers of considerable value are annually lost or wasted.

The writer feels very strongly, however, that a part of this loss and wastage could be prevented and orchardists in general be given a better idea of the action and relative values of fertilizers were what information we have already accumulated more widely disseminated among those interested. Hence this article. The greater part of the data used in preparing this discussion has its origin in the researches of Dr. C. B. Lipman and his associates of the University of California at Berkeley, and was published some years ago in the form of Bulletin 260 from the State Agricultural Experiment Station, now unfortunately out of print.

FORM IN WHICH USED.

A few words as to the ultimate form to which fertilizers must be reduced before being used by the plant, may not be out of place.

Since the most careful fertilizer experiments conducted with citrus trees in this State have failed to show any appreciable effects attending the use of the elements potassium and phosphorus, this discussion will be confined to the use of nitrogen-containing fertilizers. It is now generally agreed among soil scientists that the element nitrogen is largely if not exclusively taken up by plants in the form of nitrates. While certain plants have been shown to be able to use nitrogen in other forms, both inorganic as well as organic, and technically speaking, therefore, it is only possible to obtain accurate data regarding the relative availability of different forms of nitrogen by making extensive tests with each and every specious of agricultural plant, in a practical way this would appear quite superfluous since, under normal soil conditions, relatively little nitrogen is present in available form other than nitrates.

It is, of course, to be understood that a plant food element or compound is "available" for plant use only when it is in such form as to be soluble in the soil water. But how does the nitrogen in various fertilizers such as tankage, for instance, come to be water soluble? When applied, very little indeed is in such a form. What are the processes through which it passes and what are the main conditions influencing these transitions? These are questions the ability to answer which places the orchardist in a very much better position to intelligently select the kinds of fertilizers for his soil.

BACTERIA NECESSARY.

First and foremost, all the transition steps between the organic form and the ultimate nitrate, as taken up by the absorbing plant root, depend entirely upon the activity of certain soil bacteria. Were these bacteria absent the whole process would be at a standstill. Practically, of course, these bacteria are never entirely absent but their activity may be seriously impaired or cut down by unfavorable conditions existing in the soil. The most important of these unfavorable soil conditions are probably lack of sufficient aeration, presence of too much or too little moisture, and abnormally low or excessively high temperatures.

This cycle through which the nitrogen added to the soil in organic form passes until it is absorbed by the plant as nitrate is known as the process of nitrification. It really consists of a number of sub processes or stages finally resulting in the nitrate form. When organic matter is added to a soil it either decomposes by decay or putrefaction, depending upon the amount of oxygen present in the soil. In one case aerobic bacteria act upon it, in the other anaerobic. In both cases, however, sooner or later, most of the nitrogen radicals take the form of ammonia. This stage in the nitrogen cycle is called ammonification and is accomplished by a certain few specific bacteria. At this point other specific bacteria take up the work and the ammonia is converted to nitrous acid. Again another set of bacteria takes charge and the end product is nitric acid which usually is neutralized by union with some soil base to give a nitrate salt. The nitrogen is now available for plant use.

These processes take varying amounts of time to go through to completion, depending upon the character of the fertilizer used, the nature of the soil to which the fertilizer is applied as well as other factors. The important question from the standpoint of the grower is which source of organic matter gives the highest per cent. of the total nitrogen content reduced to nitrate form in the shortest time and with the least loss? It is with the answer to this question as applied to a large number of sources of organic nitrogen that the rest of this article will be devoted.

CROP PRODUCING POWER.

While the degree of ammonification can be considered as a measure of the degree of transformation of the nitrogen in the soil to available form, most investigators feel that the nitrification of a nitrogen containing fertizer constitutes the best test of its availability to plants. During the last few years a number of investigators have fairly well established the relationship between the nitrifying power of a soil and its crop producing power. Soils showing a high power to nitrify an organic fertilizer are found to be much higher in crop producing power than soils showing feebler powers of nitrification. And soils vary much with regard to ability to nitrify different kinds of organic fertilizers.

Thus there are soils which readily nitrify organic fertilizers high in nitrogen content, the so-called high grade fertilizers, but refuse to nitrify substances like bone meal, which contain relatively small amounts of nitrogen, and vice versa. The nitrifying power must be determined for every soil before one can know absolutely what form of fertilizer will give the best results for the money expended. This is especially true when it is known that certain soils when

THIS IS THE BEST WEEK FOR PLANTING.

More home garden crops may be planted during the coming week, probably, than during any other seven days in the year.

Are you righteously indignant over the cost of vegetables?

Have you a patch of soil available?

Are you willing to put in two or three hours of the rural kind of exercise each week in order to enjoy fresh garden produce for the table?

You know the answer. If it is a series of "Yeses," advance upon the bare back yard or vacant lot with your tools and seed. At this particular season of the year you will get the maximum help from atmospheric conditions.

Almost every garden plant in the calendar may be started now. In fact the only vegetables which may not be safely seeded this month are artichokes, cauliflower, okra and peppers. Grain sorghums are about the only grain crops which may not be planted with success at this time. All of these require the higher temperatures which occur during succeeding months. Seldom do damaging frosts visit Southern California after March 10, and tomato plants, cucumbers, muskmelons and other tender vegetables may be seeded with reasonable assurance that they will do well.

Here are some of the vegetables most often seen on American tables that may be seeded: Pole and bush beans, beets, cabbage, celery, sweet corn, cucumbers, egg plant, lettuce, muskmelon, watermelon, onion seed or sets, parsnips, peas, potatoes, pumpkin, radish, rhubarb, spinach, summer squash, tomatoes and turnips.

SOME GOOD "EXTRAS."

If you plan to add to your income by selling part of your garden produce this year it is good policy to plant an extra area to the following crops—sweet corn, tomatoes, lima beans and white and brown Kentucky wonder beans. Then, again, if you have any large surplus of vegetables, the several dehydrating plants now in operation or in course of construction may buy from you. Or you may trade your surplus to the corner grocer for products you do not raise.

Dig up the weeds in the space selected for the garden, and be sure to spade them under or gather them into a compost heap for future use. If you have not the time and feel that you have not the strength to turn over the soil to a depth of at least six inches, with a spade, there are many mechanical aids to this part of the gardening process which may be procured. Or hire a one-horse outfit to plow your garden area, if there is room for this operation.

Adobe soils, although rich in plant food, are not the best soils on which to grow garden unless the gardener is persistent in working it. A deep, moist, sandy loam is the best garden soil, unless it is deficient in organic matter, when fertilizers should be applied. If any stable manure is procurable, by all means spread it upon the soil before spading or plowing. Use chicken-droppings sparingly.

PREPARING THE GROUND.

After smoothing over the surface of the shaded or plowed area, first, having laid out your garden on paper, divide it into ridges, the height and breadth of which will depend largely on the kind of seed you are planting. Small vegetables, such as radishes, turnips, beets, onions, carrots, and lettuce, may be planted two rows to the ridge. Run the ridges lengthwise of your garden area. This will save space and time. Be sure and leave spaces for walks.

Here are the distances apart for hand cultivation of the principal vegetables: pole beans, 3 to 4 feet; bush beans, 1½ to 2 feet; table beets, 1 to 1½ feet; cabbage, 2½ feet; carrots, 1 to 2 feet; sweet corn, 3 to 4 feet; cucumbers (hills or ridges,) 4 feet; lettuce, 1½ to 2 feet; muskmelon (hills or ridges,) 4 to 6 feet; watermelons, 6 to 8 feet; onion seed or sets, 1½ to 2 feet; peas, 2½ to 3 feet; Irish potatoes, 2 to 3 feet; sweet potatoes, 3 to 5 feet; radishes, 1 to 1½ feet; spinach, 1½ to 2 feet; tomatoes, 4 to 5 feet; turnips, 1 to 2 feet. The distances apart vary somewhat with the season and soil, as does the depth for planting.

HIGH AVERAGE AT POLAND CHINA SALE.

HANFORD.—The growing importance of Hanford as a swine-breeding center was graphically shown in the recent dispersion sale held here at which seventy-three Poland Chinas were sold for an average of $165.80. The top price paid was $460. The day's transactions came to a total of $12,087, according to the sales book of Secretary Ross. Col. Ben A. Rhoades of Los Angeles officiated. According to ranchers who had stock consigned to the auction, the average and total for the sale set a new record for this State.

D. H. Gray of Armona was the man who paid the high price of the sale. The money was paid to W. Bernstein for King's Jumbo Lady 731962, a September yearling sow carrying a litter sired by Young Jumbo of the Haag & Son herd. Mr. Gray also purchased from the Bassett consignment two March gilts, May Orange and Model Daisy, paying $430 for the former and $355 for the latter Considerable interest was taken in the spirited bidding between ranchers of the Fresno district and Miss Tresie Patterson of the Laton High School Pig Club, who finally was successful in securing one of the prize gilts, for which she paid $270. Other pig club members from all parts of the valley were active bidders. The boys and girls had the benefit of the advice of R. E. Benton, the pig club leader of the county, as well as that of I. Thompson, pig expert of the university farm at Davis, and Fred Gates, considered one of the leading authorities of California.

Interest was taken at the banquet which was served by the pig club boys at the conclusion of the sale in the talk given by Oscar Demick of the Hanford schools, who told how he started three years ago with a club pig and now has twelve pure-bred gilts, three of which have been listed as prize winners. According to his statement he has "made a lot of money" and had "a lot of fun."

HOW TO DETECT AND TREAT SLOBBERS.

An expert rabbit breeder sends in the following observations on the symptoms and treatment of slobbers:

Symptoms: Flow of saliva-like fluid from the mouth. Cause: Indigestion. Prevalent among young stock where litters are too large. The young, failing to get nourishment from the overworked does, help themselves to food from the pen, and their stomachs are not strong enough to digest the mass.

Treatment: Keep the patient in a cool, well-ventilated hutch, but sheltered from draughts, cold winds or the direct rays of the sun. See that its bowels are kept open by a regular supply of green food. For a local application wash its mouth with alum and water every four hours, or rub a handful of powdered alum and salt, equal parts, well into the affected parts. Give half-teaspoonful doses of syrup of figs until the bowels move freely. Feed mash with half a teaspoon of condition powder to every four ounces. Give food which is easy to digest. See that the salt supply is regular. Ten drops of oil of juniper and sweet spirits of nitre mixed with the drinking water morning and evening is another good remedy for slobbers.

FUMIGATION HOUSES.

Fumigation houses, erected on the Mexican border by the United States Department of Agriculture to help prevent further introductions of the pink bollworm of cotton from Mexico, are substantially completed and will be placed in operation in a short time. These fumigation houses, some of which will take fifteen railway freight cars at one time, probably represent the largest fumigation operations ever undertaken. They are established at five different points from Brownsville to El Paso.

The proverb says "cleanliness is"—but it is somewhat musty. Observe good sanitation in houses and yards, in feeds and feeding, and trouble will correspondingly decrease.

The hen producing badly shaped eggs, or very small ones, is a fit subject for a fricassee or a roast.

Produce infertile eggs: They keep better. Fertile eggs are necessary for hatching only.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

YUCAIPA.—Hundreds of fruit trees are being received in the Yucaipa Valley now and J. B. Hundley, the horticultural inspector here, is kept busy inspecting the peach, pear and apple trees that have been shipped in from other States. Several hundred acres are being planted to deciduous fruits now and the trees are subjected to rigid inspection as failure to do so often results in a pest getting a start that costs the growers thousands of dollars to stamp out. The Dunlap ranch section, which was recently thrown on the market, is being planted largely to pear and peach trees and but few apple trees are being put out in that section. It is felt that apples will do better on the higher ground, round 2700 feet. Pears and peaches pay well and as they ripen early, reach the market at a season when the best price can be commanded. Part of the Dunlap ranch is not being planted, but will be used for truck lands. On the high benches of the valley apple trees are being planted and while there is no way of telling now just how much land will be set out this spring, it will probably be close to 1000 acres.

ASPARAGUS IS EARLY.

IMPERIAL.—The first Imperial Valley asparagus shipment this year came from the acreage of R. D. McPherrin, southwest of Imperial, and was made February 18, or four days earlier than last year, when the first crate went out on the 21st. The asparagus, besides being earlier, is also declared to be of a more excellent quality than last season. The following shipments have been made by Mr. McPherrin: Three crates on the 18th, three on the 20th, nine on the 22nd and fifteen on the 24th. Peck and Williams shipped their first crate on the 24th. As in former years, the "grass" is going to Chicago.

BIG MONEY SAVING.

SANTA ANA.—Efficiency of operation due to installation of modern equipment in the new packing-house of the Irvine Walnut Association enabled the delivery of nuts on cars at a cost of approximately ¾ of a cent a pound, or $15.95 a car, it is shown in the first report of the secretary. This cost included bags, bleaching, insurance, and all cost of handling nuts in the packing-house. The cost of culling was $1.85 a ton, or slightly more than 9 cents per 100 pounds. All officers of the association were re-elected, as follows: A. J. McFadden, president; W. G. Mitchell, vice-president; E. L. Tiede, secretary; James Irvine, W. G. Mitchell, Sherman Stevens, C. E. Utt, A. J. McFadden, directors.

PLAN BROOM FACTORY.

HOLTVILLE.—Such satisfactory results have been obtained from the experiments of H. M. Walling on the Robert Hayes ranch with broom corn, a carload of which went to Los Angeles recently, that the Holtville Commercial Club has pledged a thousand dollars for the erection of a broom factory here. The plowing, raising, harvesting and threshing of the Walling crop was all accomplished in ninety days.

ELEVATOR PLANNED.

CALIPATRIA.—Arrangements are being perfected here whereby the farmers will establish a big grain elevator with a capacity of 100,000 bushels. The object is greater economy in handling the grain as well as greater profit in marketing. The stock will practically all be owned by the farmers themselves. Economy features are the elimination of bags and their handling, and operating without the cost of insurance, which will not be needed since the elevator is to be of reinforced concrete and fireproof. The Davidson Construction Company is working out the details.

SEEK MELON ACREAGE.

PORTERVILLE.—D. R. Jamison, who is secretary of the Zante Citrus Fruit Association, heads a movement of the fruit growers of the Porterville district for development of a considerable acreage to melons this year. In the past there has been no commercial production of this crop in this district. Mr. Jamison, aided by the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, is endeavoring to secure agreements of the property owners for putting in at least 300 acres this season. Communication has been established with brokers, who have agreed to contract for the fruit at what appears to be a good price. At the same time the directors of the Chamber of Commerce have agreed to work with directors of canneries here for a material extension of the acreage devoted to deciduous fruits. It is pointed out by the cannery management that the local plants use three to four times as much fruit of this character as is produced here, making it ncessary to ship in a large proportion of the tonnage each year.

BANKS TO HELP CLUBS.

FRESNO.—Five of the largest banks of Fresno will co-operate in the plans for financing boys of the pig clubs to be established in the county, in the purchase of pure bred stock. The plans for the work were discussed in detail at a meeting of the Fresno Clearinghouse Association. E. E. Manheim of the Farmers' National Bank of Fresno, who was largely instrumental in the success of the movement, says that every encouragement is to be given to training the boys in the virtues of the production of pure bred stock. The value of the pig club work, he points out, will be in the forceful education of the elders which is bound to result from the class of animals shown in the pig club exhibits.

However, the bankers will not confine their efforts to encouragement of pig clubs. They are also to co-operate in the plans for a greater acreage of cotton, and the boys and girls of the agricultural classes of the High School are to be encouraged in all new crops which appear to have promise for this soil and climate. One of the newer industries, said to be particularly adapted to the alkali soils of this valley, largely unsuited to any other crop, is the date palm. W. R. Nutting, an authority on date culture, declares much of the subirrigated alkali lands of the west side district can virtually be reclaimed to other agricultural industry through planting to dates.

WANT TO KEEP BUREAU.

LA CANADA.—Although this section has been greatly favored in the way of pruning demonstrations conducted under the auspices of the farm bureau, having had several deciduous demonstrations in December and a vine pruning demonstration in January, the demand for a citrus pruning demonstration was so great that the last meeting took this form. Farm Adviser Hodgson put in an entire day, starting at 9:30 o'clock in the morning and finishing at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the time being devoted to a follow-up pruning on some orange and lemon trees pruned by him last summer. Two lemon trees, one young and the other bearing, on the place of C. F. Johnson were visited and found to be in good condition. Mr. Hodgson pruned them some more, explaining what he hoped to accomplish and also showing what had been the effects of the last pruning. On the place of Mr. Soright he did the same for an old orange tree. The afternoon was spent at the place of W. H. Bentley in pruning various kinds of deciduous trees, including peaches, nectarines, apples, plums and figs, and also olives. Some ninety persons attended the meeting at which resolutions were adopted and wire to Washington denouncing the proposed reduction in the farm adviser appropriation which, if passed, would automatically discontinue the farm bureau in Los Angeles county.

CITRUS FAIR PROJECTED.

VISALIA.—Committees under the direction of the Visalia Board of Trade will start work within a short time on a canvass of Tulare county to secure community and individual exhibits for the eighth annual Tulare County Citrus Fair which is to be held here early this fall. It is proposed to devote a considerable sum to prizes, and it is expected there will be a material extension of the premium lists as compared with the fairs in the past. Unofficially the directors of the publicity organization of Exeter, Lindsay, Porterville, Dinuba and other towns of the citrus district have promised their support to the project.

At the annual meeting of the Visalia Co-operative Creamery Association the following officers were chosen to serve for the ensuing year: S. T. Pennebaker, president; J. S. Allen, vice-president; E. F. Hart, secretary and M. S. Bettencourt and J. N. Hagler the remaining members of the board of directors. J. N. Beck, the manager of the organization, reported that the total receipts of the organization for the year were $361,299.78, of which practically all was for manufactured butter fat.

MAY PLANT MELONS.

EXETER.—Ranchers of this district have formed an unofficial association for the production of melons this season, the present prospects being that the total acreage in the district immediately about Exeter will be 300 acres. O. G. Brundage and Harry Tashjian are among the leaders of the plan. Several of the owners of the young orchards of this section will use melons as an intercrop with their trees.

BOOK-KEEPING FOR OWNERS OF FLOCKS.

Book-keeping for flock owners is growing in favor. It is up to the producer personally to keep accurate accounts in order to know whether his net return justifies the maintenance and gradual expanse of his business. All branches of farming are reaching a highly developed status which necessitates intensive and accurate record-keeping. Leaks and losses must be eliminated, or at least limited, and this can be best accomplished by the medium of the account book.

Systems of poultry accounting must be extremely simple, while they must not involve too much time. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends some such form of convenient record as is shown in the accompanying illustration. This simple account is confined to one page, so that every item may be seen at a glance. It involves a systematic account of the stock, the eggs laid and sold, amount received, fowls sold and amount received, cost of fowls added to the flock, quantity and cost of feed, eggs used for hatching and other purposes as well as the cost of hired labor and materials. The columns and spaces for expenses and receipts are clearly indicated by type faces.

The arrangement at the top provides an inventory for all the stock, the number of fowls on hand at a given time, their cost and the cost of additional stock. Assuming that the original flock consists of 545 fowls, that number would be recorded on the line extended from that caption. Again assuming (for simplicity using $1 as the unit of cost) that in March 4 cockerels were bought, in September 3 more male birds were purchased and in December 2 other were secured. The number would be placed in the lightly printed spaces under the proper months following the word "During," and the amount paid in the heavier printed space below the respective months. The inventory, then, would be as follows:

545 fowls at $1 each..................$545
9 cockerels at $1 each ....$ 9

After "Total Number of Fowls" would follow 545 and after "Total Cost of Fowls" 554 and the cost (original and the 9 added) $554. Before this number and amount is entered, of course, the number of fowls lost from any cause whatever should be deducted.

The egg record is self-explanatory. If 100 dozen eggs are sold in January, that number is placed in the lightly printed box under that month and beneath the heading "Number of Eggs Sold and Amount Received," and the price in the box to the right—that is, the one containing the dollar mark. The procedure should be the same with reference to the other columns and boxes, great care being exercised, however, to record all receipts in the lightly printed spaces and all expenses in those in heavy print.

All chickens and eggs which are used on the family table should be accounted as sold, and should be recorded as an expense at the regular market price, just as if they were purchased from outside sources. The same applies to feed and home labor. All too frequently the proper recording of these items is not understood and consequently they are omitted from the account book.

Account-keeping of this character not only stabilizes the individual business, but it also operates to put the entire poultry industry on a better basis. Records are efficient detectives in seeking out the shirker and loafer hens, who merit immediate obsequies at the family table rather than places of importance in the egg-laying flock.

WET EGGS SPOIL QUICKER.

If your eggs are intended for storage, do not wash them or allow them to get wet. The United States Department of Agriculture estimates that 5,000,000 dozen of eggs needlessly spoil every year in cold storage by being wet or washed. Investigations have shown that from 17 to 22 per cent. of washed eggs become worthless in storage whereas, only 4 to 8 per cent. of dirty eggs stored unwashed spoil. Water removes the gelatinous covering from the shells.

A town capable of supporting three poultry shows within five weeks enjoys some reputation as a poultry center. Los Angeles is the only city in this country enjoying that distinction.

Work in the poultry yard should be carried on systematically. Regular hours for feeding is of the first importance. Chickens like to be fed punctually when the whistle lows.

BUYS FINE HOG.

William J. Wrigley, chewing gum magnate, whose recent purchase of Cataline Island was a sensation in Los Angeles real estate circles, is the owner of a fine hog ranch at Lake Genaza, Wis. Mr. Wrigley recently paid $1310 for a Poland-China sow to add to his herd.

Good advertising brings results, particularly if one has a good stock of birds to draw from. Breeders may be conscious of the good quality of their birds, but it attracts no buyers; that is a matter of intelligent publicity.

Healthy, hardy chicks—do you know the secret?

Why, of course, it's an open secret! You can sum it up, and boil it down, in two words: proper feeding. And proper feeding is an easy or a hard job—depending upon how easy or hard you make it!

If, for example, you depend upon Sperry Baby Chick Feed—there isn't anything to worry about. For this perfectly mixed ration makes healthy, hard chicks—and that's no secret, either!

This explains why thousands of chicken raisers are so enthusiastic about it. They realize that, to make money in the chicken business, they must save a big percentage of each hatch. And, what's more, they have proved that chicks fed from the very start on Sperry Baby Chick Feed develop into sturdy, profitable chickens.

Remember—Sperry Baby Chick Feed is absolutely gritless. (You should, however, add about 5% fine shell and grit when using.) It contains the food values and constituents which Nature has taught the mother hen to scratch for her baby chicks. It is clean, uniform, properly granulated and proportioned for the delicate organs of the baby chick.

So—why take chances, why experiment, when Sperry Baby Chick Feed puts the whole secret in the hollow of your hand? It is a perfectly balanced ration that gives your baby chicks exactly what they need.

If you want to know just how to feed your baby chicks for better results and bigger profits—send today for the new edition of our booklet, "Makes Hens Happy." Full of practical hints and profit-pointers! Send for your copy at once—it's free! Mail the coupon NOW!

HEMP A SUCCESS IN IMPERIAL.

IMPERIAL.—The question as to whether hemp can be grown in the Imperial Valley is answered by the accompanying picture, showing Mr. Osborne of Imperial with a bundle of hemp in his arms the result of ninety days' growth. By comparing the height of the man and the stalks one can estimate the height of the hemp. Stacked behind Mr. Osborne is some hundred dollars worth of hemp, which already has been sold to and paid for by San Diego people and is now awaiting the arrival of a machine known as the "decorticator," which strips the outside bark from the stems. This is the only part of the plant that is used in the making of rope. The war caused a great increase in the price of hemp and a consequence increase in acreage. With the ending of the war and a probable decrease in the price, it is not conisdered likely that it will become a permanent crop. Mr. Osborne, however, has shown that it can be grown.

Commercial Fertilizers.

dressed with expensive high grade fertilizers, instead of converting the nitrogen to nitrate, convert it merely to ammonia which, being volatile, goes off as a gas and is lost on account of inability of the soil bacteria to carry it on the nitrate form.

In this investigation some thirty types of soil from all over Southern California were used, to which were added a large number of fertilizers containing nitrogen in various forms. Nitrogen from inorganic or mineral sources was added in the form of sulfate of ammonia.

Nitrate of soda of course furnishes nitrogen in readily available form without any bacterial action whatever. The use of this form of nitrogen, however, for citrus trees at least, is to be avoided as its use in large amounts over a protracted period has been found to be detrimental in that alkaline conditions are favored. Moreover it seems to make conditions more favorable for the little-understood citrus disease, "mottled-leaf."

Sulfate of ammonia, running nearly 20 per cent. nitrogen, furnishes the most concentrated mineral source of this element. It is not so readily lost by leaching as nitrate of soda, although not so quickly available. It is, however, readily available in practically all the soils used in the investigation, being rapidly nitrified and in relatively large amounts. For supplying available nitrogen at the time of bloom, three or four pounds per tree applied at the time of plowing down the cover crop is very desirable.

ORGANIC FERTILIZERS.

Under the category of high grade organic fertilizers were used dried blood, 12 per cent. nitrogen; high grade tankage, 9 per cent., and fish guano, 8.5 per cent. In general it was found that the so-called high grade fertilizers, although containing large amounts of nitrogen, were often poorly nitrified and a large part of the nitrogen lost as ammonia due to the relative feebleness of the nitrifying power of many of our California soils. Of the three forms of high grade organic fertilizers used, fish guano apparently gave the best results. Where the soil was amply supplied with organic matter these fertilizers were much better nitrified but on burned-out soils their use was deemed unprofitable.

Among the low grade forms of organic fertilizers used were steamed bone meal, 3 per cent. nitrogen; cottonseed meal, 5 per cent., and goat manure, 2.5 per cent. It was found that the most ready and economical transformation of nitrogen into nitrate form in most of our California soils resulted from the use of the so-called low grade forms of nitrogen fertilizers, which includes in addition to the above, garbage tankage and sewage sludge.

QUESTION OF APPLICATION.

In view of these findings, the investigators were led to conclude: "It appears clear to the writers from the foregoing that the rules employed at present for the use of nitrogenous fertilizers on our arid soils and which we have borrowed from the humid regions must be changed. In all soils of our interior arid valleys which are not very close to stream channels or those which for other reasons are markedly deficient in organic matter, the proper bacteriological and perhaps other conditions do not obtain to render into nitrate most economically and quickly the nitrogen of high-grade organic nitrogenous fertilizers. On the other hand, conditions in those same soils are much more favorable for the nitrification of nitrogen of the low grade nitrogenous fertilizers. Similar conditions prevail in the "humus-poor" soils of our coast valleys and of other valleys in the State in which either the soils have always been deficient in organic matter or have become depleted in that respect through excessive oxidation under favorable climatic conditions assisted by constant summer cultivation. In all such soils therefore, we would recommend the use of fertilizers as follows:

Steamed bone meal	1200 lbs. per acre.
Cottonseed meal	800 lbs. per acre.
Goat manure	1500 lbs. per acre.
Septic or Imhoff tank sludge	2000 lbs. per acre.
Garbage tankage	1400 lbs. per acre.

"It becomes necessary at this point to consider the nitrate fertilizers in their relations with those discussed above and in connection with their own intrinsic values for arid soils. One naturally thinks that nitrate of soda or nitrate of lime should be the most desirable of fertilizers when availability is the desideratum and this would be so were it possible to apply the nitrate and keep it in the root zone in the soil. This is not so, however, under our arid conditions since the readily soluble nitrates are quickly brought to the surface of the soil by capillarity, and as the water evaporates, are left behind in the dry soil crust into which roots do not enter. Since there is no rainfall during a great portion of the year, and since irrigation water rises upward into the surface six inches of soil, there is little opportunity for the nitrate of the crust to redistribute itself in the deeper layers of the soil. Hence plants may suffer for want of nitrates in the root zone while those salts may be present in large quantities in the dry surface crust of the soil. Besides, other injurious effects of nitrates following upon the leaching of them from soil, which brings about more or less imperviousness, render it necessary to employ nitrate (and in the latter respect only nitrate of soda) with considerable caution, as observed above. In general, where the annual rainfall is below twenty inches per annum, nitrate should be employed only on our lighter soils, and the application should be made in the winter so as to give soaking rains a chance to distribute it thoroughly in the deeper soil layers. On the heavier soils it will probably be best not to employ it at all if large quantities must be applied or if its use is to be constant.

"So far as soils rich in organic matter are

GROWERS GREETING FAVORABLE BEET CONTRACT WITH APATHY.

WITH a world hungry for sugar and with European facilities for growing beets and making sugar crippled by war, California farmers who have the proper combination of soil, water, climate and transportation for growing sugar beets seem not to have fully availed themselves thus far of the opportunity afforded by this condition and by a favorable contract. A survey of planting operations and prospective planting reveals the fact that the sugar-beet acreage in the Golden State will be less than the four-year average of 1914-1917, although it will doubtless be greater than the 1918 acreage. Sugar company officials confess themselves perplexed over the apathy shown by the planters, in view of the fact that the contract offered them promises an increase of from 35 to 40 per cent. in the price of beets over the 1918 figure, at the present price of sugar.

Thousands of acres in Southern California which were planted to beans last year have been seeded to sugar beets or are being prepared for beets because of the belief that the returns from the latter crop will be more certain. But hundreds of farmers in the southern section of the State and in the San Joaquin Valley, with land admirably adapted to beet growing, have turned to the growing of feed for live stock, the numbers of which are rapidly increasing in this section of the State. In many sections there appears to be a distrust of the assertion of Federal experts that the price of sugar will probably remain at the present level for at least two years.

Officials of the eleven sugar companies operating in Southern California are in a position to gauge the prospective plantings of beets for 1919, through signed contracts and promises to sign. Orange county reports the greatest increase over the 1918 acreage. There will be about 63,000 acres of beets planted in this, the premier beet county of the State this year, as against 18,600 last year. The Oxnard district will have 18,000 acres, an increase of about 10 per cent. The Los Angeles county acreage will be approximately 14,500. The total last year was 13,386 acres. Other counties will have about 5000 acres additional, with a grand total for the district south of the Tehachepi of 101,300 acres as against 92,800 acres last year and 112,000 in 1917.

SOME FIGURES.

The United States Bureau of Markets reports the total acreage of sugar beets in the country as follows: Average, 1912-1916, 579,063 acres; 1917, 664,797; 1918, 592,100. California, second to Colorado in sugar-beet production, harvested 141,097 acres in 1916, 161,909 in 1917, and 102,400 acres in 1918. There were 1,462,895 short tons of sugar made from California beets in 1916, 1,321,716 short tons in 1917, and 843,700 short tons last year. The average farm price of beets in California for the three years, respectively, was $6.30; $7.60 and $10.33. This year, computing from a ten-year average of beet production and sugar content, at the present seaport price of sugar, the farm price of beets per ton will be $14.40.

Reports from the San Joaquin Valley tend to show that the acreage in that section will be larger than last year by about 15 per cent. There is no disposition on the part of the Corcoran farmers to plant more than the 1918 acreage. The Bakersfield district increase, however, will be fully 20 per cent. In the Santa Clara Valley the increase will be 25 per cent., and in the Visalia section 10 per cent. The acreage north of the Tehachepi, however, is comparatively small.

Manager Barry of the Chino factory of the American Beet Sugar Company believes that the Chino-Pomona-Arlington district will not, in the next few years at least, produce the beet acreage of past years. The acreage outside of the citrus belt in this section is becoming noted for its live stock and for the prodction of live-stock feed. This district will have but 2300 acres in beets this year, and the sugar company will raise 600 acres of this total. A vast acreage near Chino given over to bean raising last year is already in barley, to be followed by grain sorghums for stock feed. The American Beet Sugar Company itself is going into the live-stock business at Chino. It now has 3500 hogs. The San Fernando Valley farmers will plant beets on 4500 acres this year, an increase of 20 per cent. over last year's acreage.

THE NEW CONTRACT.

The contract offered the growers by the American Beet Sugar Company, almost exactly similar to that offered by the other companies, is interesting. It provides a sliding scale of prices for beets, to be determined by the percentage of sugar and on the basis of the price of sugar during the year following July 1, 1919. For instance, if the seaport price of sugar averages 9 cents, which price, although not assured in any way, is believed to be reasonably certain to continue, and the sugar content of the beets bought is 18 per cent., the price paid per ton will be $14.40. Eighteen per cent. is considered in California, on the basis of past yields, a reasonable average. Were the price predictions to fall short of realization the returns of the grower would, of course, be correspondingly decreased.

Other features of the contract are:

(1.) Seed must be bought of the company at 30 cents per pound and shall not be planted on any land except that covered by the contract.

(2.) The grower must deliver all his beets to the factory or aboard cars as ordered by the company, the beets to be properly topped at the base of the bottom leaf, and protection from the sun to be afforded beets in the field after they are removed from the ground.

(3.) Initial payments shall be made on the 15th of each month for beets delivered during the previous month. Further payments are to be made from time to time as the net selling price of sugar may warrant, final payment to be made August 1, 1920.

(4.) The company will pay the freight on all beets in cars loaded to capacity.

(5.) The grower agrees not to assign the contract without the consent of the company.

(6.) The grower may, at his own expense, have representatives at the factory to inspect weighing and chemistry.

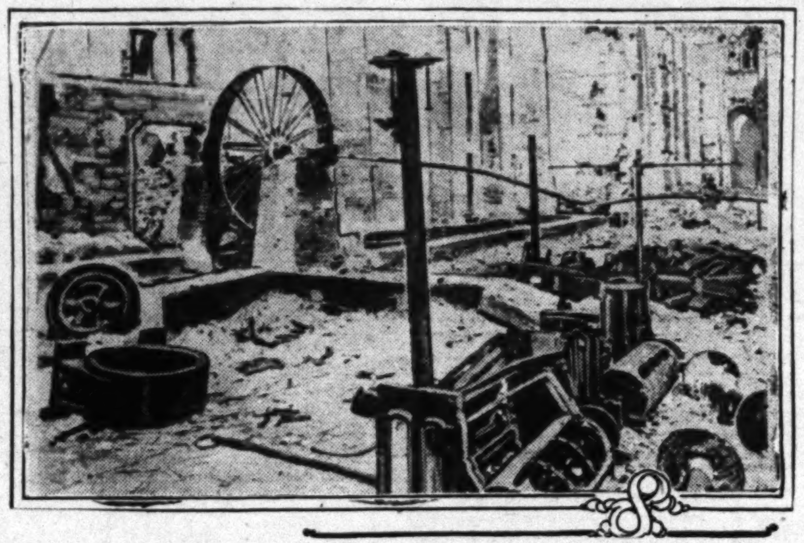
LAND REQUIREMENTS.

The opportunities afforded growers of sugar beets to profit by the partial paralysis of the sugar-beet industry in Europe and by a very favorable contract are limited to land owners in areas in this State adapted to sugar-beet growing. Sugar beets are a bulky crop, low in value per unit of weight, and transportation to factories is a vital consideration. Then, too, the soil and climatic conditions must be right. Sufficient water must be provided the beets. From the eight or ten-leaf stage until six or eight weeks before harvesting a maximum quantity of moisture must be afforded.

Sugar beets can be grown profitably on widely-varying soils ranging from sandy loams to heavy adobes, providing the land is properly handled. Depth of soil is essential. The heavier types of soil tend to produce the largest tonnage, but are somewhat more difficult to work. Soils which produce good yields of barley, potatoes, beans, alfalfa or corn will prove to be good beet soils.

While sugar beets will tolerate more alkali than most field crops, lands too heavily charged with sodium chloride or sodium carbonate will not produce good crops. A long season of cool weather tends to a heavy tonnage and a high sugar content, though these two conditions seldom go together. If the tonnage is high, the sugar content is generally low. Beets grown on the light, sandy, warm soils in the southern interior valleys will tend to be light in weight and rich in sugar.

April 1 is the time limit set for planting sugar beets in Southern California. In the San Joaquin Valley beets are planted up to March 15, and in the northern coast counties up to June 1.



What the Huns did to the French sugar mills.

The first wave of the Teuton invasion cut off two hundred and three of the two hundred and thirteen sugar mills in France as well as much land that had been devoted to sugar beets. Sugar production in France has in consequence fallen to less than 25 per cent. of the pre-war output. This is one of the reasons given by government experts to back up their opinion that the American sugar market is bound to stay up for some time to come.

IN ALLEY AND YARD.

A hen, in order to be classed as a genuinely good one, should be equally capable of going in the show ring and taking a ribbon or of going on the yard and making a record as a layer. And the breeder, in order to get the advantage of the best and broadest markets, must breed for a combination of utility and standard quality instead of following the tendency to become either a fancier or a utility breeder. That is the advice of Rob B. Slocum, a poultry specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"Except in a few more or less isolated cases," says Mr. Slocum, "there is nothing in the standard requirements directly opposed to utility, and the buyers during the past few years have shown an increasingly insistent demand for fowls that have egg-producing ability back of them."

Fanciers, Mr. Slocum points out, are too prone to put the appearance of the fowl above everything else, and thus to neglect the egg-laying quality, while, on the other hand, unsuccessful fanciers are likely to turn completely to the egg-producing side of breeding without any attention to "points."

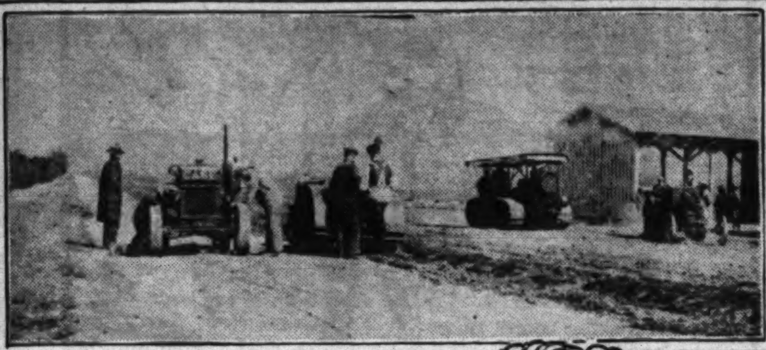
RIVERSIDE COURSE DRAWS MANY FARMERS AND FARM WORKERS.

FORTY-EIGHT hours of intensive instruction, on the use and care of tractors, given boys and men of many walks of life by the University of California at Riverside during the last week in February will prove a real factor in the better farming movement. Fifty-two of those enrolled were farm owners or farm workers. A score more intended buying farms and modern machinery for them. These men now have a good foundation of knowledge on the subject of power farming.



Off for the demonstration grounds.

Here are some of the things which students at the university's tractor short course sought to learn thoroughly during class and practice work:

(1.) The principle of the four-stroke cycle motor and the two-stroke cycle motor.

(2.) The names of all the parts of a tractor and the kind and properties of the materials from which they are made.

(3.) How the tractor is rated and the meaning of the term "horse-power."

(4.) The properties of the various tractor fuels.

(5.) The purpose of the carburetor and the principle of its adjustment.

(6.) How the various makes of carburetors operate and are adjusted.

7.) The operation of the various parts of the ignition system.

(8.) How to determine the firing order of a motor.

(9.) How to time a magneto and to adjust and care for a magneto.

(10.) How to set an engine on the dead center.

(11.) The operation and principles of a governor.

(12.) Care of the cooling system and soldering radiators.

(13.) How to babbitt, scrape and adjust a bearing.

(14.) How to time and grind valves.

(15.) How to fit piston rings.

(16.) The proper use and adjustment of the clutch.

(17.) Causes for motor troubles and how to remedy them.

(18.) Directions for overhauling the tractor.

(19.) Proper lubrication of the tractor.

(20.) The construction, adjustment and operation of the various tractors.

Instructors under the general direction of Prof. J. B. Davidson, professor of agricultural engineering of the university kept the students busy eight hours per day for the six days. Three-fourths of the time was spent in the classroom, and one-fourth in the inspection and operation of tractors. The students were divided into four groups. Prof. L. J. Fletcher delivered lectures on the various parts of tractors and adjustment of same, while William Schmitt, R. C. Ingram and R. B. Lundy instructed registrants on the operation, assembling and dissembling of tractors.

Fifteen tractors were available for instruction, two Sanduskys, two Samsons, two Fordsons, two Clevelands, a Best 40, Holt 45, Yuba 12-20, Case, International, Moline and Bean. Four of these are owned by the University. The others were contributed by dealers who sent representatives to assist the instructors. Each one of the students drove each of the tractors for over an hour during the week.

DEALERS TO STAGE BIG DEMONSTRATION.

FRESNO.—San Joaquin Valley tractor and agricultural implement dealers have arranged for a great tractor demonstration to be held on the Mordecai ranch in Madera county, midway between the cities of Fresno and Madera, from April 24 to 29 inclusive. The demonstration grounds cover about 640 acres.

The demonstration will be conducted by the Central California Tractor and Implement Dealers' Association and arrangements have been made to bring to this show practically every known make of tractor.

After the demonstration has been concluded, these tractors will feature the California Raisin Day celebration in Fresno on April 30 by hauling the floats in the big parade.

The manufacture of farm implements for varying conditions is a science in itself.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR DAIRY INDUSTRY IN THE SOUTHLAND.

BY F. H. SCRIBNER.

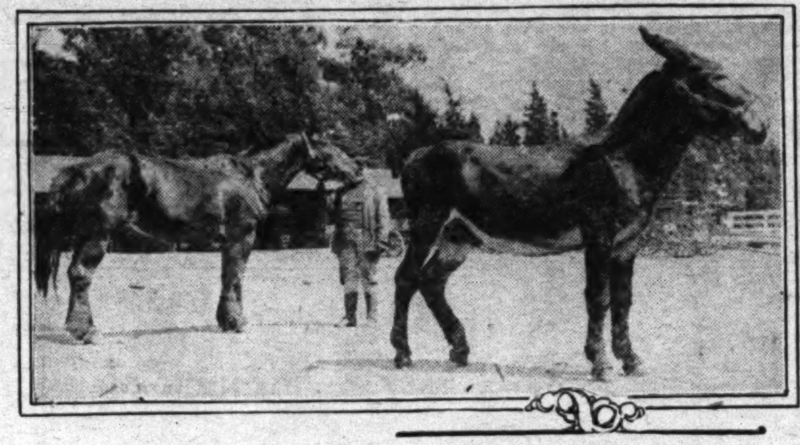
THE future for dairying never had a brighter or more permanent outlook than at the present time. With the education that is going on regarding the value of milk as human food, with the enormous export business in condensed milk which has developed, the United States now dominates the world trade in this commodity, and there is no reason why this supremacy cannot be maintained. Dairy products have always sold cheaper than other products, according to their real food value, but through publicity and organization, the American farmer has pushed the price up nearer where it ought to be, and it will be a great deal easier to hold it there than it was to get it to the present level.

Food elements in milk are absolutely essential to the rearing of the human race, and the combination of food materials cannot be improved upon. The vitamines of milk, or that element which is of such vital importance in performing the functions of growth, are here in the right proportions. Those nations and countries that depend largely upon bovine milk products are the strongest physically and mentally of all the peoples of the earth. It is said if we should deprive the human race of the dairy industry we would retrograde in less than 200 years.

In consequence of the educational work in behalf of milk, it has been possible for a general advancement of prices to occur without any substantial reduction in consumption. How can the dairyman lose out when the cow is so indispensable not only as a human food producer, but as soil improver? The dairy business never will be overdone, because of the confining nature of the business which is not conducive to an over supply of dairymen. The lazy man will shun this line of endeavor for the business requires men of more than ordinary energy as well as intellect. The dairyman should be alert to his best interests and opportunities and to the possibilities of advancement with respect to the quality of milk produced that users of milk may be assured that they are getting a clean, healthful, wholesome article of food.

There is nothing which deteriorates faster than milk when conditions are unfavorable and for this reason absolute cleanliness is necessary. The milker himself should be clean, as well as the cows, all utensils should be thoroughly cleaned and sterilized, and the animal heat removed from the milk as soon as possible. All animals should be tuberculin tested and physical examinations should be made as no unhealthy cow can be expected to produce a healthful, wholesome article of milk.

The standard for milk in Los Angeles county is probably higher than in any other on the Coast. Los Angeles people as a rule are abundantly able and willing to pay good prices, but they are also entitled to the assurance that the milk they offer their families, and especially their children, is above criticism. In some of the European countries there has been a high mortality among babies because of the lack of milk. The war has taught us many valuable lessons, but none greater than the importance of milk as a human food. With the many substitutes we have today for butter fat, none are equal, and while they may possess as much energy and be as easily digested, they will in no way perform the functions of growth. The slogan for every dairyman should be, "Keep Our Products Safe for Human Consumption!"



A ranch with two kinds of power.

On the Rodeo Land and Water Company property at Beverly Hills they have a full equipment of both horses and tractors. The animals shown are "Doctor's Best," three-year-old jack, purchased last year for $3000, and one of the ranch's forty brood mares. In the shed in the background are four big tractors of the track-laying type.

BIG RANCH ADDS TO ITS HORSE POWER.

Doctor's Best, a jack weighing nearly 1200 pounds, and standing fifteen hands high, was purchased several months ago by the Rodeo Land and Water Company, Beverly Hills, from J. B. Newman of Tulare, the consideration being given at $3000. Doctor's Best is said to be one of the largest jacks in Los Angeles county. He is big-boned and well proportioned.

The Rodeo Company's new acquisition for the improvement of work stock is very gentle, but has a habit of gnawing at his hocks and knees. A muzzle is kept on him, therefore, to overcome this habit.

The ranch company has purchased forty-one Percheron brood mares which are being bred to the jack and worked on the ranch. These are stabled in a galvanized iron building with dirt floors. Order and cleanliness is the rule in this barn. J. W. Hogg, the ranch manager, pays particular attention to the condition of these brood mares and the jack.

The general desirability of the mule over the horse has resulted in high prices for mules weighing over 1200 pounds. A well matched span of mules of this weight often brings $600 where mares of the same weight would bring little over half this sum.

Commercial poultrymen largely feed their daily grain ration ground, moistened with either milk or water, although some feed it dry. The soft feed idea, however, must not be overworked. When feeding moist ground grain, have it a comparatively dry, crumbly mash.

ARIZONA VINE PEST.

Dr. A. W. Morrill, consulting entomologist of the University of Arizona, has discovered the grape leaf worm in vineyards of that State. This worm is called by some the "Grape Leaf Skeletonizer." It is marked with yellow bandings across the back, and in the adult form is a deep bluish moth, somewhat resembling a wasp. The young have the habit of feeding in rows on the grape leaf. The worms are active in the season when the vines are loaded with fruit.

YES, ABERDEEN - ANGUS GIVE MILK
They are the only "strictly Beef" breed that was originally a "strictly Dairy" breed. As late as 1892 the champion at the British Dairy Farmers' Association show was an Aberdeen-Angus. In Australia and New Zealand Milking strains have been maintained in preference to other breeds. Tests at the Ontario Experiment Station a few years ago showed the specific gravity of Aberdeen-Angus milk higher than other beef breeds. A milking herd that supplied Chicago a few years ago tested over .5% butter fat regularly. Various breeders report many cows that are heavy milkers in this country in spite of the fact that it is the policy of the breed to maintain its acknowledged beef supremacy and allow strictly dairy herds to battle out the supremacy among themselves. For further information write for Aberdeen-Angus for the Dairy Breeder.

ARIZONA'S OIL MILLERS HAVE OVER SUPPLY OF COTTONSEED.

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—Just now there is presented the odd spectacle of farmers protesting against the setting of too high a price on their products. According to the Food Administration, they should get $66 a ton for their cottonseed. In reality, business conditions have set a local value of only $40 a ton, and at that the local oil millers are not anxious to buy. One of the mills is holding 200,000 gallons of oil for lack of a market. Meal, on a 40 per cent. protein basis, is selling at $55 a ton. Some farmers have established small mills of their own and are grinding their seed, with the oil, for cattle feeding, usually in combination with silage. It is appreciated that oil at $1.31 a gallon is rather rich and costly cattle food, but at that, the seed cost is only double that of good hay and the nutritive value is much greater.

A couple of months ago, Texas millers asked the Railroad Administration for a cottonseed rate of $5 a ton from Southern California and Arizona points. This was refused, though the food necessities of the Texan cattle were represented as great. There was protest from Arizona cattle and sheep growers. The old rate maintained was $15 a ton. Granted was a request of Arizona factors for a seed rate of $9 to California points, effective February 25. However, it appears that the California mills also are overstocked on seed, though this rather general condition is believed decidedly temporary, in view of the large food value of both oil cake and oil. Still, the immediate reason for the oil overstock is held to be the lack of restriction on importation of oriental oils, which are coming in at the rate of a billion gallons a year, or three times the ordinary importation.

T. W. McDevitt of the Phoenix Cotton Oil Company has returned from a meeting at Washington of 200 representatives of organizations interested in cottonseed, including farmers, gleaners and dealers, crushers, refiners, lard substitute manufacturers and wholesale grocers, the conference called by the Food Administration. There was determination that on January 1 the general condition of the cottonseed industry was normal, as compared with the same date the previous year. The only apprehension has come through accumulation at some points of seed and oil, the uncertainty of the Food Administration stabilization programme and the receipt of large amounts of foreign oils. It was recommended that the oriental oils be placed under embargo till the present emergency has been passed, that lard substitutes for exportation be manufactured almost solely of cottonseed oil, that the Food Administration function till completion of the marketing of the present crop, that foreign markets be opened as speedily as possible, that seed be purchased especially where there is congestion. It was agreed that there should be the highest degree of co-operation between the interests represented at the meeting.

While the California cottonseed meal market is understood to be well supplied, there is no lack of demand for meal in Arizona or Texas, the price in the latter State being a couple of dollars a ton above the Arizona quotation. But the business as whole is very materially affected by the Coast importations of oriental cottonseed, soy bean and cocoanut oils.

HUGE PLANTING PROJECT STARTED.

COVINA.—The largest citrus planting in Southern California for the year 1919, it is believed locally, will be that of the Judson C. Rives division of the Valencia Heights district, two miles south of Covina. Through the readjustment of the holdings of Milton Kaughman, the 400 acres of the southeast corner of the Valencia Heights district have been acquired by Mr. Rives, a retired and wealthy lumberman, now making his home in Los Angeles. The work of improvement of this large ranch is now in full blast under the supervision of James E. Clark, a man who has had twenty-six years experience in the development of citrus properties in California. Carpenters are busy constructing commodious cottages for the ranch help, bunk houses, machine sheds and other buildings necessary for a large holding.

Ten thousand feet of steel pipe is being laid, by which the water from the wells at the lower end of the ranch will be forced by two boosts to the reservoir at the highest point. The ranch will have an irrigation system of seven miles of concrete pipe line, the contract for which has been placed with the Concrete Pipe and Construction Company of Riverside. The pipe will be made upon the ground.

The entire holding will be planted to Eureka lemons and Valencia oranges by June 15, it is announced. Five well graded streets run through the property, Cameron, California, Virginia, Oregon and Barranca.

FIG GROWERS ARE UP IN THE AIR.

DINUBA.—New York brokers are sending out circulars to their trade advising them not to close contracts for figs at this time, and because of the uncertain conditions in the future market no move has been made by the Fig Growers' Association to set a price for the year. It is evident that the market will not tend to stabilize until there is available some definite information with regard to the tonnage which will be available from Smyrna. During the war these importations were entirely cut off and the high price paid resulted in no small degree from the fact that the California product dominated the markets of this country as well as of Britain.

Because of the present chaotic conditions many of the leading fig packers of California are proposing to contract for their fall pack, agreeing to pay the growers the prevailing price at the time delivery is made. This sort of contract, however, offers few attractions to the majority of the growers and, as far as can be determined here, few agreements are being closed.

J. C. Forkner, the newly-elected president of the association, has sent out a circular letter to the organization growers, in which he states no attempt will be made at this time to set even a tentative price. No further action will be taken by the board of directors, he states, until there is some definite information through official channels as to the tonnage of imported fruit that will be available for the United States markets.

The foliage of stone fruits, such as peach, plum and cherry, is quite tender, and arsenical sprays should be employed with caution. Arsenate of lead is least likely to do harm, unless more than two applications are given.

PLACE OF GRAIN SORGHUMS IN RAISING OF LIVE STOCK.

BY F. H. SCRIBNER.

THE grain sorghums have their place and ought to have a still greater place among the grain crops adapted to California conditions. Sorghums are primarily dry land crops, although they respond splendidly to irrigation. Unlike Indian corn, which never gives satisfactory returns if once its growth is checked, the sorghums may cease growing and have their leaves shrivel during periods of excessive heat and drought, and yet when these conditions pass and the soil becomes moist again, they will quickly resume growth. They are of valuable importance as a grain crop in semi-arid regions or where there is a scarcity of water.

Ordinarily we do not think of the sorghums except as a stock or poultry food, but we are told that in India 33,000,000 acres of land are annually devoted to these crops and that on them millions of people almost entirely depend for their bread grains. The different sorghums are similar in composition, carrying about as much crude protein and nitrogen free extract as corn, properly supplemented with protein. Rich feeds are excellent for all animals, although perhaps a little less palatable, and for horses, fattening cattle, dairy cows and pigs, the grain is usually ground, being then called "chop."

Selecting certified grain sorghum seed.

Farm Adviser Gordon giving a Los Angeles county field the "once over."

The Kafirs lead in many places in both grain and forage production, and being of an astringent nature, and constipating in effect, are best used in connection with alfalfa and other laxative roughages. Next to Kafir, Milo is the most important of this class of plants, and in some of the more arid districts is said to outyield the Kafirs and is somewhat superior to the Kafirs as a feeding grain. Unlike the Kafirs, it has a beneficial laxative effect on the bowels, which renders it especially desirable as calf or poultry feed.

The greatest use can undoubtedly be made of these crops through the silo, utilizing the heads, stalks and all. As for real feeding value, there is about 40 per cent. of the feeding value in the stalk, and it seems like a great waste to see a sorghum field beheaded and the stalks left to go back to the ground.

FEEDING HOGS.

For hog feed as a growing ration, sorghum should be fed in conjunction with middlings, oil meal, milk or tankage, or a small amount of leafy alfalfa hay chopped and mixed in the slc. For fattening hogs, it should be fed similar to Indian corn, except, as has been stated, it should either be ground or soaked twenty-fours hours ahead, as it becomes very flinty and hard and much of it would pass through the animals undigested.

By crossing and selecting, varieties are being developed which are suited to the different districts where climatic conditions are variable. There is a splendid field for work along this line and everyone making a practice of growing grain sorghums should make a habit of going into the field at ripening time, before the main crop is harvested, and selecting such heads for seed purposes as meet a standard of excellence. Things to be sought for are high yields and uniform height. To get high yield, pick the largest, most compact, well filled heads. To get more uniformity in height, select only from plants of medium growth, avoiding both the very short and very tall plants.

SOIL PREPARATION.

The preparation of the soil for these crops is much the same as for corn. The aim should be to secure a free, firm and moist seed bed, and the more so, where the rainfall is light and water scarce. This can be accomplished best by plowing the land as long as possible before the planting of the seed, and by harrowing the surface thus plowed frequently to put the soil in a good physical condition. Making a good seed bed is even more essential than with corn.

It is a rule that we can safely follow that the smaller the seed to be planted, the more essential the need of thorough preparation. No one ever made a mistake by spending too much time in fitting his seed bed. Repeated harrowing previous to planting has a tendency to clean the land, as every time we harrow we not only kill many young weeds, but stir and bring up other seeds for another germination. This continued practice for a few weeks practically cleans the land of weeds which otherwise would rob the crop not only of plant food, but moisture as well.

There are no particular difficulties in the improvement of sorghums by breeding, as they are pollinated by the wind the same as corn and for that reason different varieties should not be grown close together, as the wind will carry the pollen 100 yards or more. Whatever strain you wish to propagate, keep it as pure as possible, and by selection from year to year from your own field, you not only will improve the yield and quality, but will secure a strain absolutely adapted to your own local soil and climatic conditions. Sweet sorghums, broom corn and Sudan grass mix readily with the grain sorghums and should be grown quite a distance away.

TIME TO PLANT.

The time to plant will vary to some extent with the location and kind of soil, and like corn, which is a warm weather plant, planting should not be done until the soil and atmosphere are quite warm. On irrigated land seeding may be delayed until the middle or last of June, using it as a second crop following grain, or grain hay, or other spring crops. The common method of planting is to use a corn planter, fitted with sorghum seed plates, and drill in rows three to three and one-half feet apart, and the seed from four to six inches in the row. The Milos stool profusely and for that reason should be more heavily seeded. Care in every case should be given to see that the seeds are placed in contact with moist soil, which will usually be at a depth of from two to three inches, and well covered. Good cultivation and care should insure a good crop.

Certified seed is seed selected by an expert, and which is practically pure and pays every farmer well to use, because we secure a more uniform stand and quality and greater yield which pays well for the difference between certified and uncertified.

MILKING MACHINES SAVE LABOR, MONEY.

Weeks of wasted work each year are being saved by dairymen who have installed milking machines. The burden of milking, so often distasteful to the farmer and farm hand, and the cause of many boys leaving the farm, is greatly lightened by the installation of even one milking machine, according to many reports from farming districts. The practicability and efficiency of the milking machine is, in fact, no longer questioned by most observers.

The well bred milch goat has come to be an accepted institution in dairying.

DOCTOR UP THE CRIPPLED TOOLS.

A certain farm-equipment dealer has one record customer who buys a new binder every three years, and who, at one time, was in debt for three binders which he purchased in a period of seven years. This farmer uses a ready-made apple tree as a shelter for his grain harvester. When one tree rots he plants another. And although he and his family work hard, he is always paying last season's debts with next year's income. Why isn't he successful?

If the agricultural implements which have rusted and rotted to pieces in fence corners and barnyards could be placed end to end, they would probably stretch from here to infinitum. Approximately $100,000,000 constitutes the annual loss due to lack of care in handling farm machinery—a tribute to catch-as-catch-can methods. The average farmer will sit up all night to save the life of a day-old calf or a litter of pigs and think nothing of it, yet the same man will begrudge the time and labor necessary to haul valuable tools from the fields to proper shelters.

Winter is an opportune time for taking inventory of farm machinery resources, as well as account of essential repairs and record of implement condition, says the rural engineering division of the United States Department of Agriculture. Repairs should be ordered and put in place as soon as received. Machines should be gone over thoroughly and prepared for the coming season. All adjustments should be made, a plentiful supply of various sized bolts, nuts and screws should be secured and everything got in shipshape order for the rush season of spring work.

Winter is the time, also, to sharpen plow points and disks and to touch up the dull harrow teeth. The cultivator shovels should be sharpened, as blunt points and worn harrow teeth are highly inefficient and will not perform satisfactory work. All worn parts should be replaced and the machines placed in A-1 condition for field service. In spike-tooth harrows, teeth should be reversed in the clamps if worn only on one side, while if both points are dull, they should be removed and resharpened by forging and retempering. Spring-tooth harrow teeth should be handled similarly, while the discs or disc harrows should be edged. Mowers, reapers, and binders should be overhauled and put in order for a strenuous campaign.

The department recommends that a careful and systematic inspection of each implement be made for the purpose of making or ordering repairs. Plows, listers, harrows, rollers, drags, seeders, drills, planters, cultivators, mowers, binders, headers, hay rakes, hay loaders, stackers, wagons, racks, engines, and horse power or belt-driven machines such as separators, silo cutters and feed grinders are the implements in most common use. It is suggested that each implement be inspected for badly worn or broken parts to determine what parts should be repaired and those that must be replaced with new ones.

As a reminder for ordering new parts and in overhauling the machine, make a list for each implement of the parts to be repaired or the new parts to be bought; also any special tools necessary in making these repairs. Put down the name of manufacturer, year bought, and the number of the machine if it is known. If orders are sent to the factory be sure to specify the catalogue, pattern, or casting number of the part. Order repair parts early, as the dealer may not have them in stock.

Winter is also the best time to make plans and preparations for any building which is contemplated. This will assure the presence of the material when needed, and will often permit the making of favorable contracts which would be difficult to consummate later on, when the rush of spring work begins. As the coming season promises to be a busy one in the building line, every farmer who wishes to build is urged to "shake a leg" and get his plans under way.

Now is the time to prepare hog houses for the spring crop of pigs. Repair where necessary, so as to minimize pig mortality due to inadequate shelter. Thousands of newborn pigs are lost each season due to unsatisfactory housing. Weatherproof houses will save many.

The wise and frugal farmer plies the paint brush during the spare time of spring and fall, as he understands the dual value of paint in protecting against decay and weathering and in improving the sightliness of the farm buildings. If the farmer feels that he cannot afford to use paint on his buildings, he at least can utilize cold-water paint or whitewash. The disadvantage of these materials is that their use requires more labor, for they must be applied every year, and if the owner wishes to use oil paints later on he will have to scrape away all the whitewash first.

And now it is the "peace" garden.

TWO NEW MEMBERS JOIN ASSOCIATION.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Southern California Traction Engine and Implement Dealers' Association, held at the Hotel Alexandria last Friday evening, two new members were voted in. They were H. M. Bennett of the Pacific Whitney Tractor Corporation and Ralph A. Spaulding, new manager of the southern branch of the Bean Spray Pump Company. T. R. Henderson, who is succeeded by Mr. Spaulding, is going to Australia. A resolution was passed urging the co-operation of the Southern Association with the northern at the time the latter holds its demonstration, May 5 to May 10, at Sacramento.

A second resolution was adopted to put a bill before the Legislature, endorsing the transfer of the $100,000 appropriation, which is now being used by the Board of Control for operating "traveling tractor schools," to the establishment of permanent tractor schools, both in the North and the South. A school, such as is maintained at the University Farm at Davis, is suggested for the southern part of the State. One of the objections to the "traveling tractor school" is the fact that it does not permit eastern made machines to compete in its demonstrations.

GROWERS OPTIMISTIC.

OLIVE.—The report of the Olive Heights Citrus Association shows 33,822 boxes of oranges shipped for the year ending January 1, for which the returns were $157,453. Packing supplies for the coming season are to a large extent already on hand, so that a general shortage will not be felt. The newly elected directors of the association are: Charles H. Jeffries, Dr. J. D. Thomas, J. A. Maag, P. H. Medlin, L. A. Bortz, E. D. White and W. H. White. The association expects to ship 250 cars this season which is double the amount in 1917. There are seventy-seven active members now, with 667 acres of Valencias. Seventy per cent. of the acreage is less than ten years old. This makes it certain that there will be a steady increase in output for some time.

The great desirability of keeping insects reduced by modern orchard practice, as fertilization, thorough cultivation, and attention to pruning and other operations, cannot be emphasized too strongly and is well appreciated by most progressive and successful growers.

Commercial Fertilizers.

"In cases in which it is desirable to apply more nitrogen in either group of soils, the same materials may be employed in larger quantities in the same proportions.

"It appears probable also from our investigations that green manuring, together with the use of straw mulches throughout the summer in the case of our "humus-poor" soils, will in time increase their organic matter content to such a point as to enable them to transofrm into nitrate economically the nitrogen of the high grade organic nitrogenous fertilizers as well as that of the low grade materials.

EUREKA ENSILAGE CORN

A variety of Indian corn adapted to silo-filling purposes, growing to an extreme height, with a luxuriant development of blade and a fine solid and compact ear; a variety entirely free from "suckers." Our Eureka Ensilage Corn grows to an average height of 18 feet.

It easily yields from

75 to 100 Bushels Per Acre

From a field of 9½ acres, two 150-ton silos are regularly filled each year. This corn has been grown by us for four successive years. It is thoroughly acclimated.

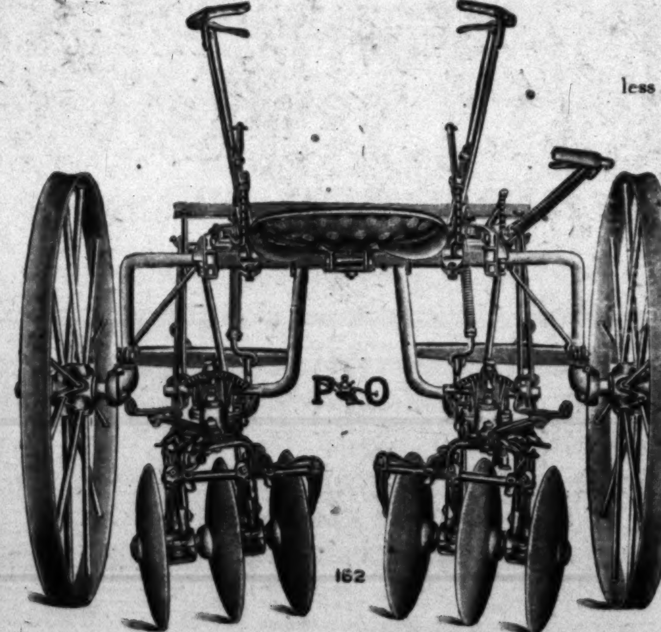
Wiggletail Disc and Shovel Cultivators



Disc can be reversed without using a wrench or removing any bolts. Easily tilted and angled, as the levers are within easy reach of operator.

Balance lever for adapting poise of machine to light or heavy operator.

Telescope axle permits setting wheels in or out for rows of varying widths.

Each gang operated by its own independent lever. Gangs can be given greater or less angle from the seat.

Operator always has clear view ahead.

High steel wheels with removable dust-proof boxes, sand bands and screw caps for using hard oil. Wheels held on by linch pins inside the screw caps. Concave tires. Frame pivoted to end of tongue.

The swinging of the seat to right or left angles the frame in relation to the tongue, carrying the gangs to right or left and permitting work in the crookedest rows.

We can furnish our regular steel and pipe beam gangs with special couplings adapting them to use with this cultivator.

Shovel gangs may be equipped with handles, and the cultivator used either as a rider or walker.

The Wiggletail Disc Cultivator with shovel gang attachment gives practically two cultivators for little more than the cost of one.

Seat rail is jointed and seat can be thrown over out of the way when using cultivator as a walker.

Knife levelers, harrow, front arm and spring tooth attachments can be furnished.

Six and eight shovel spring trip gangs are the popular gangs on the Coast. The cut to right shows eight shovel gang. We can furnish these gangs with flat break offs and 2¼x10¼ double pointed shovels.

OVERPRODUCTION OF TOMATOES FEARED.

GARDENA.—A few years ago the name Gardena Valley suggested a large, ripe, red, luscious strawberry. This idea still sticks to the region, but the Japanese ranchers in the thriving little valley have temporarily dethroned King Strawberry, and in his place have set up King Tomato. King Strawberry is still in high repute, and may, within the next few years, be restored to his former exalted position.

Two years ago the acreage planted to strawberries was approximately 1500, according to H. E. Hashii, president of the Growers' Association of the Gardena Valley, a Japanese organization. The acreage last year dropped to 800, while the estimated acreage this year planted to this product is only 700. Mr. Hashii ascribes the cause for this decrease to the fact that the strawberry plants arrived too late last year and to their poor quality when they did arrive, compelling the Japanese ranchers to resort to other crops. A strawberry plant lasts three years; hence one-third of the crop must be replanted every year. An additional reason for this decrease has been the profits derived from the growing of tomatoes.

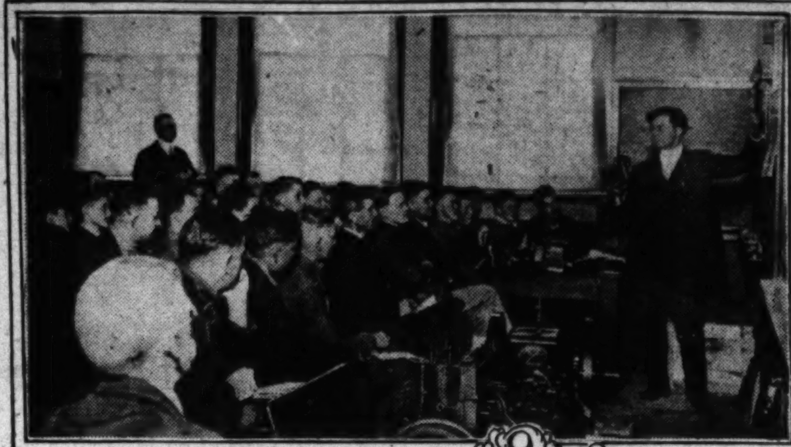
Last year the acreage planted to tomatoes in the valley was 2000. The average production per acre was seven tons, for which the growers received $18 per ton, and sometimes as high as $25. The per acre production was smaller than normal, because there was considerable trouble with blight.

The Japanese growers this year are planning an increase of 500 acres this year over last year, this against the advice of Mr. Hashii. Mr. Hashii attended a meeting of the tomato growers of the State held in San Francisco recently, and reports that the outlook is for a tremendous increase in the tomato acreage in practically every northern county. This means, he says, an overproduction that will cause a great decline in prices and a danger of a market not being found for the product. For this reason, he warns the growers against too great an increase in this valuable product.

"The canneries may not be able to handle the large crop," Mr. Hashii stated in discussing the subject. "We expect an average yield per acre this year of ten tons as against only seven tons last year. The canneries accepted practically all they could handle last year, because the government asked them to reserve one-third of their output for them. This order has now been cancelled by the government, which leaves a large supply on hand to start with. About two-thirds of our crop is handled by the canneries in the vicinity, the rest being shipped back East while green.

"But advice does not seem to have very much effect with the growers," Mr. Hashii continued. "If a crop was profitable the past year, the ranchers go on the supposition that it will be profitable this year and then we have an unjustified increase and a consequent overproduction. It is still not too late to guard against this threatened overproduction, as the tomato crop is not planted until the latter part of April or the first part of May. A very small part of the tomato crop has already been planted. More of the other varieties of vegetables should be planted."

During the five-year period ending December 31, 1914, the Indian corn crop value was 26 per cent. of the total crop value, tame hay, 13 per cent.; cotton lint, 12 per cent.; wheat, 10 per cent.; oats, 7 per cent.; potatoes, 3½ per cent.; barley and tobacco, each 2 per cent.; sweet potatoes, 7 per cent.; rye and flaxseed, each 5 per cent.



First principles in power farming.

OVER HUNDRED IN VAN NUYS COURSE.

"More than one hundred men whose ages range from 18 to 63 are enrolled in the tractor short course being given at Van Nuys by the State Board of Education, cooperating with the Van Nuys high school, a course which extends over a period of three weeks. It began February 24 and will end March 15. Enthusiasm for the study of farm tractors is manifested by everyone of the students, who are being afforded a condensed instruction in lines vital to the farming industry.

A. C. Hargraves, in charge of gas-engine instruction, came from Santa Ana to begin the course and was in charge until yesterday. Tomorrow F. O. Cross will be at Van Nuys to instruct the class in the practical application of the mechanical axioms learned during the previous three weeks. Plowing and cultivating and the general operation of tractors will engage the attention of the students during the last week.

The first week classes were held in the Van Nuys high school. Two days were given over to general gas-engine instruction, two days to ignition and one and one-half days to carburetors, lubrication and cooling systems. During the next week classes were held in a Van Nuys garage, and tractors and parts were overhauled. The members of the class, divided into four groups, were engaged in "shooting trouble" on tractors and inspecting them generally. A forty-acre field near the school has been provided for the operation of tractors at the finish of the course.

The motorized farm will some day be the common kind, with the animal-power place the exception.

Before you buy a tractor, ask your neighbors how much it cost them for repairs on theirs last year. Then look up the Wallis.

Power and Reliability

Power and reliability, coupled with right design, are essential requirements of the successful tractor.

Power sufficient for the heaviest work—the "peak loads" of farming, freighting or road work. Reliability that insures the work being done on time, whenever and wherever the demand comes, and regardless of the conditions. These features the "Caterpillar" Tractor has been showing for many years—providing ample, economical power and giving consistent, reliable service in every kind and condition of work. But most important to consider is the design of the tractor in which these qualities are contained. Holt design—imitated but unequaled—makes the "Caterpillar" Tractor easily the foremost tractor of the world today.

"Caterpillar" Tractor superiority is an established fact—established by the service this tractor has given its thousands of owners—established by the rigid Government tests resulting in extensive purchases of "Caterpillar" Tractors for war service—established by the performance of those tractors in the Great War.

Let us tell you more about the "Caterpillar" Tractor—how it can be put to profitable use for you—how its record in peace and war makes it your logical choice. Send for catalog No. 394.

Careful Feeding Big Consideration on This Ranch.

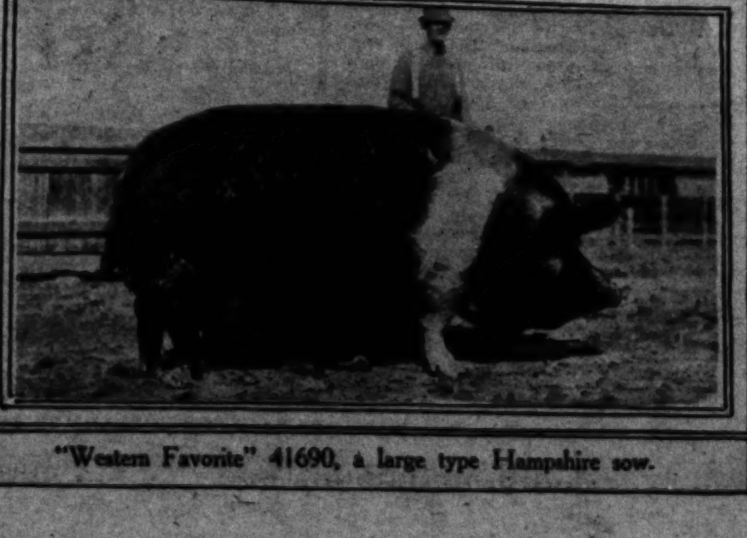
Langdon's Choice, Grand Champion Hampshire boar, California Liberty Fair.

Llano Vista Ranch hog barn and pens.

Bunch of pigs in the pasture around a self-feeder.

A mother and her white-belted babies.

"Compeer's Descent" 46374, second in class at Liberty Fair.



"Western Favorite" 41690, a large type Hampshire sow.

THE Llano Vista Ranch lies about a mile east of Perris. It is becoming well known for the Hampshire hogs it produces. Pure-bred Hampshires have been bred exclusively on this ranch for the past three years. F. A. Langdon, who is well known among the swine breeders of the West, is the proprietor of the Llano Vista Ranch. He is a constructive breeder and is building up an enviable reputation for his herd. There are about 400 head of hogs on the ranch. Very careful selection of the breeding stock is practiced, many high-class individuals going into the feed lot to be finished for the market.

Mr. Langdon makes a practice of fitting a show herd each year, to be exhibited at the Southern California fairs. In 1915 he showed at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco. He won a good share of the prizes there, the most noteworthy being that of Grand Champion Sow. The show herd from Llano Vista Ranch has won a large percentage of the prizes at the Riverside Fair each year. Mr. Langdon showed a full herd at the Liberty Fair last fall, winning a goodly share of the prizes amid good strong competition. Compeer's Descent won second place in the aged sow class, as did Judith showing in the senior sow pig class. Langdon's Choice was first in the aged boar class and was later made senior champion and grand champion. Among some of the other prizes won by Mr. Langdon were the junior champion boar and the reserve junior champion boar.

The grand champion boar, Langdon's Choice 41907, was sold at the Liberty Fair grounds to L. A. Denker of Saugus, thus making a good addition to the already long list of high-class live stock in Los Angeles county.

RAISES OWN FEED.

The Llano Vista Ranch is composed of something over 300 acres, about 135 acres being under irrigation, the remainder being dry-farmed. Practically all of the feed for the hogs is raised right on the ranch, only tankage and other such feeds being purchased.

Alfalfa is available for pasture most of the year, and forms a valuable part of the ration. Milo maize also plays a very important part. The milo is headed, after which the hogs are turned in, making good use of the stalks and any grain that may be left. The heads are threshed and the grain ground and mixed with the other feeds to make up a desirable ration. Excellent yields of milo are obtained. Last year from a field of seventy acres in milo, the average yield per acre was twenty-seven 140-pound sacks, which is equal to 3780 pounds, being almost two tons.

Barley also is fed, it being ground the same as the milo. Thirty-six sacks of barley per acre were obtained last year. Mr. Langdon believes that the grinder he uses in preparing the feed, pays the highest returns of any implements or machinery he has ever invested in.

When the little pigs are still running with their mother, they are allowed access to grain and on being weaned, they are put on self-feeders and alfalfa pasture. When the pigs are about three months old they are taken off the self-feeders, but are fed very liberally, and are kept growing rapidly. This is the time they make good use of the pasture. When they are ready to finish for the market they are again put on self-feeders, where they make rapid gains and finish up in a short time, making very fine carcasses.

DOESN'T DIP 'EM.

The proprietor of the Llano Vista Ranch does not use a dipping vat. He believes that spring is a more economical system, besides being better for the hogs.

Mr. Langdon is a leading figure in the Riverside county farm bureau, holding the office of vice-president in that organization. He is also a good booster for boys' clubs in the schools and has several times offered prizes to the boys making the best records in pig club work.—G. E. G.

4-PULL TRACTOR

A COMPLETE LINE

TO BE BUILT IN SIZES

6-10

12-20

30-50

THE KROYER WIZARD 4-PULL TRACTOR is built low yet has spacious clearance under the body, between its wheels. It is short in overall-length, powerful in performance, and develops unusual high efficiency in draw-bar pull. It is equipped throughout with ball and roller bearings.

With our experimental WIZARD 4-PULL TRACTOR, we have plowed and cultivated the loosest blow-sand land and immediately after plowing same, have gone over it again, pulling a full load without slipping the wheels or having the Tractor bury itself. Work of such nature that would in a short time wear out tracks or moving parts on other tractors, has no effect on the WIZARD, all its working parts being enclosed in oil-tight housings.

It will work and get traction after rains, snow or irrigating, as soon as horses could be successfully used on the same land. It will operate on peat land and in many sections where soil, difficult to work, is now lying virgin for want of a practical means by which to till it.

The much desired feature of short turning has been mastered in the Kroyer WIZARD by a device unique in its construction. This is one of its patented features, causing it to turn itself around in a pivotal manner, when so desired, without making any backward or forward movement (as when a man turns himself on his heel) and this can be done in either direction.

It is quick and very flexible in action and operated with ease, making the handling of the WIZARD 4-PULL, light work. The weight is distributed equally on all four wheels when pulling a load, and it does not pack the soil.

Mr. Kroyer, being a pioneer tractor builder, knows however, that no new principle embodied in a tractor makes, in itself, a perfect machine. Experience must be built into it throughout, from the point where it touches the ground, to the top of its hood. In other words a master mind in tractor construction must be the foundation for producing a tractor that is actually successful. This ability Mr. Kroyer possesses, being a practical man and having designed, built and marketed seven different models of Tractors since 1903. As early as 1904 he built in his second model (size 8-16) an enclosed dust-proof machine, and into his fifth model (size 15-30) built in 1913, he used the live rear axle principle in an all enclosed dust-proof tractor. Over 3000 of Mr. Kroyer's Tractors are in use on the Pacific Coast and in other countries, and they are regarded as the most durable tractors in the field.

The WIZARD 4-PULL will be a "quality" machine and built to give at least ten years' service when used with reasonable judgment. It will be distributed and sold conscientiously. Orders are held for 1200 of the 12-20 WIZARDS for California, with strong demand for the other sizes, and deliveries are expected to begin this Fall.

The WIZARD 4-PULL TRACTORS will be manufactured by the Kroyer Manufacturing Co., a $5,000,000.00 corporation, with its plant located at Stockton, California, an additional eastern factory being also contemplated.

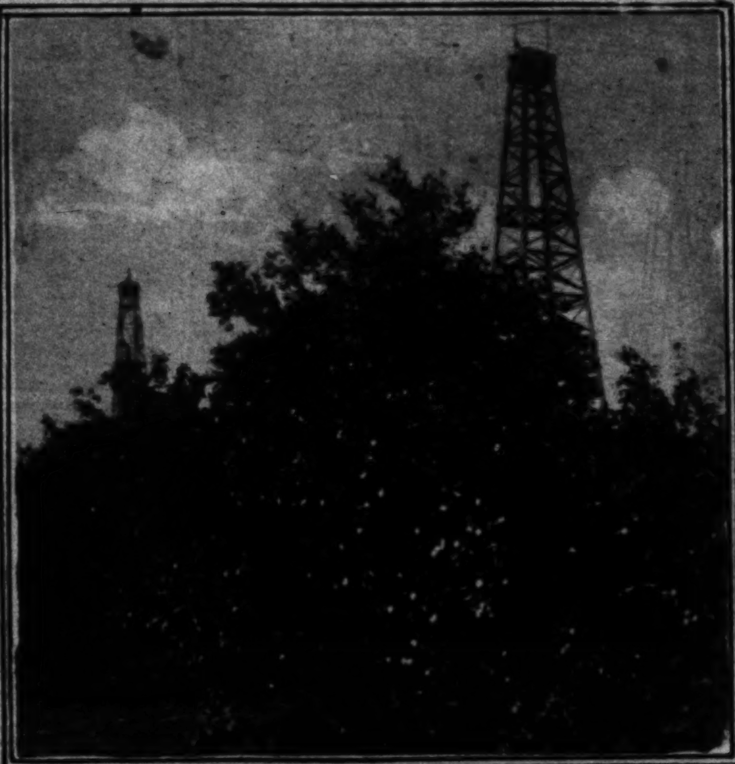
THE MOST PROFITABLE CITRUS INTERCROP YET DISCOVERED.

SIX years ago, the Standard Oil Company, having developed the remarkable Olinda oil field in Los Angeles county, gazed appraisingly at the beautiful valley below, upon a vista of citrus orchards returning owners of the land a bounty sometimes approaching that of the lessees of the oil-bearing hills.

The favorable appraisal by oil experts was immediately followed by the march of oil rigs into the orange and lemon groves near East Whittier, La Habra and Yorba Linda. The citrus growers received the drillers with a welcome which had the right ring to it, and this welcome was echoed by the ring of gold coin into the orchardist's coffers when the rich oil gushed forth from the pumps. And now the favorite intercrop in the citrus district east of Whittier is oil, and the more derricks there are the better satisfied is the grower. Hardly a week passes but a new oil derrick rears its head above the trees loaded with golden fruit, and now the rigs are numbered by the score in the orange and lemon groves of the district. The prosecution of drilling for and pumping of oil seems to interfere very little with citrus culture. The owner is willing to overlook some little difficulty in cultivating and irrigating the trees in the immediate vicinity of the rig, and does not deign to notice the disappearance of a few oranges hanging under the noses of the drillers, in view of the income from oil production, which already amounts to six figures yearly in this particular district.

Many small, independent companies are daily calling upon owners of groves within a couple of miles of the proven oil district, offering from one-fourth to one-sixth royalty —generally the latter figure—for oil leases upon the groves. The depth of oil here is said to average 2800 feet.



A profitable "intercrop." Oil rigs in the Valencia grove of J. Piepenbrinck at East Whittier.

I.W.W. PLOT FAILS TO HALT GROWERS.

REDLANDS.—Growers and packers believe that the attempt of the I.W.W. to precipitate a strike in the orange groves has failed and that the picking and packing of fruit for the long pool will go unhindered. Two weeks ago the packing-houses of Redlands started 134 cars of oranges rolling east, showing that the attempt to stir up a strike had had no effect. From now until the last of March the packing-houses will be beehives of industry. So far 1217 cars of fruit have been shipped from the district and it is believed that almost that number of navels are yet to be shipped. It must be done in less than two months' time so the shipments for a few weeks now will average more than 200 cars a week.

The growers say that the fruit is in better condition than usual at this time of the year and while it ripened early, it is firm and solid now and there is no necessity of rushing the market. The packers have been holding back the shipments until most of the Florida fruit would be out of the way. It is almost all handled now. Practically all of the Florida fruit is now going to southern markets, leaving the east and north open for California fruit. Much of the Redlands fruit is going into Canada this year, more than usual it is claimed.

There is a strong demand for oranges now, though the market has been off to a certain extent in the past few weeks. During the "off" period only 150 cars were shipped from the district, the packers giving the market a chance to stiffen. Cars of Redlands fruit have been selling in the East for about $1500 recently and this is considered fairly good.

The rains have been just right for the orange growers this year, starting early and being well distributed over the season. Some growers who have made tests have found that the water has penetrated down to the big roots and this shows that most of the moisture is going into the trees. More cover crops have been planted this winter and these are also helping to conserve the moisture.

DISCUSSES WAR PROBLEMS.

RIVERSIDE.—The address by Dean Hunt of the Davis Farm School on the problems of reconstruction and the agricultural needs of England and France, was one of the features of the sessions of the recent gas tractor short course conducted at the State Citrus Experiment Station. Dean Hunt spent several months in England and France as a member of the commission sent by the government to study agricultural problems in the war-stricken zone. The speaker directed attention to the difference in the point of view of England and France concerning reconstruction. Last year England's wheat crop was the greatest since 1878, while the potato crop was the greatest on record by 27 per cent. and the oat crop exceeded previous yields by 23 per cent. France, on the other hand, has decreased her acreage of cereals since the war by 27 per cent.

Great Britain's chief fear, Dean Hunt said, is that she will not be able to absorb her army when peace comes. France is making every effort to obtain additional man power. Great Britain is evolving schemes to use more men on the land; France is endeavoring to reorganize her methods in order to secure greater results per unit of labor. The speaker stressed the obligations of the United States and England to Belgium, France and Italy, whose lands, while saved from the enemy, were yet the battle ground where the Anglo-Saxon nations prevented an invasion of their respective countries.

The American Farm Tractor in the Hawaiian Islands

BY H. A. CRAFTS.

NINETY per cent. of the cultivated areas of the Hawaiian Islands is devoted to the production of sugar cane. A large proportion of the balance is given over to the raising of pineapples.

These cultivated areas are worked principally as large plantations; and up to about five years ago employed quite primitive methods in their operation.

But five years ago the American farm tractor made its entry into the Hawaiian fields, and now all is changed; a new force has been installed in the agricultural arena, and new results are being obtained.

Plowing, or the turning of the sod, has always been a difficult problem in these islands. The primitive method was laborious in the extreme.

A gang of natives, armed with sharpened staves, were lined up along the border of the piece of land proposed to be plowed, or broken up.

At a word the men thrust their tools into the ground; at a word they all pried over in unison; and at still another command they turned over, as best they could those clods, which they had succeeded in loosening from the stubborn glebe.

Thus they worked, slowly and laboriously, breaking up sufficient soil to form a seed bed. The preparation of the seed bed, and the sowing of the seed were done along similar lines. But labor was cheap, and agriculture was able to survive the high cost of cultivation.

Then came the mould-board plow, and things improved. Still, it was a laborious process by reason of the hard conditions of the soil.

SOIL HARD TO WORK.

The soil of the Hawaiian Islands is all of a volcanic formation. In color it is red, and contains so little sand or gravel in its composition that it will not scour a plow as the latter is drawn through it.

Thus, in the operation of plowing, it became necessary for the crew to take along a pick, and from time to time, lift the plow out of the furrow and pick off the soil that had adhered to the mould-board.

The soil of the island is also very rocky, and the rocks consist of large boulders. So, from these conditions it became necessary to employ extra heavy plows and strong motive power.

The latter was derived from the so-called Fowler system, an English invention, whereby mould-board plows, cutting twenty-four inches deep, were drawn back and forth across the field by means of steel cables, moved by stationary engines.

For first treatment the Fowler system is still in vogue, just by reason of this excessive ruggedness of the soil. But in time farm tractors will be produced which will successfully cope with this difficulty.

By present methods the farm tractor succeeds the big Fowler plows, and perform such supplemental work as remould boarding, harrowing, cultivating, etc.

Another interesting implement employed in the cane fields is the double mould-board plow, which is used in preparing the trenches in which the cane seed is planted. This plow is four feet wide at the top of its two flanges, and cuts a furrow from eighteen to twenty inches deep. It is in the bottom of this furrow that the cane seed is planted.

PINEAPPLE GROWING.

The pineapple industry is confined largely to the Island of Oahu, and here Libby, McNeill & Libby, the Hawaiian Preserving Company, and the Hawaiian Pineapple Company have very large plantations. There are other and smaller growers scattered over the island.

On these plantations virtually all of the team work is done by farm tractors. And this is perfectly feasible, for the reason that the soil, unlike that of the Island of Hawaii is tractable. The island is also free from steep hills, and the soil free from boulders.

On the Island of Maui the tractor is also at work with good results.

In addition to working the soil, the farm tractors are used in hauling cane, a single tractor often pulling as many as sixteen trailers with four tons of cane on each trailer.

Rearing a Boy.

We all like to take a hand at training other people's children in the way they should go. There isn't one of us who is not convinced that we could do the job far better than the child's own father and mother.

And, for this we should not be found fault with. Fathers and mothers should be indulgent of us and take our concern for the welfare of their children as a compliment. If we were wholly distinterested it would prove that we do not care about children, and even that we do not love them.

But, be this as it may, suppose fathers and mothers generally listen to a few reflections that a man who was once a boy himself has had forced upon him concerning the rearing of a boy. He is not concerned as to the rearing of a girl. That is a job which the good Lord himself superintends.

In the first place, it is a mistake to crowd too much schooling into a boy's mind while he is yet a boy. What we mean to say is that parents and teachers are apt to overrate the idea of forcing a boy to cram his mind with the things that are in books. There are too many boys in these times who do not know birds and animals and insects; there are too many who do not know trees and the things that grow in the ground.

In the second and last place, it is next to a crime to rob a boy of his boyhood, and this we do by putting the shackles on him before the time. In heaven's name let him have at least his ten years of freedom. The world will put the shackles on him soon enough, never fear.

School is all right. It is a thing that cannot be evaded. But, let there be as little of it as possible. Give him the open page of nature, and above all things, be tenderly solicitous of the strings of his heart. They are strings that should be played upon by none but the gentlest of hands.

The Music Makers.

There was a discussion once on the question as to which class of men had contributed most to the world's happiness, and one man declared that it is the composers of music who are entitled to the fine distinction.

When we come to analyze everything, weighing the sum total of all human contribution, it will be seen that the man who contended for the music makers was not far wrong.

And, certainly, if the poets be included in the catalogue of the makers of music, as doubtless they should be, then there would seem to be no possible dispute of the contention that it is these workers of melody who have done most to make gentle the world and to fill it with a gladness next to that gladness which God gave to it when he flung our round earth from the hollow of his hand.

The composer of music is really a poet. Indeed, we would say that he is a superpoet.

It is not difficult to understand how it is possible to make music out of words, which is a condition of all true poetry, but it has always seemed to us a sort of sacred and holy mystery how it is that the music and melody of mere sounds are made. In other words, the composition of a great sonata or anthem or lyric for a musical instrument is surely something that no one can be trained to do. It is nothing short of a divine gift from God.

Music is really the only contribution to the world that may be said to have blessed all mankind without exception. There are millions of people, for instance, who have never had the benefit of Homer's immortal epics, who have never revelled in Shakespeare or the exquisite melody of Tennyson; there are other millions whom the steam engine, the telephone, the electric light or the sewing machine have not helped, but there are none anywhere who have not known and felt the gladness of music.

There are two things only that have been found to be common to all humanity, to the civilized man and the savage alike, and these two things are music and a belief in a supreme being.

There has never been a savage tribe discovered in whatever remote corner of the earth that did not possess some kind of music. The Zulu has it, the Samoan, the Eskimo and all the others. Among our North American Indians music was found to be an essential. Some of these tribes were found to have not only a distinctive music of their own, but a music that is also of much importance. This is particularly true of the Navajos, who have a wonderfully sweet and fascinating music. Many poets— and makers of songs have the Navajos.

And, as for the world of civilization, what would it do now if what the music makers have given to it were to be taken away? If you were to be asked to give up some one thing out of life, would you not give almost anything else rather than surrender music?

Harp and viol, reed and trumpet, drum and cymbal, oh, what wonder and magic the music makers have made upon them. Sometime in a palace, sometime in a dreary garret without a crust to feed upon, sometime in lonely deserts and again in the city's crowded marts—it is there and everywhere that the music makers have wrought.

God be with them all who have passed into the Land of Singing Shadows, and may God send us more of their like.

TOWN O' CROONIN' WATERS.

The town o' Croonin' Waters, I dreamed of it today,
Though, since my feet have wandered there long years have passed away;
Full many a year has passed away since last I wandered down
The pathway through the meadows to Croonin' Waters town.

Many and many a mile there is that lies 'twixt here and there,
With shining peaks of lifted hills and valleys sweet and fair.
But, through the distance fading, they fell and passed away,
And, back in Croonin' Waters, in a dream I walked today.

I saw it lying as of old, the shaded streets and all,
Where from the hillside's emerald breast the tumbling waters fall;
I heard the waters falling with their old enchanted croon,
And the music of their laughter through the drowsy afternoon.

O town o' Croonin' Waters, may God be with it still,
The meadows green below it and the mists upon the hill,
The shine of sun, the singing rain, the starlight shimmered fair,
And the heart of me that's far away, yet longing to be there.

JOHN S. McGROARTY.

Source of Power.

California has no coal mines, but that is a small matter when you come to think of it. Certainly it is nothing to complain about. It is like the disagreeable old woman who died. "Old Mrs. Bones is dead," said someone. "What was the complaint?" asked a stranger. "No complaint at all," answered the neighbor; "everybody is satisfied."

God gave California so many things, and so many things that He did not give to any other land, that we can pass the lack of coal as a matter of unconcern. Besides we do not need coal in California.

For fuel California has what appears to be an inexhaustible supply of oil and a vast supply of natural gas which will some day be developed. Oil is a better and a cleaner fuel than coal.

But, were the oil supply to end, California would still have a source of supply for power that would more than meet any need we can possibly ever have. It is the supply of water that is provided by the great annual snowfalls in the mountains.

If you want to know where the coal mines of California are, look up to the white peaks of the Sierras. As you regard the peerless beauty of those peaks—San Gorgonio, San Antonio, Mt. Whitney and all the others—you may also put into your heart the comfort of the thought that the snows you see are the sources of leaping waterfalls to which the engineer hitches his turbines and dynamos.

The day is at hand when California will be strung overhead and underfoot with copper wires that shall carry unimaginable power to countless wheels and from which will spring countless millions of lights.

Don Carlos Lummis used to say that we didn't know how to play on California. But, he must admit that we are now learning fast how to do so.

The Heedless City.

There is at least one thing about cities that is all wrong and deeply to be deplored. That thing is their heedlessness, which too often amounts to cruelty.

It is to be feared that people who dwell in large towns permit themselves to become unfeeling and unneighborly. They lose their sympathy for the sick and grow callous to even the presence of death itself. How many old friends we all have who have lately been very ill. Well, we never even called to see them. How many old friends have died and we did not even go to their funerals.

The thing for folks who live in cities to do is to keep in their hearts the gentle customs that they learned in the country. There is no real reason why we should permit the town to take from us the things which make life gentle and sweet and beautiful.

Don't Leave the Helm.

Very often a man who has made a success of the business in which he has been long and arduously engaged voluntarily retires from active life. In other instances he is induced to do so by the well-meaning but mistaken advice of his family or friends.

It is a serious error of judgment for any half-well man to retire from business, no matter what his age. In nine cases out of ten the men who do this soon collapse and, as the saying is, "dry up and blow away."

When a man who has been busily engaged at anything for the better part of a lifetime quits what he has been doing, and doing well, he invariably finds himself lost. He doesn't know what to do with himself. He may spend his money in travel, or in leisure, or any other way, but the expenditure brings him neither happiness nor contentment.

If a man be a born loafer, then loafing is welcome to him always, but to the man who has spent his life at work as well for the recompense it brought him as for the joy he had in it, idleness is death.

The ideal life, it seems to us, is the life spent at toil of hand and brain that knows no cessation until the Grim Reaper comes to call at the workshop door. To die in the harness should be the desire of every man. Whether it be at 40 or at 90 years of age the call comes, it should find the man at his work.

Let your family and your friends advise you as they will, but never make the mistake of taking the advice they give you to lay down the shovel and the hoe or to let go the reins which you have held to guide your business.

Why be a Nuisance?

There was a man once who adopted a very irregular habit of life as regards sleep. His idea was that he would remain awake until he could keep his eyes open no longer, and then he would sleep until he was sick and tired of lying in bed. His business affairs were, of course, in such shape that he could do this without financial disaster overtaking him. But, that man became so great a nuisance to his friends that they dropped him from their lists.

The reason he became a nuisance was that he kept them up so much at night that they found they were compelled to shun him entirely. He wanted company. His friends wanted sleep. The last heard of him he had scarcely a friend in the world outside of his dog.

As far as we have been able to learn, however, the erratic idea didn't hurt the man's health in the least. He seemed to fare as well physically and mentally as any other man. But, what good is it to a man to be healthy and even wealthy if he be a nuisance to everybody with whom he comes into contact?

Speaking of Ireland.

Speaking of Ireland, there's one thing that must be admitted. It is always interesting. It is a country that isn't as big as Pennsylvania and hasn't as many people in it as there are in the city of New York. And yet it is never out of the limelight more than a day or two at a time.

A few weeks ago the Sinn Fein forces of all but the North of Ireland took up the attention of the world. No sooner had they quieted down a bit when the Ulsterites broke out into a labor strike and went so far as to defy the British government, from which they asserted they would die in their own blood before suffering separation.

Some writer, a few years ago, said that "if it were not so noble to be an Irishman it would be ridiculous."

Care of the Body.

height, I spent a considerable sum of money for treatment by a skin 'specialist' who gave me drugs both for internal and external use, and also several 'shots' of some serum or vaccine or other, for what purpose I do not know, unless it might have been to 'clean the blood.' And although I took these treatments about five years ago, no good ever came of them, and, I gave them up."

This shows the folly of trying to cure a skin disease by outer treatment. Skin eruptions are due to an overheated condition of the blood, and that is due to wrong diet — principally overconsumption of starches and sweets.

The injection of animal filth into the blood was done for the same reason that barbers recommend hair tonics, etc.

Victims of Experimentation.

THE Sheboygan (Wis.) Press, of January 28, told of the death, in Chicago, of Walter Storm, his wife and two of his three children, following inoculation with a serum "said to be good for" influenza.

Thousands of similar cases occurred throughout the country, but the deaths were attributed to the disease, instead of the treatment.

Again I ask: When shall we have legislation to protect the people against this growing menace of experimentation with dangerous serums, manufactured and boosted for commercial gain, as if they were soil fertilizers?

Raw Green Stuff.

AFTER years of experimentation, the School of Hygiene and Public Health of Johns Hopkins University gives forth the statement that neither meat nor cereals nor milk, nor an admixture of the three is alone sufficient to promote proper growth of the body, without the addition of green leaf vegetables.

I have been saying this in the Care of the Body for twenty years. Raw green stuff is nature's medicine, and should always form an important part of the daily diet.

Inner and Outer Cleanliness.

IN HOLLAND cleanliness is almost a disease. Scrubbing goes on from morning to night. They scrub not only the inside of the houses but the outside also, and the sidewalks, and the bark of the trees on the sidewalks. Yet, when you pass an open door in the poorer quarters, you get a whiff of atmosphere that baffles description, for the windows are seldom open and no Dutch window opens at the top. Also, among the poorer classes a bath is almost unknown. A rich old peasant of the farming class, when ordered by his physician to take a bath, said: "Any amount of physic, but a bath—never."

There are many people, scrupulously clean outside, who resemble the whited sepulcher of the Bible. Many faultlessly attired men and daintily dressed women, who take a bath every day, are perambulating cesspools. Their colons are foul and their blood is full of waste matter. The sweaty, dirty laborer, who digs a ditch by the roadside, is often cleaner than the dainty lady who draws her skirts away from him as she passes by. The laborer's eliminative organs are in good working order, and he needs only a wash to remove the surface dirt, after which he needs no perfume to disguise the odors emanating from a foul body.

Why always "an interesting forthcoming event?" Is childbirth improper?

MY ORIENTAL TRADE ADVENTURES.

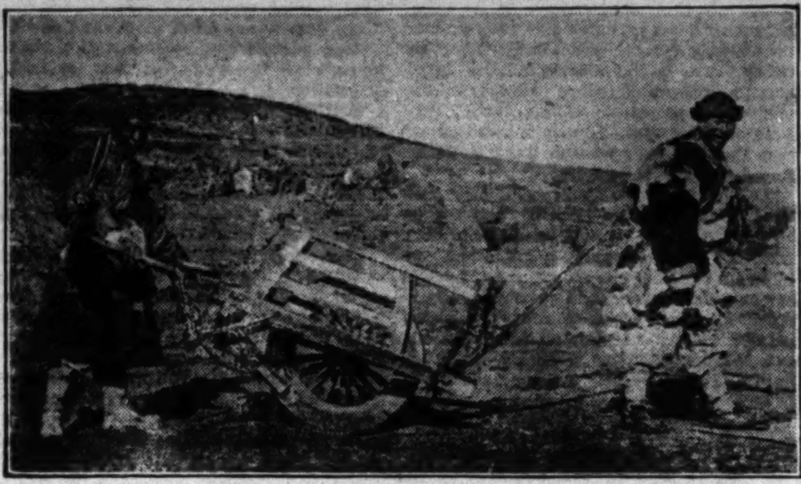
BY A. FRENCH.

THE Orient! That is where our future trade is.

The story of a trading company founded after fifteen years of study, and a residence covering two different periods in China, Russia and Japan, may prove interesting at this time.

I give my personal opinions for what they are with regard to the political situation, and since I've had the excellent training given by newspaper work to get at facts, I consider they have more value perhaps than that of the mere traveler or business agent.

Japan is composed of 4000 small islands and three and one-half large ones, the half being Sakhalin, which was ceded by Russia after the Russo-Japanese War. The islands were formed by volcanic action. There is little soil except what the Japanese have made. They raise their rice and they eat fish—naturally they are all fishermen, living as they do by the sea. They raise some silk worms, a little cotton, but practically all their raw material comes from China or elsewhere, near at hand. She is frantically building ships, for by those alone—like England—does she live, and must continue to live in future. Korea Japan had to have, and now she is taking over Manchuria. She must have this mainland or she is lost.



Wheelbarrow—China.

Japan Doomed Because of Her Little People.

JAPAN has no chance at all in the future for existence, in my judgment. England made herself master of the world by subjugating inferior peoples. She has been a great little subjugator in that way and she has left nothing for Japan except Korea—which Japan has now. Japan may acquire, but can never hold Manchuria or Siberia.

Chinese method of boarding in which no nails are used.

The mere fact of the stature of her men will in the end make her a subject race. No kind of ingenuity will keep a large statured race subject to her. A large man always can flaunt a small one and always will. Japan is doomed; she will be gobbled up.

In this connection I think of a cartoon I once saw. China was represented as a big fat baby, blubbering lustily, but unable to walk, while around him were a lot of little pigmy men teasing him, representing Japan and other powers. Now, babies grow up, and when China does start growing she will be a giant no one can handle—China with her 400,000,000 and more, and wonderful country.

There are some men in Japan who see this, and want to keep China in infancy until they can try to effectually chain her and exploit her.

Japan's wants are simple. She has but 60,000,000 people. Their climate is such that they wear scant clothing and build paper houses.

All boats in Orient propelled this way.

Japan Has to Depend Much on Imports.

JAPAN has little but bric-a-brac to export and will have little else. She will want some steel, some cotton from us, but will take the most from China.

The great and old firm of Sale and Frazar of Tokio are agents for the Baldwin Locomotive Works and the great steel corporations of America, and the Ford automobile; then there is the new International Corporation which is really a part of a bank of that name of New York City. This company absorbed the Gaston, Williams & Wigmore firm and numerous smaller ones. These firms have their banking and business connections all over the world.

Aside from dried fruits, Los Angeles could offer little to Japan—and San Francisco offers that, and has already a well established business. The State of Washington does a good business with Japan in canned milk.

There is no good reason why Los Angeles should not ship the cotton Japan buys from the United States. It now goes through San Francisco and Seattle. And we could be the port of entry of her silks and other goods. That would at least fill our pier sheds, whose emptiness Capt. Dollar so pitied when he was last here.

So let us turn from Japan.

In Seattle nearly three years ago I set out to study the report of the port warden. I expected to find interesting facts, but was amazed at what I really found.

I found that there was being shipped out of Seattle for Russia alone, in one month, often over $1,000,000 each of such things as hardware, tools, barbed wire, rope, shoes, cotton, canned milk, steel, etc.

Beginning Business as an Oriental Trader.

I GOT my figures segregated, compared them with the years preceding, studied what was coming in, and then visited two banker friends of mine with a plan for a corporation to get for Seattle some of this trade.

The corporation was formed under the State of Washington laws, money was given me to open offices in Vladivostok, Siberia, and I sailed from Vancouver on board a ship with little other freight but T.N.T.

After twenty-two days on the extreme northern sea route, where we sailed close to the Aleutian islands and looked into Behring Strait, I landed in Vladivostok; then my troubles began.

The man whom we had selected as Asiatic manager refused to serve. He was quite willing to take the salary, but laid down on the job. An interpreter could not be found.

Now, to be in a great city teeming with activity and not be able to understand a word or to make yourself understood by the wildest gesticulations and contortions is not pleasant to say the least. Suppose you're dying for a drink of water (there is no running water in Vladivostok) and you put your hands to your mouth, raise your head and make motions as though drinking, and the servant just stands and bows and waits—until you stamp your foot and shoo him out and slam your door. And suppose, after a few minutes, he appears grinning with a bottle of heaven knows what, all covered with a label in some accursed language which is not United States, and you slap on your hat and walk six blocks to the German bank where there is a man who speaks eight languages, and you tell him you're thirsty, and he laughs and orders a servant, who always seems at everyone's elbow, to do something. And suppose he returns with a glass of hot tea in a saucer, with a piece of candy resting thereon.

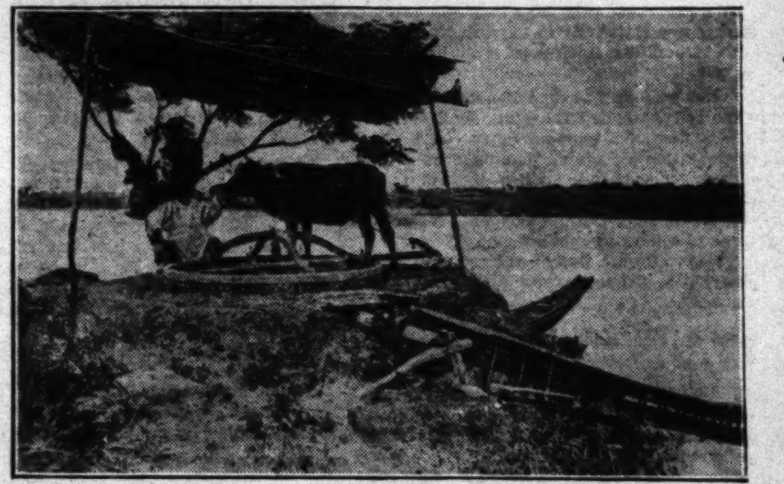
You'd say, as I did, "but I want water," and he said, "water? no one drinks it here. It comes from shallow wells right in the town and is unfit." "But can't it be boiled?" you ask, and he says, "yes, of course," and you say, "how do you say 'boiled water' in Russian?" and he tells you some words and repeats a number of times, and you say it over and over and are sure you know it. And then he says, "better take tea." And you say, "why the candy?" and he says, with a puzzled look, "beg pardon?" and you say very slowly, "what is the candy for?" realizing you have not talked English but good old United States of America—which linguists never can understand, then he says, "the candy is to sweeten your tea," and you drink your tea without sweetening and go back to your place of abode.

And suppose you start to order boiled water. You have forgotten the words. You gnash your teeth and walk the six blocks again and beg your kind linguist to write it in Russian, and a few other necessary phrases, such as "I want sheets" (in Russia you don't get them unless requested.) You number your phases and when you go back you point them out to your servant, as you wish things, and he bows; and you begin to get over your sweating and get a chance to think of the business in hand, international trade. Great!

The Difficulties of Finding a Real Interpreter.

TO PROCEED, finally a 16-year-old lad, a Russian, who had lived five years in Hawaii, was found to act as interpreter. He was good—until you really wanted to say something, then he'd say, "but I don't know how to say that." I found, after I'd gotten so I could understand the gist of what was being said, that he invariably told me what he thought I wanted to know. That is common with all interpreters in Russia and explains the glaring contradiction of our high brow men of parts who have traveled through Russia for a few weeks, and come home to tell us all about the Russian people and what they think—as their interpreters told them, rather. It is to laugh.

I found the Russians eager for all kinds of goods. But they wanted terms we could not give. Germans had been extending long credits, goods delivered and inspected, without a cent of cash.



Pumping water to rice fields by buffalo power.

We were prepared to give part credit, remainder to be paid at bank when goods arrived.

Well I'll always remember the first order I put through.

The Risk of Fluctuating Money Values.

AND right here came in what is called "foreign exchange." Who makes it and why it comes perhaps a few profound professors can tell you. I can't. But I do know that in every country a man's money remains to him the same, but when he takes it out of his country, strange things happen to it—very strange. It represents to other nations only their good will, what they think his country stands for, or its ability to pay, to back up its money. What the money of the various countries has been doing since the war would fill a hundred volumes.

Suffice it to say, at the time of which I speak, the Russian dollar, the ruble, was doing gymnastics on the foreign exchange. What a ruble represented one day, there was only one thing certain, it never would represent the next day or even in a few hours.

Now, to sell goods with a twenty-three day ocean voyage between it and its purchaser, to say nothing of about a month to get it from the factory to the port of embarkation, whether the purchaser paid cash or not, was some risk.

THINGS FOR EVERY HOUSEKEEPER.

BY RETTA BADGER.

[Any information regarding things illustrated or described on this page gladly given. Suggestions from readers are always welcome. Address all communications for this department to Retta Badger, The Times, Los Angeles.]

IT SOUNDS almost like a joke, doesn't it? But it is—or was formerly—no joke for my friend with six daughters and a small income to keep them even sanitarily clean, and, of course, crisp daintiness seemed almost beyond her hopes for them.

"Washerwoman after washerwoman had given up the job in despair," she explained, "while laundry prices were decidedly more than I could compass. Yet tub dresses were so evidently the prettiest and cheapest things for my energetic half dozen. Even with the use, wherever possible, of gauze and crepe underwear which could be worn without ironing, the labor and expense of keeping clean appeared appalling, and the hours of daylight were never long enough to get that everlasting ironing out of the way.

"Finally, however, I had an inspiration and decided to make 'fancy work' of what had been rather tragic. I sent everything to the rough dry laundry. Then I arranged so that my electric iron could be connected in the living-room or on the screened porch, according to weather conditions, and had a low ironing board constructed in order that I might sit in a rocking chair at the work. The rocking chair is a great addition to my pleasant evenings for it is not alone comfortable, but it gives a certain degree of the freedom and variety of movement one has when standing. Moreover anything dropped on the floor may be easily retrieved from its insignificant height.

"Comfortably installed thus, therefore, I do my ironing in the evenings as another woman does her tatting or embroidery. Meanwhile my husband or one of the girls reads aloud and the other girls shake out and straighten the pieces in preparation for my ironing, brush fringe, or pull the laces into shape. If I discover a rent or rip while ironing I pass the garment over to one of the older girls who mends it at once and returns it to me for a final smoothing touch of the iron. Another runs ribbons in the beadings, replaces missing buttons and sorts the work, laying it in piles all ready to place in the bureau drawers.

"Our 'evenings at the ironing board' have become most enjoyable and educational, for the girls have learned to mend thus under my instruction and now—as they grow older—often take my place with the iron.

"Meanwhile the readings of the father become more entertaining and instructive. The unwonted words are at once explained and many points discussed at length.

"The children are, in fact, a bit disappointed if the invitation to some frolic or treat interferes with these family evenings.

"I imagine I hear my country sister say, 'Yes, that's lovely, if you can use an electric iron and are able to send your washing out.

"Well, if I had no electricity, I'd use the other kind of irons in the same way and have the children fetch and carry them for me to and from the kitchen. And there are hand washing machines as well as electric in these modern days."

PEANUT BUTTER RECIPES.

Remember when planning your recipes that peanut butter possesses 950 calories per pound.

PEANUT BUTTER OMELET.

Four eggs, 4 tablespoons milk, 6 tablespoons peanut butter, 1 tablespoon salt.

Mix peanut butter with the milk. Separate the whites and yolks of the eggs and beat well. Blend milk with the beaten yolks and fold in the beaten whites. Brown the omelet and fold. Serve on a hot platter with a cream or tomato sauce.

PEANUT BUTTER LOAF.

Two cups bread crumbs, 1 cup cooked rice, ½ cup chopped stuffed olives, ¼ teaspoon celery salt, ½ cup peanut butter, 1 teaspoon onion juice, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 eggs, ½ cup milk.

Mix the ingredients and form into a loaf. Bake until brown. Serve with a tomato sauce.

RICE WITH PEANUT BUTTER SAUCE.

Make a peanut sauce as follows:

Two cups milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 6 tablespoons peanut butter, 2 teaspoons salt, 2 teaspoons onion juice, 2½ cups cooked rice.

Blend the flour and the peanut butter with a little cold milk. Add to the hot milk with the seasonings. Cook until it thickens. Put a layer of rice in a baking dish and cover with a layer of the peanut sauce. Repeat until the dish is full. Bake in an oven for twenty minutes.

PEANUT BUTTER SALAD DRESSING.

One-half cup sour cream, 2 tablespoons peanut butter, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 egg, ½ tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon mustard, ⅛ teaspoon paprika.

Mix and cook in a double boiler until thickened.

PEANUT BUTTER SANDWICH CREAM.

One cup milk, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon water, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 2 tablespoons vinegar, ½ cup chopped stuffed olives, 1 cup peanut butter.

Heat the milk in a double boiler. Blend the flour, water and peanut butter to a smooth paste, add salt and paprika and the egg beaten slightly. Mix with the hot milk and cook for five minutes in the double boiler. Add the chopped olives and vinegar. Cool and spread on sandwiches.

Make only the quantity needed for immediate use, as this sandwich cream does not keep well.

PEANUT BUTTER COOKIES.

One-half cup corn sirup, ½ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons shortening, 8 tablespoons peanut butter, ¼ cup milk, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 2½ cups rice flour, 2½ cups wheat flour.

PEANUT BUTTER CAKE FILLING.

One-half cup corn sirup, 1 tablespoon vinegar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons peanut butter, the white of 1 egg.

Cook the corn sirup with the vinegar until it forms a hard ball when dropped in cold water. Pour over the beaten egg white and beat until stiff. Add the peanut butter the last thing. Spread between the layers of a simple one egg cake or sponge cake. Serve with a fork.

WASHING MADE EASY.

"Your clothes look so much clearer and whiter, yet you get them out sooner than the rest of us; I wish you'd pass on the secret," remarked one neighbor to another recently.

"I'll gladly tell you. From much experience I have formulated a plan that seems to me to be the easiest and brings the best results.

"About twenty minutes before I am ready to wash I turn a big fire under the water heater. Hot water and plenty of it is necessary. I put the cleanest white clothes in the tub, and cover them with scalding hot water. In a separate pan of hot water I dissolve a lump of sal soda about the size of a walnut and three heaping tablespoonfuls of soap flakes. There are several good brands of this kind of soap, and although more expensive than the bar soap, I find that it goes much further and is handier to use.

"Next I stamp my clothes with a vacuum washer. There are many brands of these washers on the market. They all work on the same principle and are ridiculously cheap. I only paid 27 cents for mine and it has been worth many times that to me; it is really indispensable once you have used one, as they save three-fourths of the rubbing by hand.

"Five or ten minutes of working the clothes up and down is long enough if thoroughly done. I then wring the clothes out, rubbing only those with very soiled spots. I then put them all in the boiler for fifteen minutes, meanwhile cleaning the more soiled white clothes.

"After all the clothes have been through the boiler, I rub them lightly through a clear rinsing water, then rinse in bluing water, wring and hang out to dry.

"The secret of their clearness is in the first sousing in hot water—the hotter the water the more quickly and effectively the dirt is removed—and the different changes of water which is more effective and certainly less tiring than much hard rubbing.

"Men's blue work shirts and children's rompers and overalls can have much of their dirt removed with the vacuum washer in this solution also."

BULK TAPIOCA.

Buy tapioca in bulk and soak over night before using it. It then cooks as quickly as the finely ground package tapioca, while it costs but half as much a pound.

EMERGENCY STEW.

When you wish to serve a hot meal, and have some cold meat without gravy, open a can of consomme and use that as broth for a stew. It serves the purpose admirably.

OYSTER RAREBIT.

One cup oysters, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ pound soft, mild cheese, cut in small pieces, few grains cayenne, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs.

THAT CURIOUS THING CALLED LOVE.

BY KATE A. HALL.

THE four idlers sat about the big polished table in the center of the reception-room. It was Saturday afternoon, and a rainy Saturday. Benedict, who sells law books, came out of the library, where he had been engaged all afternoon, in more or less desultory fashion, in making out a report to his company, bringing in his wake his booted friend from Michigan, just as a red-eyed young woman, shrinking under the gaze of seven pairs of eyes, came out of Hathaway's private office and slipped out into the hall. Hathaway, his dark-ringed, deep-set eyes looking out above conspicuous cheekbones, dragged his thin, cynical form after that of his client and sat down in the swivel chair at the end of the table, upon which he immediately swung his feet.

"Usual thing," he drawled, nodding his head toward the hall door, "going to be waiting at the prison gate."

A smile went around the table but the silence was only broken when Bowden, the soft-shirted Michigan man, without taking his absentminded gaze from the window, ventured to ask, "And do they never wait?"

"No," came from two throats at once. And then some one cited the case of the Riverside bank teller whose wife threatened suicide, three months later secured a decree and the next day married a chauffeur, and someone else put in with the tale of the forger whose wife had to be carried out of the courtroom and then, as soon as the law allowed, married a twice-divorced man at Reno.

"Curious thing, this thing they call 'love,'" commented Hathaway in his drawling tones, "and it manifests itself most often in curious ways."

"Who was she?" asked Benedict's friend.

"Nobody," replied the blunt Hathaway.

A silence of a moment or two and then, from Hathaway again, "daughter of a carpenter, young book-keeper, neat form, fluffy ruffles, shy glances, 'love,' extravagant tastes and small salary, embezzlement, tears, divorce to come and another spouse."

"'Neat form, fluffy ruffles and shy glances,'" echoed the Michigan man dreamily.

How do You Know When You Fall in Love?

"I WONDER if a man ever knows when he actually falls in love," ventured Hallock, the junior partner, closing a heavy volume and coming over to the table.

The clicking of the typewriter stopped suddenly as Selby, the student-stenographer, looked up to say, "one of my classmates in the academy pulled a girl out of the lake. The boat had capsized and she had gone down the second time. He said he never thought much about her until he saw her eyelids flutter after they brought her in. He married her in less than two months. That was two years ago and they seem to be getting along all right."

"My cousin was always a spendthrift," began Gearhart, the credit man, "and all the arguments and pleadings of the family went for nothing until he took a shop girl to lunch one day after a few weeks' acquaintance and she told him, with a big-eyed, sympathetic stare, that $2.50 was too much to spend on a luncheon for two wage-earners. That was when he fell."

"And then?" queried Hathaway, whose mind had jumped ahead a chapter.

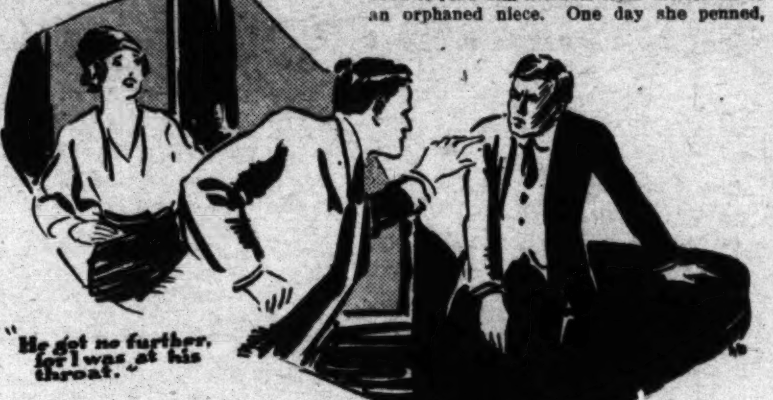
"Oh," said the credit man, "he spent $15 in one evening at a lodge entertainment where they raffled gewgaws and that cheated her out of a new silk petticoat and so, in a rage, she threw her slipper at him—and he discovered he was no longer in love."

It is Plain to See When You Fall Out.

LAUGHTER greeted the conclusion of the credit man's story and Benedict finished off by remarking that the process of disillusionment was probably, as a rule, quite as plainly sign-posted as the more romantic process that preceded it.

"Yes," rather sadly indroned Flory, the expert accountant, "I know a man who came home one day and found the work undone, the dinner preparations not even started, the cat curled up on the tablecloth and a slovenly wife sitting in a corner throwing apricot pits at the fireplace." The speaker's eyes were on the carpet. It was common knowledge that he was no longer living at home. Nobody presumed to reply.

"I came in from the country one day," proffered Hathaway, the cynical, "and looked up the daughter of an old friend of father's whom I knew but slightly and who had ventured into the big city to study art, I found her in a shabby room and quite evidently in distress. I wanted to offer her temporary aid but it was not easy to introduce the subject. When I finally did she answered blithely, 'Oh, I'm all right! I don't need it.' I could get no further by argument and so I reached over and, with a swift movement, snatched her purse from the table. She tried to wrest it from me but I opened it easily and I saw that it was empty. Then she put her head down on the table and cried because she had told me a lie! I think that was when I felt myself slipping. She has been my wife for seven years.



"He got no further, for I was at his throat."

"No golf for a week," interrupted Enfield who had come across the corridor to look up precedents with Hallock. And golf reminded him of La Grange, the cup winner, who saw a pink-cheeked, blonde lass one afternoon at the country club with a broad-brimmed, rose-crowned hat on her sunny locks and who thereupon ejaculated, "I'm going to marry that girl in six months!"

"Well, he did, didn't he?" asked the credit man.

"He did," replied Enfield, "but the arrangement doesn't seem to have been much of a success. One day she exclaimed pettishly, 'Keep your hands off of me!' And now the women declare he's become a flirt, but all he says is: 'It isn't beauty that counts, it's disposition.'"

Gearhart here recalled the case of a friend whose wife lost her temper when a girl he had met in France showed up at a dance in New York and he spoke to her in her native tongue. "You're making a fool of me!" screamed his wife and the end came within the year.

Upspoke Hallock, the bachelor, "But I would have pictured her angry, at some time or other, long before I married her. That wouldn't have upset me. What woman doesn't show temper on occasion?"

"I chummed with a young doctor when I was a lad," said Treadwell, the chemist, once more taking the floor. One of his patients used to read him extracts from the letters of an orphaned niece. One day she penned, 'Oh, Aunt Emma, I'm so lonesome!' and Fairfield couldn't get the words out of his head for a week. She made her aunt a visit in the spring and Fairfield hung around. Oh, yes, of course, they were married."

The Story of the Insurance Solicitor.

"AND now I think I'll tell my story," at length began Renshaw, the jovial and genial insurance solicitor, turning his watch in his hand.

"Go ahead," from the foot of the table.

"Agnes had been away for two years at school and when she returned I met her at the station. She wanted to help me carry her suit case, for it was heavy, but I wouldn't listen to such a thing. Then, after we had walked a block and had all but reached the car line, I looked down and saw her little hand closed tightly around one of the straps. She had helped me all the way. How I did love her then! And there she is," concluded Renshaw, opening the back of his watch and exhibiting the face of a smiling woman against whose shoulder rested a baby's head.

"But the closest kin to love is pity." It was the stolid and sphinx-like Michigan man who now broke the silence, "from pity to love is no step at all."

Nobody spoke. The Michigan man was not a familiar figure in the office and neither was he loquacious enough to make acquaintance easy. And so his audience sat respectfully by until he opened his lips to resume:

"I was born in a small town in a part of the country whose resources are not conducive to the acquirement of great fortunes. For that reason social castes were not very distinctly marked and anyone with a few thousand dollars was looked upon as wealthy.

"In the latter class was Mrs. Meredith who came into our community when I was a little past my majority, bringing with her a beautiful girl whom she had brought up from infancy. This girl was understood to have no living kin but she had somehow acquired the notion that she was the daughter of finely-bred parents. Mrs. Meredith had once met her father and that was all. That she had sprung from a race of kings one need never have doubted when contemplating the extraordinary beauty of her features, which were illuminated with a pair of large and strangely-alluring dark eyes and crowned with a wealth of auburn-tinted, waving hair.

She Taught Herself to Walk Like a Queen.

"MRS. MEREDITH'S fairly ample means had given her educational advantages and her splendid example and well-chosen precepts had taught her the deportment of a lady. 'Walk like a queen!' Mrs. Meredith used to say when she could hardly more than lisp, and since she was constantly reminded from her childhood up that ladies of quality held their heads to the stars it was not strange that she grew up and flowered in hauteur. I know that she once had a slight fancy for a shy lad who pored over his books, but his manners were uncouth and he possessed no pride of birth. She was penniless and he was at least an industrious farmer's son but wearers of the purple do not mate with yokels. Once she looked at him with a hint of wistfulness in her wonderful eyes and said, 'You're a strange lad,' and then she forgot him.

"But he was present on the fateful day when Mrs. Meredith's spendthrift brother came home again to beg for money and was refused. And just at the tense moment when he was burning with resentment, in danced Evelyn with ivy twisted in her hair and a song on her lips, 'I'm a Spanish princess! I'm a Spanish princess!'

"'Yes, you're a princess! You're a princess, indeed!' yelled the man, in a rage. 'Who are you anyway? You with your fine airs and your haughty manners! You're of the scum of the earth! You were picked up in a gutter when the winter snows were heaviest. You had vermin on your body and your rags no more than held together! Your mother died in an almshouse and your father fills a drunkard's grave. The imprints of his fingers were on your puny body and his loathsome blood is in your veins!'

"He got no further, for I was at his throat. Evelyn reeled and staggered and went pale, while her breath came in gasps. I was the yokel whom she once deigned to notice and in a moment I had my arms around her and she was crying her heart out on my shoulder. And then and there I decided that no other shelter should ever be hers again."

No sound broke the stillness for a moment or two and then the Michigan man concluded, "And that is my story."

Renshaw looked at Benedict and Benedict looked out of the window. Treadwell was staring at the floor and Hallock was thoughtfully twisting his watch chain. The door opened to admit the postman and Benedict quietly retreated to the library to finish his report, the Michigan man at his heels. But Benedict came back the next minute to look at some files and Renshaw, who had not stirred remarked, "Pathetic story."

"Which story, Bowden's?" inquired Benedict, "oh, yes, very pathetic but not true."

"What do you mean?" came in chorus from the chairs around the table.

"He's a bachelor. Been a woodsman all his life. He's an omnivorous reader and a romancer by nature."

The Orient Trader.

Furs, seeds, hides, hardwood, butter and meat, Siberia can send to us in unlimited quantities. Siberia will buy from us, when things settle a bit, about everything we have to offer, particularly machinery, tools, railroad and electrical equipment, farm implements, twine, rope, wire, shoes, underwear, explosive powder, dry, evaporated and canned fruit, and steel for concrete and shipbuilding. They have been buying unlimited quantities of corrugated iron also, and much leather belting.

I hope to go back to Russia some day soon.

China Great Field for American Trade.

BUT our trade with China is what I think we should devote our time to almost exclusively.

The field is limitless and nothing can hamper it, for there will always be open ports, for China has such a long coast line, and her teeming millions are always eager to buy.

The great city of Hankow, China, almost specializes in hides of a very superior kind, She wants to buy of us machinery of all kinds—and small tools, such as saws, hammers, etc., and our steel mesh for concrete work.

All of China wants our underwear and canned milk.

China sells us tea, silk, hides, furs, hardwood, eggs, oils, beans and rice, pig iron, etc. A huge business in handkerchiefs could be worked up; also in porcelains.

Besides this, in China and Siberia there are unlimited opportunities for development of all kinds of natural resources. Gold mining, all kinds of mining would pay fabulously. Every sort of mineral under the sun is available.

It is now the opportune time for Los Angeles to reach out for this business. Bishop & Co., here, already have a nice business overseas, and one or two others.

San Francisco does a rousing business with China in leather belting, flour, silks, oils, canned goods, implements, shoes and hardware, and in toys, silks and bric-a-brac with Japan, and in many other lines.

There is but one suggestion I have to give in this campaign Los Angeles is about to make. The Russian ruble is now practically worth nothing in foreign exchange; other moneys are fluctuating violently. In taking goods to the Orient if gold cannot be obtained, the goods could be exchanged for some staple, such as hides, furs, wool, silks or seeds.

fright, were diagnosed as 'flu' than any other. Numbers told their physician they had the 'flu' and told me the same, but I convinced them they were suffering from fright, and nothing else. . . .

"Those who ate 'nourishing food' when they had a fever had a hard time, or died.

"All the coal-tar products appeared to seal the victim's fate. He went down rapidly and died.

"The coal-tar and 'nourishing food' victims very often died as if 'drowned in their own fluids.' Impaired heart action and enforced toxemia seemed to be the cause.

"In one family of four—parents and two strong sons over 20 years of age—the whole family had the 'flu.' One son was treated by a 'regular' and given coal-tar products. The other was treated by a 'homeopath' but was given coal-tar products. The parents would take nothing. The two sons died, but the parents recovered, though nearly prostrated from grief.

"Victims of opium products died too fast to be looked after. If ever a person wants to be alive and have his wits, it is when he has to fight off toxemia. Taking down the red flag of danger by stupor does not make the road safe.

"Strychnine forced the heart, as did adrenalin, and endocarditis resulted in scores of cases.

"Cold applications to any part of the body except the head worked great harm. To put cold on the chest of one suffering from a toxemia is a crime. The body has to give off just so much more energy to raise the temperature of the chilled part.

"Hospital treatment proved disastrous. The records show that the rate of death in hospitals was appalling—40 to 100 per cent. in many instances. . . .

"Vaccination of all kinds proved fatal. In fact, those most vaccinated showed the greatest mortality. Look up the army records. The sight is sickening. The death rate among the picked, tested, vaccinated and serumized men in our cantonments was astounding and requires an 'investigation.'

"Serums of all kinds proved of no avail. Some say they 'seemed to help,' but those who used sterile, normal salt solution 'to ease the patient's mind' got better results.

"Cleaning out the system with castor oil or salines, and withholding all food except orange juice and plenty of water, as long as there was any fever, was the best plan of all, and saved more lives than any other one procedure except inspiring confidence and dispersing fear. . . .

"The 'drugless doctors' or naturopaths scored a royal victory. Their reports are nearly 100 per cent. perfect. They deserve a high place in heaven for their noble work and unshakable faith in Mother Nature as their guide."

Producers and Consumers.

AN INVESTIGATION of food conditions in Los Angeles county, ordered by the District Attorney, shows that food is being stored in warehouses instead of being placed on the markets; that ranchers and other producers are prevented from dealing with consumers, because of the high city licenses demanded of hucksters, and that great quantities of foodstuffs are going to waste on the ranches.

It is one of the first duties of a government to see that producers have free access to consumers, to their mutual benefit.

A Bad Bill.

ON JANUARY 21, Assemblyman Ambrose of Los Angeles introduced in the Legislature Assembly Bill No. 347, described as "an act to add a new section to the Political Code of the State of California, to be numbered 2979b, to authorize the State Board of Health to adopt a sanitary code and provide for the punishment of the violation of any provision thereof."

In sending me a copy of this bill, a friend writes:

"I inclose copy of Assembly Bill No. 347, introduced by Thomas L. Ambrose, Assemblyman from the Sixty-sixth District (Boyle Heights) this city. As you will see, it is a most remarkable bill. It delegates all the powers of government to the State Board of Health, which of course means one man, the secretary of the State Board of Health, and that man an allopathic physician, earning his livelihood because of his adherence to that particular school of medicine.

"This tendency exhibited in the realm of medicine to delegate most extraordinary powers to one man, or a set of men, at a time when we have sent millions of our soldiers to Europe to attempt to do away with government by men and establish government by law, is a curious comment on the weakness of mankind when it comes to matters of medicine and surgery. 'The doctor knows best' seems to govern nine citizens out of ten.

"The bill is patterned entirely after the so-called Sanitary Code of the State of New York, unquestionably the most vicious piece of legislation on the statute books of any State in the Union. You will see by the closing sentence that those of us who prefer not to place our lives in jeopardy through adherence to allopathic methods, will, if this bill becomes a law, be deemed guilty of misdemeanor."

This is another move in the persistent effort of the guessing, drugging, serumizing and carving school of medicine to obtain absolute control of the bodies of the people, to do therewith as they please.

State medicine is as objectionable and un-American as State religion.

I recently mentioned that Judge Roberts of Utah had decided that such bills as this are unconstitutional. "Health boards" are assuming altogether too much authority that properly belong to legislative bodies. Their pernicious activity should be checked.

This is Too Much.

"HARK from the tombs, a doleful sound." The California State Board of Health has sent out a warning of a third wave of influenza, and "early isolation of suspected cases" is urged. "Suspected," mind you. That is to say, anyone who has a cold, or watery eyes, or a red nose, may be quarantined, to provide jobs for the satellites of political doctors.

Haven't the serum manufacturers and serum squirters made enough to last them until Christmas at least? We know that these epidemic scares are harvest times for the doctors, but harvest should come only once a year.

Between you and me, how long do you suppose the fool people will put up with this sort of thing.

Skin Eruptions.

ONE of my consultants writes:

"Perhaps the most remarkable change I have noticed in my condition since I began to follow your advice is that, whereas previously my skin, particularly my face and neck was somewhat sprinkled with small eruptions, chiefly of the type commonly known as pimples, now it has cleared quite satisfactorily and almost entirely. When I consider that this trouble has been with me for at least seven years, I feel that the change in so short a time is truly a remarkable one.

"I might add, since I know you will be interested, that when this ailment was at its

HOW WILD ANIMALS ARE TRAPPED.

BY L. "JACK" FROST.

MANY people think that it is possible to become a trapper by buying a set of traps, taking them to the backwoods and baiting them. These people sometimes try that plan to their sorrow. Trapping is a highly developed science, it takes years of study and the possession of that sixth sense called woodcraft.

The fur-bearing animals of the Canadian Northwest are a clever tribe, some of them are so gifted in the strategy of the woods that even the most wily trapper seldom captures them. They have well thought out methods of defense. Beavers, for instance, never think of building their houses without placing sentinels at vantage points. It is well-nigh impossible for a human being to surprise them. Wolverines are even craftier. They are the wisest animals of the Northern Rockies and trapping them is so difficult that most trappers do not try it.

A wolverine is about the size of a full-grown Airedale. He can be tracked very easily because he is the only small animal having a dew-claw. He has five toes and this dew-claw always identifies him to the experienced eye. He lives alone, has gray fur and is quite fierce. I have used the following method to advantage in trapping him.

First smoke the trap so that no trace of human smell remains on it. Then take bacon and pork rinds and toast them. The toasting gives the meat a different scent and provides the very best bait. Next build a box of logs, about two feet square, leaving the top open. Put the trap inside, unset, and with it stones and old pieces of iron. Run the bait through a sausage grinder and mix it with the stones and iron. Then go away for several days.

Mr. Wolverine will soon get the scent of the bacon rind. He will lift the trap out carefully and deposit it on the ground near by. Then he will pull the iron and stones out. When you return you will find your bait all gone.

You collect everything he has thrown out, replacing it, and adding more bait. Again you do not set the trap. A No. 5, double spring trap, is used. Repeat this several times so that the wolverine becomes used to the trap and does not fear it. Then set it and you may get him. But even with all that preparation he may outwit you.

When the trap is finally set you attach a toggle to the chain so that he can drag the trap a short distance. If you tie the trap to something stationary he is likely to tear himself to pieces and if you don't tie it at all he'll carry off your trap

A toggle is a stick three or four feet long and about one inch thick. The chain of the trap is fastened to the middle of it. Then when the wolverine is caught he will start through the woods dragging the trap and toggle. The toggle catches in bushes and trees and retards his progress. He won't travel more than a quarter of mile at most.

I once caught a wolverine in a marten trap by mistake. He must have been very careless. When I came up he was standing up with one front paw in it. He waited for me without a sound, just looked at me. I didn't want to shoot him, so I hit him on the head with a club, meaning to stun him. Instead I knocked him out of the trap—he was held only lightly—and he ran off, unhurt. You see he had been saving himself, not tugging at the trap, but trying to figure some way that he could get away without wounding himself. I solved the problem very easily—he didn't leave a trace of blood.

Wolverine Hardest Animal to Tame.

IT IS impossible to tame wolverines and almost impossible to keep them in cages. They'll chew through steel unless it's quite thick. They had one in a zoo at Banff, Can.; he crept upside down along the top of his cage, chewed a hole through the thick steel wires and climbed through. He went through the town, killed seven dogs and got away.

Wolverines go around hollow logs a great deal and I have set traps for them in the logs. In each case the wolverine took hold of the trap's chain and jiggled the trap around until he sprung it. Then he ate the bait and walked off.

In one case wolverines entered a cabin that another trapper and I occupied in the Canadian Rockies, ransacked the place, ate all the food they could, including that which was in cans, and scattered the rest outside the building. They even took my gun and deposited it on the ice of a lake near by. They make a practice of robbing traps and will sometimes drive a trapper out a certain territory.

Marten and mink make tracks of about the same size, but while the mink is generally found in the lowlands near water, the marten is in the mountains and seldom comes below an altitude of 5000 feet. To the inexperienced eye the tracks of these two animals look exactly alike, but the trapper would be able to tell the difference even if the animals inhabited the country of the same altitude. How? Well, in no way that I can tell you definitely, but in numerous slight differences. That is where woodcraft comes in.

Mountain Beaver.
Red Fox.
Blue Fox.

L. "Jack" Frost. Canadian trapper.

The marten makes tracks just as if he were walking on two feet. He steps in his front tracks with his hind feet. The lynx does the same thing, so does the mink. But the mink takes a longer jump. In the marten tracks one track is always slightly in front of the other.

The marten is the shyest animal of the north woods. I have trapped hundreds of them, yet in years spent in the woods I have only seen two live martens outside of traps. Yet they are not crafty and it is easy to trap them. Their pelts are light and easy to carry, and are valued highly. I trap for marten more than any other anmial.

They are about as big as small terriers. They are brown in summer, but in winter the trapping season, their fur turns black. They live in trees, hide in the shadows, and are so sensitive to the approach of man that you can pass through a country that is alive with them and never know they are there, except for their tracks and other signs.

Marten may be caught in a home-made snare, which has a loop that tightens around the animal's neck, or a No. 0 spring trap may be used. The bait is placed behind the trap and is so arranged that the marten has to step in the trap to get it.

The snare is made by first cutting a notch four inches deep in a tree, about three or four feet above the ground. The bait is placed in the notch and the snare, consisting of a loop of copper wire, is in front of it. Chips are placed at each side so that the animal will have to put his head through the noose to get the bait. The copper noose is fastened through a staple, which is driven into the tree just below the notch, to a toggle below. It is arranged so that the weight of the noose is thrown on the toggle as soon as the animal goes after the bait.

Marten are fery quick, they have sharp claws and they can run upside down on a wooden ceiling. When captured alive they have to be kept in steel cages.

Beavers are quite easy to track and trap, but the season has been closed on them for several years. As a result they have lived undisturbed in the north woods and have multiplied rapidly. The season opens again in 1920.

Beavers live in swarms, and they build their houses partly under and partly over the water. The houses have rooms in them big enough for a man to stand upright in. Once these houses are disturbed by men, if they are entered by being opened at the top, the beavers desert them and build new homes.

The first step in the building is to cut trees. Beavers do this very skillfully with their teeth, and they can place a falling tree in the same manner a woodsman does. I mean they will cut it so it will fall in the desired direction. But sometimes the wind spoils their plan just as it causes a tree that a man has chopped to fall in the wrong direction. Then the beavers make an awful row, scold and squeal so that you can hear them for a long distance. And they start all over again and cut another tree.

If the tree falls in the right direction, which is always toward the stream that they are trying to dam, the next step is to cut it into shorter lengths. Then they sink it to the bottom of the stream, and cut more logs to put on top of it. They build a dam in about the way that men build them, and they put up their houses nearby, above the dam.

Beaver Uses Dam for Food and Barrier.

THEN they use the dam for food. That is they eat the bark of the logs after it has been thoroughly soaked and seasoned. While they are building they establish their sentinels on the shore in all directions. If a man or a larger animal approaches the sentinels jump into the water and slap it with their tails and the swarm makes for cover.

Beavers are very good eating. Their pelts are dark brown, and soft and silky. They are light in weight and almost round when stretched. They bring very good prices.

The fisher is one of the most difficult of the smaller northern animals to trap. It is a little bigger than a marten, black, and lives on roots, shrubbery and fish.

The first step in trapping them is to shoot a caribou. This is done near where the fisher tracks are quite numerous. The trapper does not go near the caribou, however, that is not within thirty or fifty feet of it. He wraps his bait, which is toasted bacon rind, in a snowball, and throws it up alongside of the caribou. If he went near the fisher wouldn't touch either the caribou or the bait. Each day he returns and throws bait toward the caribou. Finally he notices that the fishers have been eating the bait. Then he places his trap on a pole, sets and baits it, and deposits it near the caribou. The next day his patience may be rewarded by a catch.

Ermine is Weasel in His Winter Coat.

ANOTHER of the small, fur-bearing animals that is trapped in large quantities in the Northwest is the weasel. A great many people don't know that the despised weasel and the beautiful ermine are one and the same. The ermine is simply the weasel wearing his winter coat.

A weasel is about as large as a big squirrel. He lives on mice in the fields and forests, and hangs around ranches. Children do most of the trapping for weasels, using small steel traps, for the pelts are so small that it hardly pays a professional trapper to go after them.

In the north woods the weasel turns white in the winter and has a black tail. Most people give him a wide berth because of his unpleasant smell and it seems curious that this little outcast should move in such good society once he is skinned. Ermine furs are among the most fashionable.

The lynx is another fur bearing animal that hangs around ranch houses to rob chicken houses. He can be caught in traps or snares, or by the aid of dogs. A lynx is easily treed by airedales and then can be shot.

A lynx snare is made of copper wire, sticks, and a tree for a background. Sticks are leaned against the tree, leaving a little space under the sticks where the bait is placed. Two of the sticks have crotches and across these two another stick is placed horizontally, from which the snare of wire is dropped and attached to a toggle. The snare works in somewhat the same way as the marten trap. The lynx places his head through the noose to get the bait and pulls the noose tight.

Foxes are crafty animals—everyone knows that—but they are not so difficult to trap as you might think. There are three kinds, the red fox, the silver gray, and the black fox. The black fox is a freak animal; it is quite rare and a good pelt is worth $2000. I have never been able to trap one, but I caught a young black fox alive once, and sold him for $100.

We have three kinds of wolves and they all travel in packs. There are the black wolves, the gray timber wolves, and the great Siberian wolves of the north. The latter come across the ice from Siberia and hardly ever venture very for south. They are not trapped to any extent because the trappers would have to go such great distances to get them.

CARE OF THE BODY

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

Overeating.

A NEWSPAPER man says:

"There would be more joy on earth if the gentlemen recognized by themselves as dietetic experts would stop declaring that people eat too much, and just leave people to eat in peace. The chances are that the sane adult knows what sort of food, and how much, is good for him. If he does not, and because of swinishness fades from the mundane scene, no matter."

Unfortunately, this is not so. If men led normal lives they would know when they had enough, as do wild animals. Men eat from habit, often not because they are hungry, but because it is meal time.

The mother overeats while she bears a child, under the false idea that she must "eat for two," whereas the weight of the child does not average half an ounce a day for the period of pregnancy. Then, from birth, the child is fed too often and too much, so that the habit of eating until a feeling of "fullness" results is firmly established.

For every person who is injured in health by the overconsumption of alcoholic beverages, more than 1000 are made sick through overeating. Yet we hear much of the former evil and little of the latter. Insurance statistics show that those who are much overweight never die of old age. Excessive flesh is truly a disease. All tables of weight are too high.

Among causes of overeating are these: The habit of eating of sloppy foods, washing down food with liquids, too much variety at a meal, and last, but not least, a lack of organic salts in cooked foods, which deficiency leads people instinctively to eat more than they should, in order to supply these necessary mineral elements to the body.

The most effective cure for overeating is to eat perfectly dry, and never to eat more than two or three foods at a meal. This includes bread and potatoes.

In many cases the craving for food is not natural hunger, but an unnatural morbid appetite, due to the irritation caused by undigested food in the stomach and an accumulation of feces in the colon. In such cases, if you take an enema of tepid water, and sip slowly a glass of cold water, the unnatural craving of food will disappear.

Consultants and correspondents continue to ask me how much of this, or that, or the other, they should eat at a meal. No one but an ignoramus or a faker would attempt to answer this. It depends altogether on circumstances, and on the condition of the body at the time—on weight, size, the power of digestion, occupation, climate and so forth. At one time you may with benefit eat half a pound of food, while at another time half an ounce would be a poison. However, as 99 per cent. of civilized people eat too much, you are reasonably safe in eating less than more than you think you should. Eat half as much as usual and chew twice as long. So shall you improve your health and lengthen your life.

I may add that frequent eating does more harm than overeating. That is to say, it is less harmful to eat two pounds of food in one meal a day than it is to eat half a pound four times a day. In the latter case the digestive organs get no rest, and the digestive juices are not there to prepare the food for assimilation.

Overeating affects different people in different ways. If you have a strong digestion, you turn the surplus into fat, or waste matter, and by and by you go off suddenly, through a "mysterious dispensation of Providence," in the shape of apoplexy, or something of that kind.

If, on the other hand, you are so fortunate as to have a weak digestion, the trouble remains in the stomach. You are a confirmed dyspeptic, and make life miserable to all around you, and you may live to be 100 or more. I need scarcely remark that you need not choose either course.

As to the symptoms of overeating, here is an extract from a book by R. L. Alsaker, M.D.:

"Those who eat too much will have one or more of the following symptoms: Muddy complexion, yellowish or grayish skin, pimples or blotches, boils, itching of the skin, a tinge of green or yellow in the white of the eyeball, frequent colds or catarrh, coated or pale tongue, canker, sour or acid stomach, gas in the stomach or bowels, drowsy feeling after some of the meals, that tired feeling, a dull feeling upon arising in the morning, bad taste in the mouth in the morning, distaste of water in the morning, a heavy, dull feeling in the morning, oppression of head or headaches. These are symptoms of a system clogged and cloyed with food. Some of these symptoms, but not all, are present in every individual who overeats. Obesity (fatness) is always a symptom of overeating."

Deadly Drugs.

A FRIEND of mine, in the prime of life, had a slight attack of "heart trouble"—caused probably by gas pressure, due to fermenting food, and that caused by wrong diet. He was given a "heart stimulant" and in thirty minutes he was dead.

These "heart stimulants"—atropin, strychnine, digitalis, etc., are all dangerous. To give them when the heart is affected is often fatal. When M.D.'s use them with fatal results the "accident" is covered up. Where they are bought at a drug store the death may bring a brief newspaper comment.

In heart disease the organ requires above all things rest. To prescribe rest and heart stimulants at the same time could only occur to the bacteriological brain of an "ethical" medicine man.

It is ludicrous to see efforts to forbid the sale of claret and beer, and even "nearbeer," when any medical graduate may prescribe these deadly drugs.

When shall we have a law to regulate the practice of drugging, serumizing and operating?

Lessons of the Epidemic.

IN THE Medical Summary (Philadelphia) for February, George Starr White, M.D., of Los Angeles had the first part of an article entitled "Observations of Over 8500 Cases of Influenza." Following are extracts:

"Never before has the public had so little confidence in the medical profession or in health boards. On the other hand, never before has the public so intensely observed the newer and more natural methods of healing. If 'regular' physicians ever expect to again hold the confidence of the public, they must change their tactics completely.

"If a general loses his head, how can his subordinates be expected to be levelheaded? Medical men, as a rule, so completely lost their heads during this epidemic that they died by the hundreds from fright or from their own dope, as well as frightening the whole nation into a panic. No greater panic could have obtained had a foreign army been invading this country by sea, land and air. Instead of being calm and using common sense to treat symptoms as they appeared, they rushed to telegraph offices and wired far and near for information as to the mode of procedure. The information they received from 'headquarters' often was the very worst that could have been given, and to it can be laid the blame for the deaths of thousands of our citizens.

"Suppose an army general made such an awful mistake, what would be his lot? No excuses would be adequate. He would either be shot at sunrise or be retired to oblivion. . . .

"Why did trained men and women act thus? Their medical education is at fault. They have never been taught to think along natural lines. Another reason is that the great war has undermined the mentality of many who might have otherwise been levelheaded. . . .

"Many who had been told they had the 'flu' I found had only a deranged stomach, tonsilitis, chronic constipation, malaria, jaundice, hysteria, dysmenorrhea, pregnancy, etc. The treatment and time proved my findings to be correct. Probably more gastric symptoms, concomitant with a cold and

RECIPE MAILED FREE

A veteran business man, who was almost completely bald and had tried numerous tonics, lotions, shampoos, etc., without benefit, came across, while on a journey, an Indians' recipe by which he grew a complete crop of healthy, luxuriant hair that he now possesses.

Others—men and women—have reported remarkable hair growth by the same method. Whoever wishes the recipe may obtain it free by writing to John Hart Brittain, Station F, B. E. 533, New York, N. Y.

When bald

Indians' Secret of Hair Growth

In a vast number of cases, when hair falls out, the roots are not dead, but remain imbedded in the scalp, alive, like seeds or bulbs needing only fertility. The usual hair tonics, etc., are of no avail in such cases. The Indians' method is purposed to nourish the hair and stimulate the growth.

Wonderful results reported. For men's, women's and children's hair. If you are bald, or losing hair, or have dandruff, you should get the recipe. It is a pleasure to observe the starting of new hair, and its steady increase until a prolific growth supersedes thin hair or baldness. Cut out this notice; show to others who want beautiful hair. The recipe is free. This is genuine.

"THE ARSENIC-EATERS OF STYRIA"

BY DON MARLIN.

WHEN travelers first brought back the story that in Styria and Tyrol, there existed people who ate arsenic in quantities sufficient to be the undoing of a whole village, for the purpose of producing plumpness, good looks and strength on long journeys, the scientific world laughed. And leading toxicologists said, "Show us." They were shown, and now the "arsenic-eaters of Styria" are an established fact.

Two theories are advanced to explain the popularity of this extraordinary and dangerous custom. The first:

Styria is an arsenic producing country. When the ore from which the powder is obtained is being smelted, dangerous fumes are given off. The men employed at this work did not last long and the mortality among them was very high until it was discovered that if the men ate minute quantities of arsenic daily, they would be practically immune to the fumes. To substantiate this we have the following statement from the director of one of these factories, who is himself an arsenic-eater.

"Destined at an early age to enter the arsenic factory, with a view of eventually becoming the superintendent, he was advised by his teacher to become an arsenic-eater, as otherwise the fumes from the smelting ore would soon destroy his health and render it imperative that he should leave his employment. From an early age, therefore, up to the time he made this statement, being then 45 years of age, he had been in the habit weekly of consuming a large amount of this powerful poison." On being requested to supply the size of the quantity he was swallowing at one time, he did so, and on being weighed it was found that he was taking "twenty-three" grains of pure white arsenic, in coarse powder. Now the average dose of this potent is a thirtieth of a grain. Small wonder the toxicologists asked to be shown.

The second: It is well known to cattlemen and pigeon fanciers, all over the world, that to improve the coat, spirit and wind of their stock, all they need do is to feed them minute quantities of arsenic daily. The peasants of Styria are well aware of this as they usually throw a pinch of the powder over the hay before feeding time. Seeing the beneficial results their live stock derived from this treatment they argued in their crude and ignorant way that what is good for animals must be also good for man, if taken in proportionately decreased dosage. So it came about that the dangerous habit of poison-eating was popularized in that part of the country.

In reference to them Dr. Lorenze states that huntsmen and woodsmen in Tyrol were in the habit of using arsenic to improve their wind and prevent fatigue. The usual dose to begin with was about the size of a pinhead, increasing from this gradually to the size of a pea. (Ordinarily a lethal dose according to medical books.)

Not an Easy Habit at First Trial.

THE first dose usually produces symptoms of poisoning, such as a burning pain in the stomach and sickness, which when it subsides is followed by a keen appetite and a feeling of exultation. Those who were users did not look as old as they were, retained a more than usually healthy complexion, were long-lived and apparently exempt from infectious diseases, but were liable to die suddenly if they did not break off the habit.

These woodsmen when they have occasion to ascend a steep mountainside, or whenever they have a considerable distance to go, take a small morsel of arsenic and allow it to dissolve in their mouths. The effect is surprising, and they mount with ease heights which otherwise they could climb only with great distress to their respiration.

As to breaking off the habit—it can't be done, successfully. Those who had the courage to try were attacked by palpitations of the heart, fainting, depression of spirits, and mental weakness, followed by confinement to bed. If the arsenic-eater should be suddenly cut off from his supply he is in as bad a fix as his first cousins, the hop-heads and snow-birds.

In England the practice can be nardly said to exist. In the Pharmaceutical Journal for November, 1860, we observe mention made of a village of arsenic-eaters in the north of England, where the mineral is found in appreciable quantity in the water drunk by the inhabitants. It says:

Fish Cannot Live in Water Containing Arsenic.

"A STREAM called Whitbeck, rising in the Blackcombe Mountains, in West Cumberland, contains arsenic. Ducks will not live if confined to it, and while trout abound in all the neighboring rivulets, no fins are ever found in the arsenicated streams. But its liberal use by the inhabitants does not give rise to any symptoms of arsenical poisoning, but rather the effects are those which are observed in Styria, among the arsenic-eaters there.

"When the railway was being carried past Whitbeck, the first use of the water produced marked effects on the throats of both the men and horses employed in the works. The soreness of the mouth, from which they first suffered, however, soon disappeared and the horses, particularly, soon attained that sleekness of coat assigned as one of the effects produced by the administration of minute but repeated doses of arsenic. It is a question how far the rosy looks of the Whitbeck children, and the old age which a large majority of the inhabitants of the village attain, are to be attributed to the arsenic present in the water."

It is interesting to note that arsenic as a cure for the ague was once thought so certain in its effects that the French Directory issued at one time an edict ordering the surgeons of the Italian army, under pain of military punishment, to banish that complaint at two or three days notice from among the vast number of soldiers who were languishing under it in the marshes of Lombardy.

On the continent the use of the drug is of everyday occurrence among the horse dealers, and especially among the coachmen of the nobility. The sleek, round, shining appearance of the carriage horses, and particularly the much-admired foaming of the mouth, is the direct result of this arsenic feeding. When the writer of the present lines was but a callow youth, he essayed to buck the "sport of kings." While he was generously contributing to the bookmaker's upkeep he visited the stables and found that arsenic-feeding was a regular thing at the race track. He was told that it improved the horses' wind wonderfully, it gave them that shiny appearance and foaming at the mouth which the grand stand spectators admire so when the horses are paraded by, and which stimulates the "bookies'" business marvelously.

Arsenic Preserves the Body After Death.

IT IS well known that this poison of all things is the most readily detected after death, even at a period so remote from the interment as six or seven years. After a lapse of such a length of time several graves of arsenic-eaters were reopened in Styria, and their bodies were found so unaltered as to be readily recognized by friends.

A word about the drug itself. It is a heavy white odorless and tasteless powder, obtained from arsenical ores. Its medicinal properties when prescribed by a physician are given as a general tonic. It is valuable in chorea, chronic (not acute) eczema, lichen, acne and psoriasis; in gout and chronic rheumatism; in painful dyspepsia; in neuralgia and spasmodic asthma, especially of anemic or malarial in origin; in the intervals between attacks of angina pectoris; recommended in hay fever. Given in pernicious anemia and allied blood diseases with good results. Indispensable in all forms of weak heart accompaned by pain. Antiperiodic in malaria; in small doses it is a stimulant to the nervous system. That's what the companion to the pharmacopoeia says about it, but it reads more like a circular of one of Lydia Pinkham's shotgun preparations.

Ant and Rat Poisons Contain Arsenic.

MOST of the so-called ant pastes and rat biscuits have arsenic as their main constituent. That is the reason you must sign the poison register when purchasing ant paste.

Children sometimes eat these accidentally and a fatality may occur. In such a case give the following treatment and you may possibly save a life. "Procure freshly-prepared moist ferric hydroxide, or large quantities of calcined magnesia; dialysed iron, followed by some common salt (to insure precipitation of ferric hydroxide;) stomach-tube, emetics, mucilaginous drinks, olive oil, or carron oil; stimulants freely, if much prostration; warmth—hot blankets and bottles."

When oak furniture gets marred or nicked rub with a cloth dipped in iodine, then use a little furniture polish. When dry you will not be able to detect where the nick was.

Missed Hers.

MISS ELSIE DE WOLFE was talking at the Colony Club about youth.

"You can judge people's intelligence," she said, "by their attitude towards youth. I once heard a conversation between two old maids, the one intelligent, and the other stupid.

"As they sat in the winter garden of their Florida hotel after dinner, the stupid old maid said:

"'Look at those young men and girls flirting under the date palms in the moonlight. Why should young people make such fools of themselves?'"

"'Maybe,' said the intelligent old maid, 'it's because they have had the chance.'"

May Have to Settle.

RUMOR has it that Sheriff Cline will shortly be defendant in a novel suit. Seems the man of the law had been scouring the city in search of an alleged forger believed to have escaped to Los Angeles from Denver.

Suddenly he remembered an engagement at the office and being near a taxi stand summoned a machine. As he was about to board it, Cline glanced at the chauffeur and was amazed to recognize in him the very man he was searching for.

"To the Courthouse," ordered Cline, but after they arrived, he saw to it that the chauffeur went to the County Jail.

But the real story is that the prisoner insists that, arrest or no arrest, the sheriff has got to pay that taxi fare and says he's going to sue for it.

Silenced Him.

LOU GUERNSEY was defending one party to an auto collision and was cross-examining a lady witness who was undeniably pretty.

"Have you any idea what caused this accident?" thundered Lou.

"I think so," said fair witness sweetly.

"Then tell the court how it happened," thundered Lou, eager for facts.

"Must I tell the truth?"

"You have sworn to do so."

"Well, sir, I was standing on the corner, and that gentleman turned to look at something and ran into the other machine"

"Ah," divined the astute Guernsey. "He turned to look at you. That makes you an accessory before the fact, madam."

"I—I think it was the—the accessories he was looking at," murmured the witness.

They Should Worry.

"ONE of the most remarkable features of the world war was the apathetic manner in which the German people accepted the news of the final defeat and abdication of the Kaiser," remarked ex-Ambassador Gerard. "In this respect they reminded me very much of Sven, the Swede.

"Sven had been nursing logs down the chute to the buzz saw for several hours when the boss came along.

"'This bane too much vark for one man,' Sven told him.

"'All right,' said the boss, 'I'll send John down to help you.'

"An hour passed, and the boss came past again. Sven made the same complaint: 'This bane too much vark for one man.'

"'But I sent John down to help you Where is he?'

"'Yohn, she aint bane here some time. He vent down be'ween two logs, I tank hè qvuit his yob.'"

A New Croesus.

SOME friends had been twitting Dr. Brougher on the well known tendency of ministers and lawyers to write about unreadable hands, but the divine was too much for them.

"When it comes to poor writing, the ministers and lawyers do not stand utterly alone," he declared. I recall Billy, a small Sunday-school pupil of mine whose grandmother gave him $10 on his birthday. Billy took it to the bank, and received the customary bank book in which the cashier made the entry 'By cash, $10.'

"A day or so later Billy saw his grandmother and in thanking her said:

"'I was awful surprised when you gave me so much money, and the man at the bank was too, 'cause he wrote in my book "By gosh, $10."'"

Obeyed Orders.

THERE is a certain young officer, who, according to his own story, told at the Convalescent Center at Camp Custer, is thanking his stars that Gen. Pershing has a sense of humor.

"Some of my men were Polish and better soldiers never lived, but I guess in Poland life has been one long sad story. Anyway, I never ran across a bunch who took things so literally.

"One night the Germans sent over a three-inch shot that landed square in our trench. In the morning I told one of my men, Pete, we called him, to take it away.

"'Where shall I take it?' he asked.

"'Oh, anywhere,' I answered peevishly, 'put it to bed in Pershing's tent.'

"A little later a brother officer came along and said 'the old man wants you, and there's something doing.'

"I couldn't imagine what was up until I stood before the chief. He eyed me sternly and then pointed to his bunk, and would you believe it, there was that blamed shell. Pete sure had obeyed orders.

"Well, I thought I was in for it, but Pershing suddenly began to smile. He said:

"'I just want to caution you not to order Pete to capture Berlin until the rest of us are ready to go with him. He might go and do it, you know.'"

They Excused Him.

SENATOR WATSON said at a dinner:

"I'm glad we didn't show any tolerance toward conscientious objectors during the war. There was something mawkish about those fellows.

"A conscientious objector said when he was drafted:

"'I couldn't fight, sir. Oh, no, sir, I couldn't kill anything.'

"The recruiting officer looked steadily at the pale, lank, writhing creature.

"'Couldn't you kill a German?' he asked.

"'Oh, no, sir,' said the conscientious objector. 'Oh, no, indeed, sir. Why, sir, ma ordered me to drown some kittens last week, and the poor little things cried so much, I just had to warm the water for them.'"

Worst of All.

EX-PRESIDENT TAFT was defending a certain office holder who had been the target of much abuse since Wilson appointed him. "It's pretty hard to pick the right man in all cases. I recall that once I nearly appointed a man to a consulate on the recommendation of mutual friends and it was only in the eleventh hour that I discovered his true caliber and then only by chance.

"He had come to Washington to receive his appointment and by way of informing me how great hearted he was, dilated on the meanness of others. He said:

"'The other day I went on a fishing trip and before starting, one of the party made us all agree that whoever caught the first fish must treat the crowd. Now do you know that both the other men had bites, and never pulled up their lines?'

"'So you lost, then,' I said politely.

"'Oh, no,' said the consular aspirant, 'I didn't put any bait on my hook.'"

Times Have Changed.

"WAR has upset not only our home life but the traditions of the business world as well," remarked Senator Penrose the other day, "so it behooves you to watch your step. If you aren't careful you're likely to find yourself in the same fix that Jones was.

"This Jones had become rich over night, on war profits and it was with an exaggerated idea of his own importance that he stepped into an office one day and demanded to see the manager.

"'What is your business,' asked the very dainty girl who confronted him.

"'None of yours,' snapped Jones, 'I've got an important proposition to lay before the firm and I don't want to talk to any fool woman.'

"'You would rather talk to a gentleman?' asked the fool woman sweetly.

"'Certainly,' growled Jones.

"'So would I,' retorted the woman promptly, adding 'so you might send one to state your business to me. I am the manager.'"

Born Loafer.

"THE quick thinker and the quick actor will always get along," said Supt. Shiels at a recent teachers' meeting. "I had far rather see a pupil try to give an answer, even if he doesn't know what the question was, than to merely mumble an 'I don't know.'

"Surely we must give some credit to Bobby for the effort he made. The teacher had drawn for her pupils a vivid word picture of a loafer and tramp, the fellow who hates work but always expects to be taken care of, but Bobby's eyes were out the window and his mind on spring and baseball.

"Suddenly he came out of his trance for the teacher, catching him napping was saying sharply:

"'Bobby, who is the wretched, miserable thing who gets food, clothes and lodging and gives nothing in return?'

"'The baby,' said Bobby promptly."

Front Page Stuff.

AT THE recent convention of the country newspaper editors of California a certain editor told a good story on one of his reporters.

"One of our boys had just come back from the front and I told Bill to see him and get a lot of stuff about his experiences, how he won the war, etc. It was big stuff for us and my parting shot to Bill was:

"'Get several columns; enough to fill the front page at least,' and Bill went on his way armed with all the copy paper in the office and a pocket full of pencils.

"Back he came in due season and sat down at his typewriter. After a while though, I noticed he wasn't writing anything.

"'What's the matter Bill?' I asked.

"'I'm up against it, boss,' wailed Bill, 'for the life of me I can't figure how to make even a half a column out of this. You see, I went to him and told him what I wanted and he said:

"'First we stood and shivered in the wet; then we ran like the devil; there was a hell of a noise, and then I heard a nurse say, "drink this please," and that was all the interview I got.'"

How You Look at It.

SOMEONE asked Mayor Woodman the other day if the latest dance craze, the "Shimmy Shiver" would be allowed in Los Angeles. His honor had never heard of it, but on being told that it was one of those you do standing still, remarked:

"I suppose it will shock one-half of society and be all the rage with the other. Doubtless it will be popular with the army for the other night, at an informal dance, I heard a young officer remark after a speed-breaking fox trot:

"'Gee whizz, we did enough running around over in France. I'd like jolly well to have a dance that you didn't have to travel ten miles to accomplish.'"

Headliner.

GEN. PERSHING was astonished to receive last month from a New York vaudeville manager, a five-pound figure offer to deliver short daily war talks in the vaudeville houses throughout America.

The general did not reply to this telegram, and a fortnight went by. Then the vaudeville man wired again:

"Have you entertained my proposition?"

"No," Gen. Pershing wired back, "your proposition has entertained me."

Fire and Water.

"COAL miners are now making from $200 to $300 a month. And don't they earn it!"

The speaker was Samuel Gompers. He resumed.

"Imagine, a coal miner's life. Why it's not a life at all. The wife of a coal miner once said to me with bitter exaggeration—but there was more than a little truth in her words:

"'Dr. Harry Garfield would be interested in my fuel economy programme. Every night when Pete comes home I shove him into the bathtub, clothes and all, and after he gets out I sieve the water and make briquettes out of it.'"

No Limit.

"THERE'S no limit to the prerogatives which lovely woman has usurped since the war began," remarked Admiral Sims at a dinner recently, and added with a smile:

"She has even gone the small boy one better, as I discovered one day while inspecting a squad, or should I say bevy of yeomanettes, at a certain navy yard.

"Often we joke about the contents of the pockets of the small boy, but here is a list made at random from the pockets of one of these girls:

"Three handkerchiefs, one clean, two soiled.

"Package of hairpins.

"Pocket mirror, comb and hairbrush.

"Powder puff, chamois and powder box.

"Pencils and fountain pen.

"Folding toothbrush and nail file.

"String of pearls and necklace with broken clasp.

"Box of headache tablets and bottle of digestive pills.

"Billfold and loose change.

"Receipted bills, time table and laundry list.

"Three love letters.

"Lecture and theater tickets.

"Library card.

"Several buttons and some rubber bands.

"A limp leather classic of De Maupassant.

"An apple.

"A bottle of ink.

"Chocolate caramels.

"Two pairs of kid gloves

"All this in four pockets, and still she didn't look like Santa Claus."

A Future Hero.

SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS SHIELS, while endeavoring to teach a class of boys the composition of sentences, said to them:

"If I ask you 'what have I in my hand?' you must not answer 'chalk' but compose a complete sentence such as, 'you have a piece of chalk in your hands.' Now we will continue.

"What have I on my feet?"

"Boots," was the immediate answer.

"Wrong, you haven't listened to my directions."

"Socks," ventured another heedless one.

"Wrong again, worse than ever," protested Shiels in exasperation.

"Well," as another pupil raised his hand.

"Please, sir," then he paused. Perhaps he thought his answer might seem funny, but convinced that it was right, he gasped out recklessly, "corns!"

"SOME marriages turn out badly," the late Mrs. Russell Sage once remarked, "Because, after the ceremony, the husband switches too quickly from the romantic to the practical.

"I know a young wife who said pathetically an evening or two after the return from the honeymoon:

"'You used to love to hold my hand, George.'

"'I love to now,' George answered calmly, without looking up from his newspaper, 'but it would keep you from your housework, dear.'"

Rhine Whines.

APROPOS of the whines for mercy that keep coming out of Germany—Rhine whines, as they are called—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia said the other day:

"Germany reminds me of a woman who, entering her little boy in a new school, said to the teacher:

"'Leedle Fritzy he is deligate, und so, it he iss badt—und he will be badt, sometimes—joost lick der boy next to him, und dat vill frighten him.'"

The Generous Humorist.

"YOU say you are out of work, eh?" said the humorist, eyeing the tramp narrowly.

"Well, boss," said the tramp, "I suppose some folks 'd put it that way; but, knowin' my case as I do, to tell the honest truth, it ain't so much me that's out o' work, as it is that the work is out o' me."

And the humorist, realizing that the joke was worth not less than $2, generously gave the honest fellow 10 cents to relieve his immediate necessities.

MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

Helen's Acrobatic Feat More than Atones for Her Appalling Blunder.

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"ELMWOOD!" bellowed the guard, slamming open the door.

"Here we are," Warren shrugged into his overcoat as the train slowed down at the suburban station.

"There's Mr. Colten!" Helen waved her muff.

Hurrying up, Mr. Colten greeted them with beaming cordiality.

"Looked like rain this morning, but it's turned out fine." He led them down the platform to a small sedan car.

"Yes, it's ripping day for the country," declared Warren. Then comparing his watch with the clock in the car, "That's good train service. We left at 12:40—came out in fifty minutes."

"The express makes it in thirty-five," proudly. "The 8:10 gets me at my office by 9 o'clock. Better come out here and build, Curtis," with the enthusiasm of a new suburbanite. "Healthiest place around."

"Yes, the air's wonderful," Helen took a deep breath, as through the lowered window by her side came the twang of pines and melting snow.

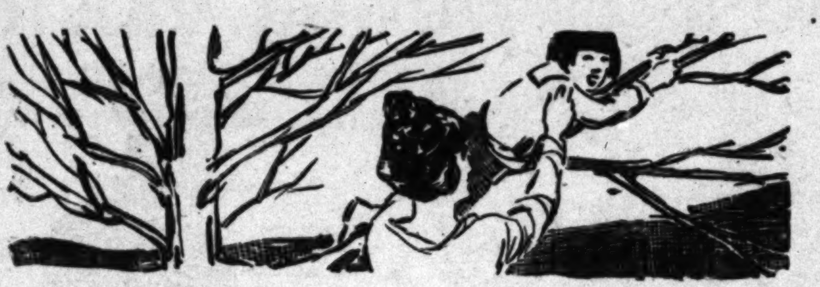
But she must save her enthusiasm for the Colten's house, was her restraining thought. The newly built home would call for effusive admiration.

They were speeding now, for the Sunday quiet of the country lay over the road, deserted except for an occasional motor.

"That's a good looking place," Warren leaned forward for a better view.

"Yes, there're a lot of those Colonial houses along here."

"And they're so attractive," commented Helen. "If we ever build—I want it to be pure Colonial! There's another! I love that type—with the high porch and columns. Oh, it's ideal out here!" forgetfully prodigal of her laudatory adjectives.



"Thought you'd like it," was Mr. Colten's complacent response.

"It's all these Colonial houses that make it so attractive," persisted Helen. "So many suburban places are so hideous—that one just ahead, for instance. Isn't that ugly? All that gingerbread work—and that awful yellowish brown!"

To this remark Mr. Colten did not respond. But the next moment the car swerved sharply. He was turning in at the yellowish brown house!

The excruciating silence of that hundred foot drive to the side porch! Not daring to shift her gaze, Helen stared straight ahead.

"See here, Colten," Warren's laugh was forced. "You mustn't mind anything Mrs. Curtis says. She's nutty over everything Colonial, but what she doesn't know about architecture would fill several bulky volumes."

"Oh, that's quite all right," his voice was studied. "We all have different tastes. The world would be a monotonous place, if we didn't."

Helen, her face beet red, tried to say something, but words would not come. Her break had been too overwhelming.

They were drawing up now. Mrs. Colten came running out and down the graveled walk, followed by Roy, her small son, and a shaggy Scotch terrier.

Fortunately the leaping, yelping overtures of the dog drowned Helen's stammered response to Mrs. Colten's greeting. Still not daring to glance at Warren or Mr. Colten, she followed her hostess into the house.

"You're looking so well. You've so much color," when upstairs, in the guest's room, Helen laid off her wraps.

"Oh, it's—it's just the wind," subduing with powder her still flaming cheeks.

"I wanted to show you over the house before dinner—but it's ready now. It's so hard to get servants out here—we try to be punctual at meals."

Down the stairs and into the front room Helen followed with shrinking dread. Mr. Colten and Warren were standing at the side window discussing the garden, yet she could feel their constraint. Her direful remark was still poignant.

"Harvey, dinner's ready. We'll go right in," announced Mrs. Colten.

As they crossed the hall to the dining-room, Roy, skating noisily ahead, gave Warren an opportunity to mutter a menacing:

"Keep your trap shut! Now, no more breaks!"

This grim aside only increased Helen's disconcertation. It was not until her silence grew conspicuous that she ventured a murmured:

"What a charming, sunny dining-room!"

"Yes, isn't it?" Mrs. Colten was ladling the soup from a Sheffield tureen. "I particularly like this room and the library. But of course, we think the whole house well planned—you see, Harvey was his own architect."

"Of the painful embarrassment of this remark, Mrs. Colten was serenely unconscious.

"Well, you're mighty fortunate," it was Warren who spoke first. "Not every family can boast of an architect. That's the only satisfactory way—to build a house to suit yourself."

"That's all we tried to do. And we thought more of comfort than of looks," Mr. Colten's remark was pointed.

"Yet this house has been so admired," purred his wife. "Almost all the others out here are Colonial—and one gets so tired of the sameness. I really think this Colonial craze has been overdone, don't you?"

"Why, I—I hardly know. Perhaps it has," crimsoned Helen.

"I believe Mrs. Curtis admires the Colonial," observed Mr. Colten, dryly.

"A great many people do, but we always wanted just this type of house. Harvey had the plans all drawn, and the builder said they were perfect."

"This celery from your garden?" Warren tried to change the subject.

"No, but we're going to have a celery bed next year. We want to grow everything! We've such a wonderful cellar for vegetables. And Harvey planned it all—even to the preserve shelves. Oh, I must take you down there."

Their house having been finished just two months, Mrs. Colten still in the first glow of her enthusiasm, could talk of nothing else. So Helen's appalling break was kept constantly before them.

While they lingered over the coffee, Roy was bundled up and sent out to play with his kite.

Helen seized this opening to dwell on the advantages of the country for a growing boy. But even that alluring topic could not divert Mrs. Colten from the house, Roy's room and the glass-inclosed porch where he played on rainy days—another of Harvey's architectural ideas.

"Now, we'll show you over the house," when finally they rose from the table.

"Mamma! Mamma! Mamma!"

Following the piercing shrieks, they all rushed out through the long side porch to the back yard.

There, on the topmost limb of a tall but decrepit tree, clung the terrified Roy. He had climbed up to free his entangled kite, but the rotten limb was breaking beneath him.

While Mrs. Colten screamed hysterical directions, her husband, having ripped off his coat, was already half way up the tree.

"Careful, Colten—that's rotten" shouted Warren.

Reaching the slender limb beneath his son, an ominous splintering sound proved it would not bear his weight.

"You can't do it—it won't hold you! Make him crawl back to you!"

But Roy was too frightened to move. He could only cling to the breaking bough, yelling lustily. His father was making desperate efforts to reach him, but each time he stepped out on the limb below, it cracked warningly.

Helen, who had been gazing up with clasped hands, now made a dash for the tree. Before they grasped her intention, with swift flexibility she had scrambled up to the first low limb and was making for the second.

"I'm light! It'll hold me," she flung back at Warren's wrathful shouted protests.

All the dexterity of her tree-climbing childhood came back as, in spite of restricting skirts, she mounted higher and higher, the wide spreading boughs making easy the ascent.

Mr. Colten's white face strained down through the leafless branches. To let her pass he now stepped out on a stronger backward-jutting limb.

Neither spoke, but she felt his breathless tension as she tested her lighter weight on the treacherous limb below Roy. It swayed but did not crack. The child's screams subsided as he watched her progress toward him.

"Now, Roy, do just as I say," forcing a soothing calm. "Now, crawl back slowly!" Holding to the thick branches with one hand she gripped his arm with the other. "No it won't break any more—if it does, I've got you."

Her heart beat in her throat, for she knew if it did give way, the limb on which she stood would not hold them both. But emboldened by her assurance, Roy crawled safely back until he neared the trunk, where his father caught him.

Disheveled, flushed, her gown torn, her hair tumbling down—Helen reached the ground.

Mrs. Colten, sobbing hysterically, released Roy long enough to throw her arms about Helen in excited incoherent, gratitude.

"We can't thank you, Mrs. Curtis—we won't try," it was Mr. Colten, who now grasped both her hands, his voice huskily unsteady. "But if there's anything I can ever do for you or Curtis—"

To check the welling of emotional tears, Helen turned blindly to Warren, who promptly relieved the surcharged atmosphere with a brusque:

"Now, no Carnegie medals for just shinning up a tree! It's tough on Colten and me that we're both heavyweights. Here, come on and fix your hair—you look a sight!"

As he swept her back to the house ahead of the others, Helen clung to him with a fluttering, whispered:

"Oh, if that will only make up for—for my awful break!"

"Make up. Why, you've got Colten eating out of your hand! That was mighty plucky, Kitten, and I'm darn proud of you," as, in the shelter of the doorway, he stooped to kiss her. "Now, run on and doll up—before you lose your back hair!"

I Will Rest Here.

By George Fawcett.

I will rest here awhile!
That bank is moss grown
And above me
A bird sings a cheerful song.
It is peace.

Why should I go back?
Envy cannot venture here,
Nor cozening ambition
With its insistent prod;
Why always race and race,
Beat and be beaten?
Yes, I'll rest here awhile.

Is it because I am sore
And tired,
That yon glimpse of God's beauty
Is manna to a wearied soul?
Is it because success
Power and Triumph too
Have palled,
Have been found recreant
And left me sickened?

Or is it because failure
Has battered my jaded hulk
And sweetened my soaring soul
That I am tottering feebly
To you God?

In this span of life given me
Is it because
That I know now
That I know naught
And with a thrill of awe
I sink here
As helpless as a little child
And nestle close to Him?

TOOLS FOR THE HOUSEFATHER.

BY W. S. DAVENPORT.

THE English and Americans have a love for good tools that one does not find among the French and Germans, good mechanics as they both are. From Los Angeles to the west end of London you will find men of the English speaking races looking into hardware shop windows at well made and wonderfully ingenious tools. Our American tools were largely imported from England in former days, but now we export to England, because we have outstripped the mother country in the quality of tools. The finest mechanics of the world are said by the London Times to be those of Massachusetts. They have the finest tools in the world to work with. Not all our tools are better, the Sheffield pocket knives may be no better than our best, but they are more certain to be good than the average of our make. An American hammer, bitstock and plane are better than any made in England and may be seen in London in many shops. The British amateur mechanic runs rather to edged tools where we go in for ingenious automatic devices such as the screw driver that only needs to be pushed.

The American plane is one of the most seductive tools in existence. I have known a minister calling on one of his flock to be so fascinated by a new model of a plane that he went off and bought one like it, although he had no use for it at all.

I suspect that many of us buy tools first and then seek for a chance to use them. I look at the handsaws, bitstocks and planes in the windows and wish I had some use for them. The tools that I actually cannot get along without are quite different.

What to Take on a Vacation.

IF I WERE packing a large bag to go off for a semester somewhere and live my usual life, I should pack two whetstones, a pair of small scales and a bradawl. I have noticed that Englishmen who go to the continent for a year, take along a gluepot and a set of water color paints. All of them without an exception were prepared for bruises and digestion troubles with Ellman's Embrecation and Eno's Fruit Salts. The Americans, queerly enough, were expecting the same ills, for they usually had a bottle of Jamaica ginger and one of hamamelis.

I find use at long intervals for a compass and drawing pen. I use often a hammer, wire-cutter, rule, a cold chisel to open boxes, a bradawl to screw up eyeglasses, and a pocket knife. Out here in the West, men like a large jack-knife because the handle is large and also because they used one as a boy. I have one myself, but the big blade is worse than useless. It rusts from lack of use and has to be cleaned at frequent intervals. We overgrown boys need a big knife with two small blades, unless we are cutting something more than lead pencils and finger nails.

A Set of Tools All in One.

THESE patent bradawls with a set of tools in the handle attract many men. I myself have no use for the things they contain except one small bradawl. I have my doubts whether any one much needs the things in those nice nickeled, rosewood handles. My schoolmaster bought three of them one after another. He had a fine cabinet of tools, but he seemed to me to be in a contnuous state of going to start doing something next week. Meanwhile he showed them to all male callers and this was really the use he put them to.

These hardware dealers show us tools that are nice to look at but not always what we really need. They go in for too many carpenter's and metal worker's tools. There are other mechanical trades also suited to the amateur for home hobbies.

At one time in my life I had a spell of doing book-binding at home, and I got a complete outfit of tools for it. Book-binding at home is extremely interesting and useful. Not that one binds many books, but there are other things one can make easily and quickly, that are useful to have. With pasteboard, calico, paper, leather, a gluepot and a press, one can make boxes, blotting pads, writing cases and once I made an enlarging camera. There are dealers in large cities that sell hides of morocco and sheepskin for making limp desk blotters and cases. The bood-binder uses his glue with great skill. No thick cold liquid stuff for him. He is an epicure about his glue, and he handles paste with the fascinating skill of a wall-paper hanger or a photographer.

A Housefather's Exhibit of Tools Needed.

WHAT we need is an exhibition of tools of all sorts and with them the things that have been made with those tools. A housefather's exhibit, not a carpenter's or lathe worker's. There are tools made for shoemakers, harness makers and sailmakers that are useful round the house. In this country we have to be jacks-of-all-trades, because it costs too much to send for a mechanic when a thing goes wrong in the house.

Microscopes are a good household toy.

Many of these tools in the hardware windows are useful only if we have a work bench and vise. The garage offers a place for these, but there is less fun in pottering about a motor car and we do it not for the fun in it, but as a nasty job to be got rid of. It is one thing to stand erect and peel off nice aromatic clean shavings from a board, and another to bend over a car, with the hands all covered with black oil. The garage is not a pleasant lounging place like a boat-builder's shop. Even a boat yard is better in the spring when we scrape and paint and think of the coming summer sails. Machinery that runs by power is a soulless thing that is not attractive when its inwardness is exposed.

We could do much more with these carpenter's tools if we had more knock down half finished things to be put together with a few common tools. We have knock down boats, but no known down furniture. A woodsman can take an axe, a wedge and a few spikes and build himself not only a log cabin, but also the furniture for it. He can split logs and make a bunk, a table and chairs, etc. This furniture has a definite style.

There is another style a little more conventional that can be made with no other tools than a saw and a bitstock, a hammer, screw driver and wrench, with a pile of lumber and screws and bolts. Bolts and screws take the place of mortises, tenons and glue. This furniture is cheap to make and it suits a summer camp or any informal home that is between the primitive log cabin and the ordinary home. For instance a bedstead can be made by getting out four pieces of upright joist to which two horizontal pieces are bolted at the ends to hold the frame of the spring mattress. Two boards down the sides complete the bedstead. A comfortable chair can be made of four pieces of board, one long piece serves as inclined back and front legs, a second is seat and two more support the seat and act as back legs.

This style of bolted together furniture can be made at home with these tools we see in windows, saw, plane and bitstock, wrench, hammer and screw driver. If we had the lumber got out to the right dimensions by carpenters and furniture makers we could all put it together. Every article of furniture can be caricatured in this style. It is distinct from ordinary furniture in having no joining. There are two distinct pleasures in making this furniture, that of designing it within the limits of the tools and material employed, and the adaptation of material meant for a wholly different purpose. For instance a good ice box to hold a 10 cent piece of ice can be made of a cracker can packed in a box of sawdust. A writing desk can be made from a piano packing case. Dovetailed ammunition boxes can be made to serve as drawers, etc., etc.

Learning How to Make Use of Tools.

THE jack-of-all-trades family father can get points by watching professionals use tools. A doctor uses absorbent cotton for corks, filter paper and for a small brush. A chemist uses copper wire in place of string to bind things together. It is much better than string for many purposes. The lens a watchmaker uses continually would be a useful tool for all of us now and then when we have a bit of fine work that keeps both hands busy. The things a bookbinder does with glue and paste are marvelous. The tinsmith has many ingenious uses for tinned iron held together with solder. We could use more than we do the awls and needles of the saddler and shoemaker. Tools made for professionals are always practical and nearly always suited to the amateur. Barbers' razors are an exception, they require more skill than we have.

On the other hand if we want the most watch for the money we shall do well to ask the railroad conductor what sort of a watch he carries. We shall find that he paid $38 for the works and $2 for the nickel case. Uncle Sam's things are good to buy. The pistol he chooses for his soldiers will do for us round the house. The bullet is so large that the shock it gives makes an opponent instantly harmless. The riot shotgun introduced into warfare for close range work is a fine household weapon, so intimidating that it need never be fired.

The Implements Needed For Fads.

THERE are other things, not exactly tools but serving the same purpose of amusement round the house. that remain to be considered. The English are very fond of dabbling with water color paints and with optical instruments. If they cannot paint well enough to design an original work of art, they copy good designs that have been reproduced. Our college girls copy Gibson's pen and ink drawings in the same spirit. It is a skillful use of pleasant tools, almost as rational as playing on the piano or violin a piece some one has composed who is a real artist. There are paintings which owe their merit to the skill with which very few strokes express a good deal, and these are not hard to copy.

Optical instruments round the house are neglected in America. The Europeans have a three-inch astronomical telescope that is mounted on short legs for use on a table top, costing from $25 to $75 that is a fine toy to study the heavens and also for terrestrial observations. We are good amateur astronomers in America, none better anywhere, but the use of telescopes is not so general in our country. A first quality three-inch glass costs $150 with us, but if there were a demand we should turn them out as cheaply as Europe does. Smaller glasses will show a good deal of the heavens that the naked eye does not see. A deer-stalking draw telescope with a one-and-a-half-inch objective, or a two-inch coastguard's spyglass will magnify from twenty-five to forty times. That gives you, instead of an image of the moon only one inch in diameter as seen with the naked eye, an image two or three feet in diameter, and a lot of detail is to be seen in such an image. These glasses show the moons of Jupiter, the crescent shape of Venus, the spots on the sun, many double stars, and a good one in the hands of an observer with good eyesight will even show the rings of Saturn, a sight that has started many a man on amateur astromony

Microscopes Make a Fine Household Toy.

MICROSCOPES are a good household toy. They do not need the high power objectives used by medical men. With low powers many secrets can be discovered in the composition of things. A chemist uses a microscope as a sort of Sherlock Holmes. The microscope used by crystallographers has an attachment for polarizing light. With it some magnificent phenomena can be followed. The crystallizing of a supersaturated solution under polarized light is a fine sight. It is a good hobby for a person confined to the house.

We Americans follow the fashions of the moment blindly along a narrow path marked out for us by manufacturers who offer us a limited choice of toys for riding our hobby horses. In France it is the same. but it is because the French do not spend much money for such things. One French and one American company supply all the photographic apparatus used in France.

England has Variety of Photographic Material.

IN ENGLAND and in Germany there is a wonderful variety in such apparatus. The English have been wealthy spenders longer than we have, and they have brought the business of catering for hobbies to a high art. They have the same compact machine-made folding cameras that we use, but they also have most luxurious and expensive cameras using small glass plates in a changing box, and a standard model field camera, 6½x4¾ inches that sells for seventy shillings complete and is very satisfactory for making serious photographs such as a professional makes.

Glass plates are cheaper than films and nicer to handle in several ways. Three and a quarter by four and a quarter glass plates cost a shilling a dozen, and a dozen are not too heavy to carry about in a changing box. If the reader is interested in learning about the best apparatus used all over the world, he can find it in the British Journal of Photography Almanac, issued every year in London and sold for a shilling.

Southern California is a grand place for the hobby of gardening. I respect the hoes and trowels I see in the hardware shop windows and the reels of garden hose. Personally I like to ride this hobby as Artemus Ward did. He went to the shady side of a haystack after dinner and watched his hired man work. By cautiously increasing the amount of this exercise he finally got so that he could watch six men without overexertion. I watch thousands of them, all appearing to be altruistically keeping up their gardens for my benefit.

The amateur appears to get great satisfaction in growing things not natural to the climate. There is one thing we might possibly grow more than we do—mushrooms. They are ordinarily unpleasant to cultivate, because they need a cave or cellar, but in our even climate they might grow out of doors on our grass lawns.

WITH THE HELP OF PINKY McGRAW

BY BART WHEELER.

"WHERE'D yuh get the new strides?" asked Slim Drew of Pinkey McGraw, as they entered Humpy Kelly's saloon.

"I wuz out throwin' me feet the other day an' I got 'em handed tuh me by a friend."

At this explanation of his friend's rejuvenation Slim laughed, ahd as they bellied up to the bar Slim remarked with a grin, "Whoever wished 'em ontuh yuh musta wanted yuh tuh do a circus ack—they stick tuh yuh like a brother."

"Tha's a'right,' defended Pinkey. "'F yuh know the little gag wot wuz connected wit' 'em yuh wouldn't be pannin' me about 'em."

"W'y?" asked Slim, scenting an interesting tid-bit.

"Cause I got 'em from a little dame wot sure made me feel like uh man fer wunst in me life."

At this juncture Humpy approached them, coldly looked at the lone dime Pinkey threw on the bar, and inquired, "Beer?"

"Sure," voiced Pinkey and Slim, simultaneously, and Pinkey added, "Wotta yuh tink we want—condensed milk?"

Humpy merely grunted as he drew the two foaming glasses of beer and set them before our heroes.

Swallowing a copious draught, Slim ventured:

"Well seein' as yuh don't hafta see yer banker or frame a live one fer uh frisk give us an earful uv how yer frien' fell fer yer line o' sad news."

"Say," retorted Pinkey, "I'm gonna tell yuh about uh real dame—uh real broad wot I helped wunst, an' wots as good uh dame now as yuh ever see!"

"Shoot," said Slim.

And Pinkey began:

"Wunst w'en I wuz slinging suds in uh joint at Coney Island, uh joint wit' sawdust on the floor, packed wit' vest-greasin' tables, wot wuz so soaked wit' suds (beer) an' hooch thut uh fly wud tink 's wuz doin' uh skatin' ack on uh thin dime's wort' o' fly paper if 'e ever lit on one ux 'em. It wuz uh hangout fer most uh the dips, coke peddlers, an' slickers on the island, an' believe me, Bo, they wuz uh hard boiled bunch uh murderers."

"Uh guy named 'Frosty' Levy run the dump an' 'is monaker sure fit 'im. He wuz the coldest hearted stiff I ever see. The dump I'm tellin' yuh about had uh bunch of boxes in ut, w'ere the live ones wud come wit women an' I wuz peddlin' suds in four uv these boxes."

"One night, uh guy wot they called 'The Deuce' come in an' I sees 'im chewin' the fat with 'Frosty,' an' 'Frosty' keeps noddin' 'is head, an they bot seemed tuh connect on sumpin', cause they shake hands an' have uh coupla drinks an' 'The Deuce' beats ut out."

Pinkey stopped in his narrative, reflected for a while, and finally confided: "Yuh've always knew me fer uh purty no-good guy, ain't yuh, Slim?"

Slim answered in the affirmative and Pinkey continued:

"Well, I guess I've did my share uv stealin' an' boozin' an' raisin' hell generally, but the first time I see this guy 'The Deuce' I never had no use for 'im, an' I'm dam sure I never wuz as rotten as 'im."

"W'y not?" asked Slim.

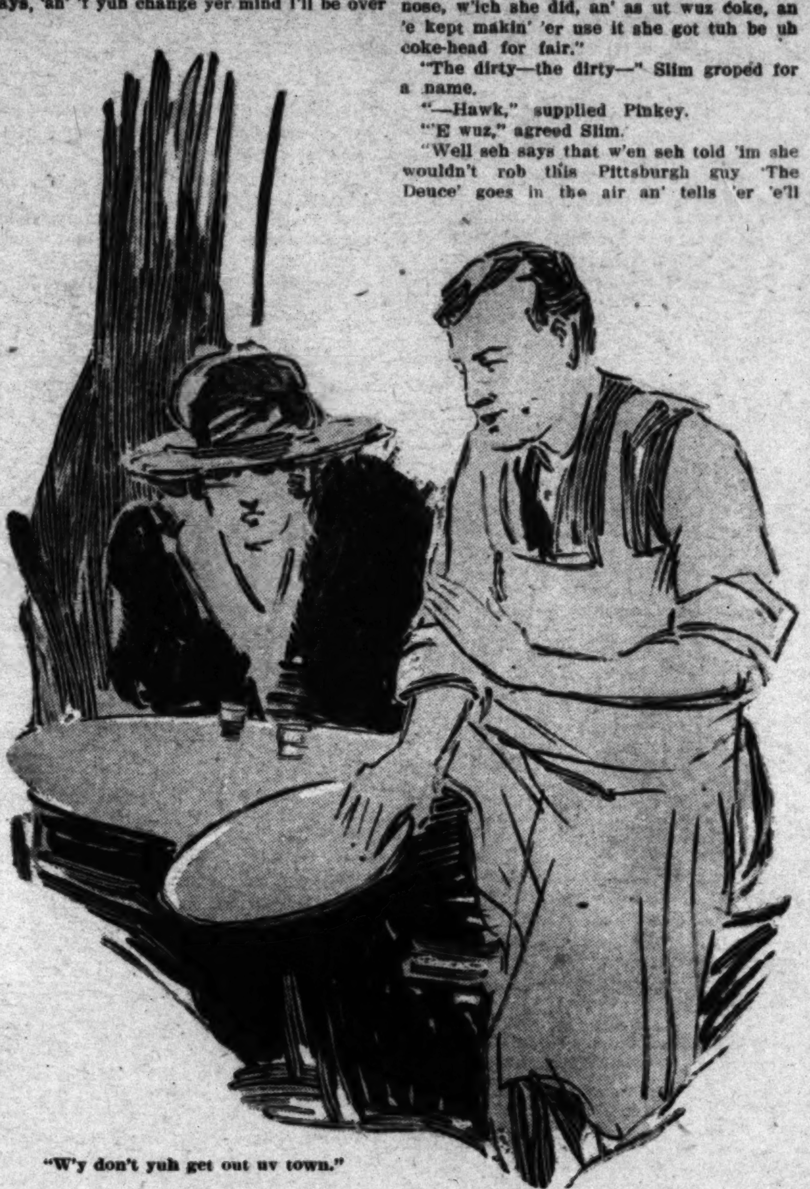
"'Cause 'e 'ad uh look on 'is map like uh big hawk I seen wunst in the Lincoln Park zoo in Chicago. I stood in front uv uh cage there wunst an' lamped uh bird wot uh sign says wuz uh hawk, an' uh little wild bird wot wuz flyin' aroun' the park lit on the fence by the cage an' when 'e did this hawk in the cage seemed tuh try tuh claw the bars off an get at 'im—"

"About uh week after 'The Deuce' first come intuh Frosty's dump I'm servin' uh souse party in one uh the boxes—some dame had uh guy buyin' 'er wine an' wen' I see wot uh souse 'e's got on I begin tuh slippin' 'im 'Champagne cider' wot cost me two-bits uh bottle, an' I wuz peddlin ut to the soak fer five bucks uh t'row an' splittin' ut wit' the dame."

"Purty soon the buzzer in the last booth begins tuh buzz an' I beats ut up tuh take the order an' who's sittin' there but 'The Deuce' wit' some young broad wot's all coked up (full of cocaine) an' about half shot wit' booze. Bo, she wuz gowed tuh uh million, an' wuz fairly leapin' wit' snow an' hooch," Pinkey spat disgustedly before he went on. 'W'en I took uh slant at 'The Deuce' 'e wuz lookin' at the dame like the hawk in Lincoln Park looked at the bird that day." Pinkey fished in his pocket for scrapin's and rolled a cigarette. When he had finished he went on:

"I brings 'The Deuce' an 'is dame two or t'ree rounds o' drinks, an' each time I come for the order they're bot' arguin' about sompin'. At last they have uh battle an' 'The Deuce' slams this dame in the jaw an' goes out. Just before 'e gets tuh the door 'e turns aroun' an' fairly spits at 'er:

"'F yuh don't listen tuh reason, I'll frame yuh an' get yuh sent up fer uh stretch,' he says, 'an' 'f yuh change yer mind I'll be over in Brooklyn at the joint.' Wit' dat," continued Pinkey, "'e rambles."



"W'y don't yuh get out uv town."

"After everything is quiet I breeze up tuh the booth an' there sits the dame jest lookin' at nuthin'—right straight ahead, an' 'er lamps glitterin' from the coke. I see she's jest took uh awful rare uv the stuff an' I ain't gonna take no chances wit 'er." Pinkey shook his head at Slim in a knowing way, and Slim observed:

"Uh snow-bird (cocaine fiend) is sure uh nut w'en they're lit up."

"This one wuzn't nutty," interrupted Pinkey. "She wuz in bad shape, though, an' w'en starts tuh pick up the glasses an' brush the table off she looks at me an' says:

"'Is all youse guys alike?'

"I dunno," I says. "W'y?"

"'Cause, if yuh is,' she says, 'I ain't gotta chance.'

"'How do you figger?' I asts 'er, an' w'en she looked up at me I cud see the snow she's been sniffin' shinin' on the end uv 'er nose, an', Slim, I sure felt sorry fer the poor broad."

Slim, after a thorough search through all his pockets, resurrected a dime, and called for two beers.

Pinkey seemed to be lost in reflection until Slim requested him to finish his tale.

"Well, the dame begin tuh tell me how she'd come intuh the 'Big Town' from some muskeeter inkybater out in Jersey, an' she says one day she met 'The Deuce' an' ut wuz the same old gag—she musta fell purty hard fer 'im cause 'e'd brought 'er down tuh the island tuh get a big gambler from Pittsburgh stewed an' then clean 'im. An' she tells me that w'ile she wud do anything fer 'The Deuce' even though 'e'd made uh hop-head an' everything else out uv 'er, w'en 'e sprung the crooked stuff on 'er she says 'Nix' an' e gets sore." Pinkey took a long drink of the beer before continuing:

"She says she begin' tuh use the coke about t'ree months before; this is how: One night 'The Deuce' brought 'er some 'cold remedy' an' told 'er tuh sniff ut up 'er nose, w'ich she did, an' as ut wuz coke, an 'e kept makin' 'er use it she got tuh be uh coke-head for fair."

"The dirty—the dirty—" Slim groped for a name.

"—Hawk," supplied Pinkey.

"'E wuz," agreed Slim.

"Well seh says that w'en seh told 'im she wouldn't rob this Pittsburgh guy 'The Deuce' goes in the air an' tells 'er 'e'll frame 'er if she don't agree by next day, an' 'e tells 'er tuh meet 'im in Brooklyn w'en she changes 'er mind

"Now, all the time she wuz tellin' me this," said Pinkey, "I'm t'rowin shot after shot o' booze intuh maself, out uv uh quart I'd glommed from back o' the bar early in the evenin' an' starts tuh get uh cryin' jag on."

Pinkey heaved a heavy sigh, drained his glass, and pursued:

"I asts 'er if she wanted tuh straighten up an' breeze this guy, 'The Deuce.' She kinda shook all over an' says: 'I ain't got the nerve.' I ast 'er 'W'y?' an she says, "Cause I'm leary uv 'im—'e'll sic ever' bull in New York on me.'

"'W'y don't yuh get out uv town?' I says.

"'Cause I never get enough dough together, but wot I get all coked up,' she answers me, 'an' w'enever I get uh yen (desire) fer the junk I gotta have ut.'

"By that time I wuz purty well soused, an' I had close tuh uh hundred bucks in me kicks. I'd bin short-changin' ever' stiff wot come in the dump an' then cleaned up about forty bucks on the phoney wine party, an' I'm damned if I didn't stake this broad tuh uh ticket tuh Denver. I went wit' 'er clean over tuh the Big Burg an' bought the pasteboard meself."

"Yuh poor simp," ejaculated Slim.

"Mebbe I wuz," answered Pinkey. "But wait until I finish. "W'en I woke up next day I tought somebody wuz usin' me dome fer uh boiler factory. The bottle uv hooch wot I'd gloomed wuz the 'bugs' bottle wot the bar-hop used tuh slip guys w'en they wud get loud, it wud put 'em tuh sleep. The bar-hop told me ut wus missin' an' w'en 'e tells me wot ut looked like I takes uh slant at the one I'd killed the night before, an' ut wuz the same one. I wus sure rum-dum, so I blows over tuh Hoboken an' goes way back out near the railroad yards, an' the more I t'ink uv slippin' that dame me bank-roll, the madder I get, an' I make up me mind tuh beat ut west, w'ich I did that night."

"Wot's all that got tuh do wit' yer new tights?" asked Slim, as he looked at Pinkey's trousers.

"This much," said Pinkey. "It's bin four years since I slipped that Jane me wealt' an' I've often wondered wot become uh 'er. This mornin' I goes out by Garvanza tuh see if I kin raise some kicks or uh pair uh strides an' I see uh dame buzzin-around in uh little garden, an' I goes up an' asts 'er if she's got any old clo'es. She 'ad on uh big sunbonnet an' I couldn't see 'er face very good, but she looks at me an' keeps sayin', 'I wunder—I wunder.' I can't dope out wot she's wunderin' about an' she keeps lampin' me, then she says, 'Yes. Come on up tuh the house an' I'll give 'em tuh yuh.'

"So we goes up tuh the shack an' she tells me tuh wait, so I sits down, an' she goes inside. All uf uh suddint she comes back wit' uh guy, she's got uh hold uv 'is mitt, an' she stands an' points at me, an' says tuh the guy:

"'This 'eer is the waiter wot slipped me the dough tuh come out 'ere wit,' from Noo York.'

"I looks at 'er an' then I remember the whole works. The guy grabs me lunch hook an' I t'ought 'e'd pump ut off, an' 'e's gonna slip me me century ($100) the first uv next month."

"Ut wuz the coke-head broad?" ventured Slim, expectantly.

"Ut wuz," answered Pinkey, "an' the guy wuz 'er hubby. An'" with a wink, "They's gonna be another party livin' wit' 'em purty soon, an' one uv its names is gonna be Pinkey,' he finished with a grin.

Government Arranges for Nitrate.

Owing to the high prices due to the demand in the manufacture of explosives, only a comparatively small amount of nitrate of soda was used for fertilization last year, and consequently the soils throughout the country have become depleted in nitrogen. To remedy this, the United States government has made arrangements for sufficient ntirate to supply farmers with that which they require at $81 per short ton at the point of loading, the farmer having to pay freight charges. Application blanks will be sent to county agents and local committees shortly, and distribution will be made through the Bureau of Markets, under the Food Control Act.

Three Fine Sons!

Mark that old man in the prison yard;
That old, old man with the snow-white hair,
Three fine sons in the world has he;
Three happy sons, all rich and free,
Each son high in Christianity,
With check-book, and law-book, and book
of-prayer.

One fine son is a business man;
Cunning and shrewd in his plans for gold;
Scheming and playing for power and fame,
Proud and serene in his own good name;
Contented and pleased with his selfish game,
Forgetting his father gray and old.

Another fine son is a worthy judge;
Secretly tickled with vanity,
Condemning judiciously things unclean,
Strutting about with dignified mien,
A living lie, both sharp and keen,
Plotting in law and piety.

The third son is a man of God,
Singing and praising the Bible plan;
Shouting his sermons from pulpit and stand,
A wonderful son, so holy and grand!
Teaching and preaching throughout the land,
With never a thought for a prisoner-man!

What would you give for these three fine sons?
Would you be proud in their worldly fame?
Riches and power and place have they,
Noble and holy from day to day,
Sweet and religious in every way,
Cloaked with the glory of God's good name!

Dear Father in Heaven — have You many
sons,
Like the sons of this father with snow-white hair?
For three fine sons in the world has he,
As three fine sons as ever could be,
Rotten and foul in hypocrisy,
With check-book, and law-book, and book-
of-prayer.
